Introduction

Strainbase is a research tool intended for use by cultivators of recreational and medicinal Cannabis. It should not be considered an inducement to engage in illegal activities. That is a personal decision best left up to the grower, his family, and his doctor after all pertinent legal and medical ramifications have been considered. Cannabis and humans have lived in a continuous symbiotic relationship for several thousand years, preceding the founding of most religions, all governments, and every law of prohibition. Cannabis is a living organism with every natural right to exist as any other living thing. It is to those who seek to preserve and improve this most unique and ancient of human cultivars that this document is dedicated.

History

Strainbase began in 1997 as my attempt to archive growers' reports on the seeming myriad of Cannabis strains that had suddenly become widely available throughout the world via the Internet. Credible information on many of these strains was severely lacking. Growers for the most part had only the seed dealers' catalog descriptions to go on. Too often those descriptions, even from the best seed companies, were long on hype and short on objective cultivation specifications.

The best information seemed to be coming from those home growers brave enough to post their experiences on the internet. At first their only resource was the newsgroup alt.drugs.pot.cultivation. Later came web-based discussion boards like HempBC, Cannabis.com, Weedbase, and Cannabis Edge. These new channels offered feedback on many of these strains from real growers working in real growroom environments. Many offered strain comparisons and heredity histories that were simply unavailable to the home grower anywhere else.

But the nature of these Internet discussion groups and web sites was transitory, especially in the early days. I first realized just how transitory when I was researching a Dutch strain called Top44. The seed dealer that marketed the strain had posted a web page with a lengthy and informative description of its cultivation characteristics and lineage. I bookmarked the page for later reference, only to find it gone a month later when I returned to it. Search as I might, I could not find that Top44 information. I resolved to begin archiving strain information so that this would not happen again.

Methodology

Any database requires a system of organization and classification. A good method of classification can provide as much information about an individual entry in the database as the entry data itself. Strainbase is classified by region of origin and breeding lineage. That is, strains are primarily organized by the region from which they were first bred, and secondly, by their genetic heritage. They are not organized by seed dealer or breeder. Strainbase incorporates seed dealer and seed bank descriptions, but it is not commercial seed catalog. This is by design, so as to cut through the catalog hype and more easily identify strains that are similar or only slight variants from each other.

The geographic classification is somewhat arbitrary in that Cannabis growers from the dawn of civilization have crossed the globe to find and exchange unique strains of the plant. So it could be said that all Cannabis strains have essentially the same region of origin, that of Indo-Asia, the area roughly encompassing Iran, Afghanistan, Pakistan, India, and Nepal. I have chosen the region in which a strain was first popularized and stabilized as its 'origin' for the purposes of Strainbase. Wild or open-pollinated strains that were essentially plucked whole from their native environments, such as Afghani and Durban, have been classified as originating from their native regions. Strains that are essentially refined versions of existing strains are classified under the region of origin of their predecessors, even though the refinements may have taken place half a world away.

Strainbase is the first serious and comprehensive attempt to document the heritage of commercial Cannabis strains. Establishing the record of lineage for these varieties is has become difficult as commercial breeders have taken an increasingly proprietary view towards this information. This attitude belies both a lack of imagination and lack of vision on the part of the established commercial seedbanks. Much of the heritage information is so jealously guarded by these companies because they feel the need to promote every new hybrid as a totally unique, never before seen variety. Too often, the truth is that this year's $200-a-pack Cannabis Cup winner is merely a refined cross of last year's $60-a-pack also-ran. Strainbase's heritage information is an attempt to focus growers and breeders on good genetics rather than good advertising. Commercial Cannabis breeding, while it has grown tremendously over the last 10 years, remains in its infancy as an industry, with few ethical standards. Without such a code of conduct, those breeders who dare offer credible information on their strains can put themselves at a commercial disadvantage to the hucksters and the knock-off artists. Yet by playing the hype game they also cheapen the value of their contributions as experienced breeders. To deny that a new strain has a direct lineage to Skunk #1 or Northern Lights not only robs the seed customer of important information but also devalues any contribution by the breeder in the selection and cross-breeding of the strain. Lineage information is not a recipe for creating a strain. Sensi Seed Bank's Jack Herer may be a cross of Northern Lights, Skunk and Haze, but no experienced grower assumes that if he crosses those three varieties he will create a hybrid exactly like Sensi's Jack Herer.

An analogy can be made to fine wine. Premium vintners don't worry about revealing the strains they use to create a particular bottle of wine, because they and their customers know that the quality of a particular label has as much to do with how the wine was made as what it was made with. There are too many other important factors that influence the final outcome beyond the variety of grape used. Thus, $6 bottles of Merlot sell side-by-side with $60 bottles of Merlot, and no experienced wine buyer considers them the same.

Fortunately, as the Cannabis seed breeding business matures, so are breeders' attitudes towards revealing lineage and cultivation information. This is most evident in the younger generation of boutique breeders that have come on the scene in the last two years. Breeders such as the Brothers Grimm, NCGA and BCGA are choosing to reveal the lineage of their strains because they have come to understand that such information is good for the customer, and thus good for business. Moreover, in revealing the heritage of their crosses they are putting their breeding skills in the forefront, and moving away from the concept that a strain's genetic 'recipe' is its most valuable asset. In so doing they are creating premium varieties of established strains, some of which like the Grimm's Cinderella or NCGA's Blue Widow, are already legends in their own time. By adopting a open attitude towards their breeding projects they are highlighting the true source of value in their strains- the refined judgement, skill, patience and instincts of the experienced breeder. These are qualities no huckster or knock-off artist can replicate with a simple recipe.

The Origins of Indicas

In the 60's we brought seed back from Afghanistan and it was a pretty mixed bunch. The shorter, what you might now call indica type was what was used to make bulk cheap grade hash for export and depending on the valley it came from had a finish time 8.5 to 10 weeks and a height of 5 ft to 8 ft but all wide dark leafed. Higher up the slopes nearer the snow line was the wild indigenous sativa type, which was rubbed to make finger hash for local consumption. All these were fully seeded and being a wind pollinated plant to some degree mongrels. The high slope C sativa L types survived via nature being able to grow through the snow and stand frost and are also common in Pakistan Kashmir northern India Nepal and Bhutan just below the snow line. The short wide leafed phenotype [different with every farmer] is rogued for slim leafed plants and selected for large resinous colas so all this business of knowing an Afghan phenotype is a load of cobblers its just a mongrel strain that someone has selected. I suspect that that it was a fairly resent import as it wouldn't have been grown if it wasn't for the demand for hash in the west, whatever a Sadu certainly wouldn't smoke it if there was real Afghani available.

On Sativas

What makes a sativa difficult from a commercial point of view is that a typical sativa grows to be 5'-8' tall without much encouragement, well beyond what is desirable for sea of green or mass cuttings technique. A finished sativa takes up 4 - 8 times the volume of space of a tight compact sativa for the same yield. It typically takes a fine sativa 10 - 16 weeks of flowering versus 6 - 9 weeks for an indica, almost 100% more. Thus a Golden Triangle Thai sativa or a Hawaiian Sativa ounce is worth probably four times more than the compact indica, at least it would require that to induce growers to commercially crop a sativa. We know no one pays $1,000 CN an ounce (four times typical ounce price in Vancouver) or $1,500 US an ounce (4 times US ounce price for mid-grade Sensi indoor) for any sativa, no matter how fine, so the sativa pot is never on the market. If you want to experience a fine Thai sativa, it will never be sold to you (unless you are visiting Thailand), you must grow it yourself.

My favorite, with reasonably good yields, is the Hawaiian Sativa, requiring 85 - 90 days of flowering, but produces good sized buds and does not stretch out of control. The Golden Triangle Thai sativa requires 90 - 95 days of flowering. Both are energy inducing, buzz n' crackle, kinds of high. Great for activity or jobs requiring mental alertness. Of course, amongst friends, a sativa is very prized because there is no possible way to find this sativa otherwise.

Prior to 1978, what pot was grown in North America was limited to below the 38th parallel, about the tip of Northern California on down south into Mexico, which is still the world's largest producer of pot by nation, outdoor anyway, and it was all sativa. Once the indicas were brought back by American tourists to their homes in North America, within 7 years, sativas were almost gone from the growing landscape, because indicas clearly are favored by their efficiency.

The indica crosses by Federation I favor would be with Mikado (indica, 45 days, powerful, aphrodisiac) and Island Sweet Skunk (Sweet Pink Grapefruit indica crossed Big Skunk#1 from Sensi circa 1992, so its 35% sativa, trippy, alert, cerebral yet strong stone with a very sweet citrusy scent.) - Marc Emery

I have attempted many hydro grows but this girl took to water like a fish and exceeded all my expectations (Now I know why BOG calls himself the Bubblegum Guru). At first site these girls can be quite breath taking and the quality of the final product is one to be reckoned with. This strain is without a doubt one that will be kept as a mother I expect many generations from her along with many years of euphoric happiness.

My seeds where purchase through www.goldenseeds.co.uk they where real professionals I had one pack delayed and they sent me a pack of Jack frost as an apology (though it was only a day later than what they expected 7 days in total) I don't know what this strain is but my buddy offered me every bean he had for them, so they must be worth something I think I will spout a few and see what they can do. I will deal with this company again they seem to have a fair selection with some home breeders of their own. All in all I would rate my experience with www.goldenseeds.co.uk at an 8 and the beans from Serious Seeds a 9 but that is just me. My germination rate was almost 100% after 3 days I had little new additions to my Kab family.

The over all final tallies of dried smoke was close to 4.5 Oz, my mother plant has gotten to a height of 5ft and I think I will keep her there just keep topping her. All in all with proper caring, grooming and nutrients you will find yourself with that one plant that can cover that hole you have in you Kab, I know I did.

The night I took my cured buds out was the night my first child was born (beautiful baby boy) need less to say it was not cigars we where passing out. I would have to say after watching all my friends smoke and the happiness I felt this from this joyous day, girl has earned herself her rightful place and will never have to challenge for her seat.

White Rhino are very healthy and sturdy plants. The only thing I could add is they don't take much nutes. I only use organics. But Leaf burn is there on some leafs. I've tried to back off and then fert again. I usually nute every other watering but on the White Rhino's maybe every third would do.

They are starting to really smell. I have good air flow thru the flower room to the outside. But upon getting close to these babies they smell worse than any strain I've grown since bagseed. They smell of sweet fresh flowers. They actually smell like I'm in a florist shop.

I have no problems whatsoever with this strain. Nirvana couldn't have an easier strain to grow. That leaf nute burn issue never became a problem.

First up is my largest sativa phenom rhino it will be the largest yielder hard nugs and frosty as hell. The White Rhino was harvested at 57 days. Trics cloudy and pistols 70%.White Rhino's have tight hard frosty buds. They smell like an evergreen tree. But curing will change that.

The Appearance is of a two toned brown and green. The bud leaves are green and the calyxes are a tan and brown color. These buds are shiny from trichomes and very very sticky. When you break these buds apart it sticks to itself. When you pull it apart the buds are so tight that you must pull it apart, then pull that apart, then pull that apart, you get the idea. It's endless. When you finish pulling the bud apart you will have some nice finger hash to scrape off your fingers. Let me tell you it slows down the typing of this report.

The Smell is of a pine forest, a very light piney smell. Smells just like Lysol Bathroom cleaner. but not obnoxious.

I must tell you that I smoke joints. So in a joint this weed burns very slow and hard to keep light. It is very resinous and coats the cigarette paper with black tar as it burns. Don't get me wrong it burns well while you're tokin but stop for a while and it goes out.

The Taste test; I'm smoking a joint of this right now and what comes to mind is piney.

Light semi-smooth but not very expansive. You cannot hold this in for long. The piney taste will cause you to exhale sooner than you would like. It reminds me of Super Silver Haze. It has a very strong taste somewhat harsh and you just can't hold the smoke in for long. It leaves a pine cough drop residual on your tongue which is not unpleasant if you like cough drops.

The High When I smoked my first joint of it. It passed my sticky test, my burn test and my taste test but here I was trying to decide on the high. Then it hit me. It hit me HARD.

This is truly one of the creeper strains. The high takes you over in about ten minuets. And you get light headed. I actually get a positive sativa inspired high. Also I feel waves of body high flowing through my body. The waves start in my gut and flow right up to my head and feed the head high more strength. WOW it's a double edge sword. This stuff is potent! Why for $15 it's a steal. The high lasts a long time and if you smoke too much your eyelids will keep attempting to meet. I highly recommend this strain to newbie and old-timers alike. The yield is there the potency is there and it's very easy to grow. I will grow it again.

Buds formed in a Christmas tree shape but were slow to fill out and then remained quite airy even under two 400 W lights. I grew NL x Shiva at the same time as this one and the buds on those girls were big and much tighter.

Harvest and smoke:

Yield was a bit below what I would have liked, but quite respectable. This bud had very little aroma or taste. The stone was okay. It was an all around buzz, but kind of had a wet blanket feeling to it. Just not my cup of tea.

Conclusion:

I was quite disappointed with this strain. Although it was easy to grow and looked pretty good, the poor taste and wet blanket stone was a real let down. I am growing my mother's out and will not be growing this strain anymore.

Update:

I felt I was a bit harsh on this strain so I had a few friends do a smoke report for me. They all thought the White Rhino had a very good stone and they didn't really mind the mild, almost weedy taste. In all, 2 people thought it was so-so and the rest REALLY liked it. I would consider growing this again if I had a medical application for it.

Well im just a dirt farmer but I must say this strain grows like crazy a monkey can grow this. Germed 4 beans out of 4 3 out of 4 females. The pistols are covered with trics can get really snowy in the later part of flower. If you like Indica this is the one to have.

The stone is a lost Stone very hard to keep thought on one thing for any amount of time. Something ive noticed is if you have any work that needs done it wont get done, thats what ive noticed this is a PM smoke for shure. Out of a bowl its hard on the old lungs, but in a bong very nice. Everyone I know that has smoked this tells me its almost to strong:)

Grower Report
June, 2003

I got this strain because of all the great things one reads about it. First of all the potency and it's ability to function as a painkiller.

Veg:

I started 4 seeds, don't remember if it was me or the seeds, but out of those 2 germinated.

In veg these plants were nothing unusual.

Normal growth, slightly purple stems which seem to be a trait of this strain.

Not much to say about growth really...

Preflowers showed rather early.

WR is also an easy cloner, due to lots of good branches I had a good base to start from.

They all rooted.

Not much to say about growth apart from that, pretty normal.

Flower:

In flower the one female I got started to stretch, like I expected it to, considering its sativa dominance. Wasn't too bad at all tho, just a bit more than the indica dominant plants in the system.

Buds looked very unique, dark green and very compact.

They didn't start swelling for a long time, when the others had already finished budding, this one took of. Not as much as expected tho.

I harvested this one at day 60. Smell was very fruity at that time, the buds were covered in resin.

The buds I harvested were very compact; in fact I was not able to squeeze them at all... great product.

Smoke:

The final product looks greenish brown, the buds are incredibly compact and sticky, are broken up easily (with a grinder), and smoke perfectly smooth in a joint.

Many describe the high as very strong, but I don't really agree. Haven't smoked enough to really be able to tell, but compared to my AK48 it doesn't stay in your body for hours and keep you flying.

It's more of a stoney, mellow high which numbs your body.

The buds smell like citrus cleaner, the smoke is a bit sour, kinda like NYCD.

Opinion:

The WR is ok in all aspects, the only things I was disappointed by a bit: I expected it to be more potent than the AK, but obviously they are very different and the AK is generally stronger.

What I liked was the apparently small yield which turned out to be above average due to the bud's density.

July, 2004

Well this was the first time I have grown Nirvana White Rhino or any breeder's White Rhino for that matter. I have grown indoors before (SAGE x Rhino plus others) and have had some successful crops that keeps my supply up. The grow started a little later than planned as I had a screw up! The original plan was to clone some SAGE that I had but I baked them by accident. No fans for one night and it cooked the newly rooted clones!

I followed my usual pattern of starting the seeds in cubes, and then dropping directly into their full size to maturation container (4.5g). Seeds germed quickly (2 days or less) and all sprouted. None were lost due to mortality of seed failure.

I vegged under 18/6 for 6 weeks from seed and they went to about 8" on average excluding my single runt. Used 400w HPS bulb for both veg and flower (my 400w MH could not be used, in addition to HPS, this late in the year due to heat issues). Watered daily and fert every 3rd watering at full strength throughout except for last few weeks (flush). Flowered for 8 weeks (57 days) at 12/12 and decreasing to 10/14 for the last two weeks. Also added Monsta Bud per their directions during both Veg and Flower which seemed to show some positive results.

Smoke Report

I harvested at 57 days 12/12 with the last 36 hours of complete darkness. The harvest was a bit early but I had some out of town vacation planned and nobody to babysit - again back to the screw up as the cause! I let them hang to dry for 4 days before performing final pruning and cleanup then put some in a baggy, packed the rest away and went on vacation. I ended up with 8.3oz of dried and clean buds. The smaller & less trich covered buds along with the bud trim I did not weigh and put aside for some ice later on. The buds are sticky but not too stinky either. There is quite a covering of trichs on all of the buds.

The taste is an earthy, hash type taste. Not the 7-up taste but a good tasty smoke overall though. I also find it is not a lung collapser which is a good thing. The high is quite good. I have had better but I have to keep in mind I harvested a week early maybe up to two. I don't find it to be a couchlock stone but defiantly a getup and go type smoke for me anyhow. Also find you can get trippin' and really forget what the hell you were doing!

Overall a good quality smoke, no hassle to grow and a breeze overall! I will grow it again, as a matter of fact I have a 10-seed pack on standby for a future grow! Next time I will do a bit better time planning and ensure I can let them go to the very bitter end to get the best yield, taste and trich development.

Good plant. I only started 2 or 3 seeds, and got 1 female. She grew great. Cloned easy, and was not fussy about nutes. I had no problem growing her, and the grow room was all about problems until almost 5 weeks flowering. Grew nice fat nugs. Buds on sticks. Just one fat nug at the end of a branch, and a fat awesome looking mail cola. LOTS of Trichomes, you could see the widow coming out.

The high was mostly indica. Couch look for sure. Might have given a better score for buzz if I liked indicas more, but I'm kinda a sativa guy. The taste was a bit lacking, if you ask me, but maybe it just had not cured long enough. Not sure, the taste was just kind of generic too me. Not a lot of smell tell you broke up a bud, then it was a ripe fruit, and a sweet, and sour skunky kinda smell. Bag appeal was grate. I would have gave it a 10 if the buds were a bit more solid.

I germinated 2 seeds, both took in 3 days, and I got one male one female. Vegged for 2 months to just over 3 feet tall. the plant only grew another foot till it stopped about 3 weeks into bloom. the plant finished just under 4 feet. Nice sticky buds loaded with resin, tones of red hairs, covered in crystals, and a top cola that was dam near an Oz. I'm defiantly gonna keep this strain going, and recommend it to all my friends!

Placed one White Rhino seed in wet paper towel on 8 May 2004. You may say this is a risk to get a female but the reason is because I have "tried" to grow WR before and used 3 seeds from the same pack and I ended up with 3 males that time. So I thought that statistically the first seed that I'll take out of the pack should be most probably female.

Anyway, I planted the sprouted seed into a small pot on 11 May 2004. I vegged the WR till 11 July 2004 and took 6 cuttings from her. I'm saying "her" because after 2 months of veg she already showed her pre-flowers (tiny pistils).

After 10 days of cloning (rock wool + humidity dome + clonex + love) I got 5 healthy rooted clones (one didnt make it). I placed the clones in my 3 bucket DWC system (2 plants per bucket). I have vegged them for another 2 weeks to get them used to the new environment and based on previous grow reports about WR I waited them to grow at least 18 inches. Later I realised that I shouldnt vegged them that long in DWC because they have stretched like hell!

After extended efforts of tying, pruning, bending, squizing them I managed to fit them in my rather small grow box. I know I have torched them alot but I had to do. Many of the lower buds couldnt even got enough light and here and there I have observed starting of bud-rot.

The smell during veg was not that much but later in flowering it became a bit of a problem but I managed to airate my room frequently and with the help of some car air freshner.

I pulled down the majority of the branches on 30 September 2004 at Day 52 of flowering. I have watched the trichs turn into cloud and some were becoming amber. There were only 50% red hairs but I decided to go by the microscope. I know they could have gone for at least a week but didnt wanted the famous "couchlock of White rhino". I have left the lower branches for another week and cut them down. All of the buds was covered with crystals which I always enjoy and expect from a strain. I had some nice scissor hash after the trimming and manicuring process as a reward!

Anyway, because of these un-planned things I ended up with less weight I was planning but managed to fill 2 large mason jars after drying. They are still under curing process but I've already started consuming them...

Ok, the smoke report; May be its because I pulled the girls down a bit early or may be the phenos I got was a bit sativa oriented (un-controllable stretch!) I avoided the couchlock effect of WR. There is still the body buzz though which I love. The high is really twisting my perception of the environment which, again, I love most. I have smoked many hazes so I know the sativa high, I can say that my WR harvest became "close" to that level and taste. I'm really satisfied with this harvest in all aspects. Really worth the $15. Highly recommending this strain from newbies to advanced growers.

Mites didn't have much effect on her, almost destroyed my other ones, but WR resisted like nothing, thick leaves, hard to damage.

Grower Report

May, 2005

First of all, people say you are getting a bang for your buck when you grow out White Rhino, and BELIEVE me that is so true. The stuff is so strong and clean that you know some great genetics are in there. So I have to tip my hat to Nirvana for making some amazing strains the average grower can afford.

I vegged my two white rhinos for 5 weeks under a 400 watt MH in my C22. The white rhino were great. Very tight internode spacing and they had alternating internodes about a week earlier than my other plants. I topped one of the rhinos and the other I tried a half assed job of LST-ing. I had two phenotypes of Rhino. Pheno 1: was more indica, and the other who stretched a lot more was obviously more sativa.

I ended up flowering for 64 days for pheno 1 and 66 days for pheno 2. I was looking for some amber trichs maybe 10% before I pulled it. Flowering was also very easy. I was hitting them with 4 tsps of tiger bloom every three days or so and then a flush every week. They seemed to eat up the nutes. I never got any leaf burn. Pheno 1 had a club shaped bud structure, and never formed a long cola, more like a lot of seperate bud sites, with heavy nuggets on them. The buds had beautiful crystallly dark green color to them, and VERY DENSE! Nice caramel colored pistils. As they dried they kept this beautiful appearance. Pheno 2 had more christmas tree shped buds and had more wispy type buds, but still very beautiful.

The trichs on these buds are amazing. As they turn opaque they swell up to this massive size. The buds are literally covered in them like a blanket. I guess that is why they call it "white" rhino.

High: Definetly a creeper. You tend to puff on it thinking you aren't getting high and then you blast off. The physical aspect is really intense. Both my friend and I had parts of our body going numb. My hands were so numb that I had to concentrate to hand my menu to the waitress. I didn't find the high intellectual like I have with most sativas, but it wasn't a stupid high either. Its more of a euphoric high, where you are really able to enter a space with whoever you are with and enjoy that experience. It felt liek the noise level in the bar was turned down. Like a television set or something. With the background numbed, it was easier to make desicions or evaluate what was most important to engage in at any given moment.

Smoking this weed was also the first time in a long time that I was uncomfortably high, where I felt like I was too high. That was when I driving on the freeway and was convinced the huge mac truck next to us was surely going to sideswipe us. But that seemd to pass really quickly and then settle into the euphoric high I just described.

It definetly has staying power. A few hits and I was good for hours. This is grade A weed. I think everyone should grow it out.

I grew 2 WR plants. One was a monster of a grower. A pure beast that could've, and would've, taken over the cab if I had let it. It had sativa indications and seemed to never want to stop stretching. The other WR was a more indica type plant. It grew strong, and tall, but never really grew beyond its area. Both plants shared space with an Ice plant.

I tend towards underfeeding and the plants seemed to do fine with a light mixture. This was my first grow in a C13 setup and with a proper hydroponic DIY system and the plants fared well giving me few problems. Any problems encountered they quickly bounced back from once the problem was fixed. For some reason my plants didn't show pre flowers even though they were vegged for a couple of months or so.

Both WR plants were harvested with an eye towards a headier high. Harvested when the trichs were more cloudy than amber I have to say the effects are pretty intense. Smoking is very creative inducing and if I can actually get the inerita up to do things I'll tend to find myself getting through long tasks easily and with a smile. I do get pretty tired towards the end of the high, but if I do take a nap, I can be up and about again in 40minutes without a problem.

The smoke is very strong, and after using a water cure method the smell is good tea smell. It burns easily, and so far my girlfriend enjoys having sex on it. All in all I say a very good choice and highly recommended to try for any Nirvana curious.

This grow was a lot messy for me, because it was my first serious grow. I started 5 seeds of Skunk baseball bat and 3 out of 5 were females. Cloned the best mother. Veged the 3 mothers and the clone for almost 12 weeks and flowered them for 65 days. 2 mothers were ripened first of the others (about the 40th day) and a last mother and the clone were ripened at the 65th.

Zambian Copper from African Seeds

From: African Seeds

Source Description

Zambian_cooper.jpg Like the metal that gave Zambia its life blood, Zambian copper gave the country its character Grown widely across the plateau regions of the copper belt, this is a substrain similar to Malawi but faster flowering. Large branched plants, darker foliage, buds laden with white/red tipped hairs, very large resin coated seed pouches (calyx). Strong Kick-Ass high similar to Malawi. Does better in cooler outdoor areas than the Malawi Gold.

I germed 4 seeds, all sprouted within 48 hours and when planted grew fast with no problems, under the fluros for 12 days then they went under the 400w MH for veg.

I didn't have any problems in veg and they grew quite vigorously, topping at the 3rd node twice for 4 top colas, allowing the 4 lower branches from the 1st an 2nd node to grow up to the same height as the top soon to be colas.

These plants are very tolerant of ferts, these got full strength nutes after a week in veg and they just sucked it all up, 1 plant showed a tiny spot of burn but nothing to bother about, these 4 plants spent 19 days vegging under the MH growing to 10" - 13" (varied) before bieng triggered.

Once triggered they don't seem to stretch much in the first 5 days, but after they got themselves together they rocketed, showing sex at 10 - 12 days, 2 turned out to be males and they got the chop leaving just the 2 females, by 14 days in they were already around 30" tall, and they'd only just got started, trust me these things STRETCH like fuck, taking in full strength nutes again in flower they shot up and ended up around 55" - 60" tall, but it's easy to manage...by that I mean I: snapped it, bent it, burnt it, tied it and no matter what you do to it to manage it, it just keeps on smiling, trust me, this stuff really is a WEED!

To demonstrate how much these bitches stretch during flower, I've posted the pictures in order from just before triggering to harvest time to give you an idea of what to expect from this Sativa and how quick they shoot up, pics were taken every 5 days or so.

The first plant looked to have more indica traits than the second, which looked pure sativa and no mistake, with little 'foxtails' everywhere, you can see in the pictures of the grow the difference if you look closely, how dense the more indica looking plant is, compared to the pure sativa plant.

I fed them 2 feeds with nutes, 1 without nutes continuous up until 45 days, then flushed for 5 days, adding the PK 13 - 14 at around 50 days before flushing the rest of the way.

In the end the more compact (indica looking) plant finished at 73 days, 80% red hairs and the trichs nice and cloudy, but the second plant took

90 days to finish and could have gone longer too, but I already liked the look of her as she was and hacked her.

I hung the first one up for 14 days then chopped off all the bud and cured for a further 14 days on foil in a low temp/humidity room and put it all in tubs/jars for a further 3 weeks or so, but the 90 day plant was left hanging for 23 days, then chopped off the bud and put it straight into tubs for another 24 days, but the results for this strain are wierd...

With this strain curing has got to be at LEAST 6 - 7 weeks, and I'll tell you why, as I cured it i checked it daily (smoked for potency) from 4 weeks on, and it was nice, but it was only mild, I could smoke 1 joint after another and still want more thinking I'm building up a tolerance....BUT all that changes at about 7 weeks curing, it's like a switch a has been flicked, one day it's a nice mild smoke, then the next....WALLOP, both of them were the same in terms of curing for ages and then out of the blue it just kicks in.

The high of this weed is different to say the least, well to me it is anyway, the 73 day plant was pretty trippy, and at one point felt like I was on poppers, head pounding, along with my heart, body buzz, quite intense, but pleasant, but the 90 dayer was all in the head, hardly any body buzz at all and the high lasts for a good 2 - 3 hours, more of a daydreamer weed, but still trippy, good daytime smoke.

Overall this strain is very nice, with pretty good yields, I ended up with 2 - 2 1/2 oz each plant which I think is good for a Sativa, bearing in mind that they were under 1x400w sharing with 4 other plants in soil but if you want to grow this strain yourself, then you need the patience, and the ROOM to do it.

I germ 8 LH seeds indoors last Oct, overall 7/8 germ rate. Vegged for 7 plus weeks then went 12/12 and finished with 5 females flowered for 65 days. 3 phenos: 2 ind/sat, 2 sat/ind and 1 sat dom.

Ind/Sat .

Very little stretch in flowering. Lots of budding sites. Healthy vigorous leaf growth throughout especially toward the bottom portion of plant. Smaller top cola with tight heavy buds. Lots of resin, very sticky buds. Aroma is all candy store goodness. Kinda like a mixture of cotton candy and bubblegum (I just wonder if any of these are in parentage as Almighty give no details on seed makeup). Taste is mildly spicy with traces of holiday spices and fruit flavored bubblegum. Potency is good, with a multi-faceted high that is thought enabling, smile inducing and with just a hint of body. Very mellow but also steady and sure when the need arises.

Sat/Ind.

Much more sat in this pheno: longer branches, well-spaced internodes and longer thinner leaves. Not as vigorous as the ind/sat, with much more of the overall leaf growth concentrated towards top of the plant. Medium sized main cola with high calyx / leaf ratio. Some other bud sites located mainly on middle portion of plant with good-sized tight flowers. No shortage of resin on the sticky crystal covered buds. Smell is hazier with a hint of fuel and some ripe grapefruit in the mix. Taste goes from savory spice to some mint effects present on the exhale. Now the real sativa high is evident in this pheno: speedy, energetic, and cerebral with rapid thought development and just enough trippiness to know you are high. Again more intense than the ind/sat pheno but always confident enough to deal with most situations.

Sat Dom.

Typical sativa growth characteristics: long branches and thin fingerlike leaves following a tall plant structure. I thought this 5-foot plus plant would never bud. After 4 weeks she finally showed some pistils and impressed me the most by the weight increase in the final weeks before harvest. Most growth was centered on the top cola. A very hazy musky greasy smell noticeable from the buds. Tell tale signs of strong haze influence in this pheno. Smell not very sweet compared to others. Clear clean high which makes your heart pound faster after you toke. Good for concentration or problem analysis: your mind is really ticking over on this one! Most intense sativa rush of the trio; never debilitating with nary a trace of the noids.

Overall, one of the better strains I have grown. I love the taste and positive high above all else. Yield was a little over 4 oz from the five ladies. Not the greatest yielder around but a little more bud than I expected at the start. Healthy, vibrant growth with no def problems. The plants took all the organic ferts I gave them and never showed any problems . But what stands out most is the high, which is upbeat positive with a smooth comedown and no burnout. Not a couchlock strain by any means.

I definately liked what I saw when I read the Almighty Seeds' description of their Sensitron. Jack Herer x Sensi Ster- are you kidding. Got a 10 pack and put down 4 seeds in to the soil. Three popped and all were female. I grew them alongside some Reeferman Royal Hawaiian that were planted the same day and the Tron just flat outgrew the RH. Leaves were long, thin, and sativa looking. She loved the organic guanos both throughout veg and flower. I tied them down and they bushed out nice. Harvest 7-10 fat colas per plant. Breeder said flower would be 9-11 weeks, but I don't think I went over 8 on the last one. The first two were taken at 6.5 and 7.5 weeks. They were already starting to sport some amber triches in all 3 cases. I hung for 5-6 days then paper sacked them for a few more, then 2/3 of the crop went to mason jars. They are still there after 3 weeks. The taste is great- citrusy almost sour grapefruit-like. Although these plants appeared quite sativa, the stone is pure couch-lock indica. Very nice. You need to smoke this when you don't have anything to do for a few hours. Great for pain, great for movies. I highly recommend this strain. It is more powerful than anything else I've grown.

This was a great strain to grow! I grew these indoors in my homemade hydroponic system (flood and drain). I had about a 60% f:m ratio and 4 out of 6 were indica dom. These were the best yielders and were the most potent giving off a fairly strong berry scent. The more sativa dom. had a scent of pepped and did not yield very well! I veged for about 3 weeks and flowered for 63 days. Out of the 6 females, 2 turned a beautiful purple and had a great berry flavor and awesome bag appeal! Most plants yielded around an OZ. I did grow 1 female outdoors this summer and she yielded close to 2 OZ's. Buds are nice and dense and loaded with crystals, I cloned my best 2 females and got 100% survival in about 10-14 days! I plan on keeping her around for awhile. I did find a few male sacks, but I think they were innocent. Thanks BC bud!

Has a fruity smell when flowering. Not as vigorous at the beginning as C99, but comes on strong in flowering. It's mainly a columnar plant, but takes to topping nicely.

I find it doesn't like its feet wet, or its roots cramped.

Most auto flowered on me at around 6 or 7 weeks. Cloning when this happens is almost impossible. I would suggest to anyone cloning this plant, to use some form of hydro, to keep the vegetative growth rate speed up.

The flavor after a week of curing, reminded me of Lucky Charms cereal. The high is mellow, and I find it to be a good medicine herb. One where you want to relieve pain, without the hard crash. It does make you sleepy, but if smoked in the morning, you won't pass out, and you can still function, but in mellow style, which is really nice. It took about 10 minutes to really kick in before I noticed anything really. The high, or should I say the peak isn't all that long, but the mellowness last for hours.

Has great trichome production (just oozes all over), and flowering is around 50-56 days. Has moderate stretching when flowering is induced, but nothing bad, or out of control. Very easy to grow.

Potency is 7.0 - 7.5, and yield is slightly above average.

Overall I give it a 7.5 - 8.0, if cloning was easier without the auto flowering, and was a smidgen more longer lasting, I would give it a higher score. I really enjoyed it though, and would grow it again. Very nice overall, and most would be happy with it.

1.... 5 gallon buckets w/net pot and Hydroton. 2 airstones in each bucket. Botanicare nutes. These plants where put through the ringer as we were selling our home at the time which required them to be moved a "couple" times. But remained hardy. 50% female (12 seeds started, 6 females) an avg. bloom wattage of 2000. The plants where allowed to veg for about 40 days (after sexing). They varied from a squat, thick, bushy 3 ft. (from top of bucket) to a straggly 5 footer.

Plant goes into a HEAVY autoflower. However, it is a quick and easy cloner.

2.... Coliseum grow. 300site. Vertical SOG style grow. 2000watt veg/ 3000watt bloom. This is a specialized system that requires some experience. Therefore while my yield of just under 1 gram per watt is less than avg. or so I'm led to believe. Anyway... B&B, was a big surprise SOG winner. While I let most plants mistakingly overgrow, the few that remained one single cola plumped up nicely.

Conclusion... These were my first solo indoor grows. I found B&B to be newbie friendly. Didn't complain when over/under fed. Remained robust in high/low temps and humidity...

BCGA's Space Queen (Romulan X C99) is fairly easy to grow and is a wonderful smoke. I am very impressed with the quality of this strain. I germinated 6 seeds and ended up getting 3 females. Two phenos were very similar, while one was slightly different. All three phenos were mostly C99 dominant though. The plants had about 75% C99 in them and 25% Romulan from the looks of them and the way they smoked.

The yield was average to slightly above average. She should yield 2 ounces per plant consistently under a 1000w vegged for 6 weeks. The buds are fairly dense for a Sativa dominant plant. Very nice sized chunks. She is a branchy plant and can put on some weight on the side branches. Doesn't stretch much at all for a Sativa/Haze dominant plant. They all finished in about 55-60 days. Pretty quick for a Haze hybrid.

The high is great and is very potent. It definitely has the up Sativa/Haze high and the high is mostly in the head. Similar highs as Super Silver Haze and Jack Herer or most Haze dominant plants. Very cerebral. Some pressure on the eyes and some heavy eyelids. Pretty functional high and great to smoke during the day when you need to get stuff done. Slight edge to the high though with some slight paranoia. Definitely gets your heart racing a bit and is maybe not the most social high. Not overly edgy though and definitely less edgy and intense than Super Silver Haze when comparing it to other Haze dominant strains.

Cinderella 99 from Brothers Grimm

From: Brothers Grimm

Source Description

*bcgodbudthum.jpg*This strain may be the "Holy Grail". The result of painstakingly backcrossing a very rare female to her male progeny over 3 generations. This hybrid was specifically bred for indoor cultivation. Short-statured & heavily branched, this plant grows long, dense colas with an extremely high flower/leaf ratio and outrageous resin production. The breeder has observed a "giant leap" in potency with each progressive generation and, as expected, Cinderella 99 has topped all previous results - her high is heavily influenced by Haze; clear, energetic & devastatingly psychoactive.

Grower Report

June, 2002

Flo is a tremendous strain that was really fun to grow. Flo is a very quick flowering strain for such a heavy sativa buzz.

Flo can be taken from anywhere from like 43-55 days depending on personal preference. One of Flo's real strengths is the clear headed buzz. I think you could talk a buzzard off a shit wagon from 20 paces with this strain its so clear in the head.

I mean you can do anything and still be sharp as a tack while being ripped at the same time. Flo also puts you into the best moods aswell as its a real attitude changer if your having a crappy day.

Flo also displays some of the nicest colors you'll ever see on a cannabis plant as everything from the calyx to the leaves change colors. I did find that the pheno that didn't change color was my favorite and best tasting. The crystal content is also right there with any of the heavyweight strains.

All in all Flo is a very fine lady that I highly recommend to newbies and experienced growers alike but just go a little easy on the nutes with her. Once again I would like to thank DJ Short for another GREAT and UNIQUE strain as you are the top of your profession.

I started five seeds using paper towel method, all five split open within 36 hours in the moist paper towels.

Seeds placed in 16 oz. styrofoam cups filled with pro mix bx blend.

Two of the five grew with more vigor than others, right from the start.

these turned out to be male.

The other three displayed weird leaves.....twisted and curved strangely.

All three were slower growing...one of which was puny and twisted, I considered killing the runt, but was happy that I did not, because this slow growing plant turned out to be the only female of the five.

The runt eventually started to grow and flower with strength.

The plant was flowered under artificial outdoor method.....

seedlings grown under flores for week or so and then moved outdoors and put into direct sunlight for most of day. Vegged for about a month, after which plant was placed in total darkness for 12 hours(indoors). On rainy or very cloudy days plant was put under 600W HPS.

Great tasting buds when cured after a few months...some of the yummiest deep and pungent, earthy tasting buds I haver ever tried. Very strong distictive flavor.

The high is up and cerebral with some narcotizing influence after very heavy indulgence. Not too potent, nice action inducing buzz.

If not for the strange and freaky nature of the genetics -(and relative price).

would grow again, but too many other strains I havent tried are more worthy of inclusion in future grows.

I grew out 4 Blue Goo plants, 2 total runts and 2 ok ladies. One turning out to be super, outdoors of course. The 2 runts were left in a corner to receive 5 hours sun or so while the other got full exposure growing fast, one of the fastest. A sturdy plant, held up to major wind. The male I never really bothered about. I was very happy with the yield at about 250g outdoors.

The Bud, plentiful and smelling of blueberry cookies, has been and is still curing for almost 5 months now, give or take. The flavor as stated is an in between blueberry cookie and soap. The soap being more pronounced in the smoking. A very enjoyable flavor on the palette after the exhale and an immediate warmth in the head followed with a slight expansive cough. Not sure of the smoke in joints but I`ve been told it tastes great. I`m a hatchet/bubbler man and I can say the flavor is great.

The high comes on nicely, not too fast and not too slow. The eyes begin to become wobbly, sparkly vision, definite nice visual strain with the added relaxation of a good Indica. Smoke a couple more bowls and walking is pretty dodgy. It`s a great medicinal high, very relaxing smoke. The high though is great.

Blue Kiev was my 1st real grow a couple years back in the day. This strain was outstanding in taste, potency and yield. A real easy strain to grow, had no problems with it at all. A Blueberry x AK47 cross with a nice uppercut to the jaw.

I had posted these pics here at OG and at Bluegrass Seeds site as well, the founder there appreciated my work and offered me a few of there strains to grow providing that he could use my pics to show to the public. I only wish I had a better camera back then.

Vegging... A real treat to watch them take off under a 400watt MH, they stayed uniform and squat, indica phenos were easily seen. I topped them around 18 inches, and they grew into stout bushes.

Flowering... They really filled out nicely producing long buds that smelled of berries, around week 5 the smell was stout. The plants were very lush green, it almost looked like a rubber plant with colas. I finished them around 60 days and the smoke was a real treat.

The High... Very heavy and yet relaxing. Great smoke nonetheless. This would be a fine herb for medical use.

Taste... You can taste the berries with an AK47 hashy background, very smooth, very chronic.

September,

BMR was a grow I have been wanting to do for quite a while. Germed 12 seeds all looked great nice big tap roots were out in 2 days in a paper towell. Planted all in keg cups under flores for 2 weeks untill roots were well established then put them under a 1000w MH.

Veg: All plants did very well in veg as small plants, they were all very uniform in growth and speed. After their first repoting they all had a very good growth spurt up and started to grow nice side branches. This is when phenos started to appear. Some were more branchy than others but all had nice thick stems and were very healthy. I vegged them to about 12" then topped them. Once topped they vegged for another week and a half and really started to develop into nice little bushes. The branchier ones doing better.

Bloom: After 12/12 started all 12 showed sex in the first few days, there was 7f 5m, males were all killed. Of the 7 females all stretched for about the first two weeks or so. This initial two weeks is where the different phenos became evident. They all had very different growth patterns. Two stretched a lot to over 5 1/2 feet and had to be trained extensively to avoid growing out of the light area. I don't think that this trait is dominant but there are a few freaks in there for sure. Two had a very indica profile with thick leaves and very little stretch. Three had I would say 50/50 growth with a stretch but normal, 150% or so.

Sativa phenos: All were very tall and harty, they packed on the weight fast like their smaller sisters. Since they had grown up so fast they became very top heavy in the last few weeks and a lot of the branches began to just fall over. I tried to prop them up as much as I could but there was still a limited amount to do. They all had nice trich covered buds that grew well. The smell was a very mild blueberry smell on one and a skunky sweet on the other.

Indica phenos: Both had short stature. One looked close to an Afghani plant I had a while ago. One had a nice soft sweet smell. The other had the most blueberry smell of all the plants and was very nice.

50/50 phenos: Two were more on the bubblegum side with thick buds but light on the resin production. Smell was a mild sweet. They grew very large buds and were the best yielders of the bunch. Of all of the plants the third 50/50 was the only super plant of the bunch. Not so much in growth pattern but for bud structure and trich production. It grew well and started putting on trichs before any others. The smell was a very astrigent cleaner smell with strong raspberry smells coming through aswell. This is what most of my pics are of with two pics of the high yielding sativa pheno.

Overall I am satisfied with BMR. There is alot of variation between individuals but that can produce some great phenos. If you are looking for a really stable strain this is not it, but the chance for a good pheno is there most definatly.

January, 2003

Veg Stage:

The germination was 5/5. Female to male ratio was 2/5. Both of the phenotypes I got were the bigger longer phenotype of Bogbubble (BOG said he like this one better, Super Bogbubble pheno I believe). She has very vigorous growth in veg. The plants develop very strong side branches. This thing does not ever need to be topped. It will be a monster when put into bloom. Expect 7-8 weeks in veg. for a super fatty bush.

Bloom stage:

Excellent!!! Big fat yields can be expected from this monster (7-8 ounces no CO2). The smell is strong, but not the smell of Chronic. It has a little fruity smell in it. I would call it a stealthy smell, because it stinks but not like strong cannabis. The nugs are completely crystal coated as you would expect with most of what BOG works with. The buds get thick a fat. There are a ton of different bud sights. I mean there are flowers every damn where. It does get large though so give it some room. It cannot be considered stretch though, because of the large number of bud sites all over. BB is an excellent gram to watt producer. The calyx on the BB get nice and thick looking glossy at maturation.

Final evaluation:

Overall one of the top strains I have grown. BOG capture all the great things about the original White Label Bubblegum. BB is an excellent strain and for the money maybe the best per dollar. He makes the seed packs real fat so you can find a solid phenotype. The taste, smell, high are top notch. The yield is amongst the Top 2 I grow. It's a super yielder with huge fat nuggets. The taste resembles Juicy Fruit. The high is a nice deep Indica stone. Not recommended for day time. Another one of my lazy cannabis strains I love so much. Strong Indicas like BB tend to do that to you. I am a big Indica lover so I always have lots of Indicas in my garden. This strain is one of the better ones I got in my Top 10. All BOG strains I row are excellent yielders. Congratulations to BOG for having excellent yielding strain that have great smoke.

The bud itself, completely dried and cured smells of grapefruit but once burned it tastes hashy but yet clean that's very smooth on the lungs. The high can be very visual with a large amount at a short time, it falls in the visual category along with MTF and A11 IMHO. It has a psychedelic element along with a sedative, couch-lock like high that will leave you drooling all over yourself! On the downside of the strain, once smoked it will leave you confused for about 15 minutes then it kicks you in the butt afterwards! The texture of the bud is very pliable, great for joints and blunts but I would NEVER burn this product without a nice, clean glass piece. I weep everytime I have to burn this beautifully shiney bud, the trichomes are large and plentiful and can be found all over the product. This is by far the most crystally bud I have ever had the pleasure to grow. It's as white with trichomes as it is with green-leaf matter. It trully is a sight to behold.

Easy to grow, I found that tending to these plants is very easy. Just give them their daily light and water and they will take care of everything else. Good for newer growers that want to get started.

Grower Report

November, 2002

There were 2 female pheno types isolated from 5 plants. 100% germination rate when 5 seeds were planted. There was a taller, skinnier sativa-ish phenotype that stank to high heaven and this stout, huge yielding indica. This was a third generation clone grown 100% organic in soil. This plant didn't have the smell of the other phenotype but yielded almost twice as much.

It yielded 4 ounces. Out of 3 plants it was the only BogBubble in the garden. 3 plants were vegged, topped and flowered. It became very overgrown but the Bogbubble conquered all the plants in terms of leaning contests. Organically fed according to BOG's methods. The plant bends as it ripens because of the weight. As it ripens the buds become extremely thick and dense develop white, then to orange hairs. The tops of the buds are rounded in a dome-like manner with protrusions springing forth many pistils. Make sure you are in low humidity when growing this to prevent mold because of the density of the buds. The smell when opening the cabinet was apparent. Upon smelling the bud up close, I observed a sweet yet subtle hashy smell to it. The buds developed so many trichomes there were trichomes underneath the small leaves protruding from the cola. These are very easy to grow and are lush in an organic garden.

I prefer to harvest my crop when the trichomes are mostly white and little clear with little to preferably no amber because I feel the plant ages anyway as it cures. Trimmed and hung buds until main stems snapped cured in Mason jar for 1 1/2 months. The jars are not strong smelling upon opening but the smell is very sweet like smelling sugar. The taste has matured into a floral narcotic taste to it upon lighting in a spliff. It tastes good until the end of a huge spliff and is always complemented when smoking with my brethren. The sativa phenotype mentioned above was more bubblegum tasting. This is very smooth narcotic opium-like smoke and isn't harsh. I prefer to vaporize in a Vripteck and the vapors are even sweeter. It tastes like inhaling very sweet, flavorful vapor which stays in your mouth for a while. I bet the high and taste will get better with more aging.

The high has a nice calming effect on the body and mind. In small doses it will keep you calm, yet invigorated. It comes on slowly and doesn't have any paranoia with any heart-racing effects. It keeps a cool and wise head during the days activities. In high doses it will knock you on your ass and put you in the zone. It is still possible to converse in this crazy manner; however you are so relaxed you just want to take a nap, just like a good indica should.

All in all, this is great ganja. I prefer this phenotype. Since I harvest before amber trichs, the high is invigorating during the days activities if kept in low doses. It is calming on the nerves and is a great stress reliever. It keeps you humble and wise. As a great calming agent, it is great for medicinal purposes in large doses. It relieves pain and prevents nausea. It is also great for relaxing and meditating. It yields high and will leave you with tons of highly resinous buds. The clippings make fine bubblehash. This is very high grade herb and is usually always the jar I hit up when I want to get irie.

If the above is hard to read, I'm high as shit on it right now... Bless...

Bad germ rate. (sorry BOG) 2 of 4 germinated. Had 2 females though.

Slow initial growth. It never really takes off in height, but has lots of branching. Really compact plants. Perfect for small closet setups.

Takes a lot of abuse without showing signs of stress. PH went off, over-watering, almost dried out, nutrient screw up. They went on like nothing happened.

Wide, dark green Indica looking leaves without looking like a typical marijuana plant. Smells very sweet in mid flowering. Overwhelming sometimes.

The 2 girls are quite uniform. The only major difference seems to be flowering time.

#1 shows preflowers right after switching to 12/12. (Veg time a bit too short IMO).

#2 Shows sex over 3 weeks after switching. Stays very short.

Chopped #1 at 7 weeks. Big yielder. Lots of shiny trichomes. Best looking plant I ever had. Harvested the top buds from the fast BB pheno. The buds are big and compact. Almost all calyxes and no leaf makes manicuring this bud easy. Manicuring is the most boring part so for those of you out there who are tired of hours of cutting small sticky leaves, this plant's for you.

The smoke is smooth. Not very bubblegum tasting, but mild and slightly spicy. The smell is overwhelming and stays for a while in the room. Expecting non smoking guests? Smoke another strain.

Our first reaction after one joint is:

Good smoke, but not really a one hit wonder. Then it comes slowly. Nice relaxing stone that keeps coming for half an hour.

I lit a small joint and after 30 min. I came to myself thinking this pot is a killer, and after only one joint. Then I discovered that I had only smoked half of it...

Creper stone I give the BB a perfect 10. And my tolerance is high being an everyday smoker.

I believe a good long cure is what this strain needs to give you its full potential.

HOLY SHIT!

The best stuff I've ever done!

Nothing has ever smelled this bad which is a good and bad thing. To start off I had 100% germination. Then I got 10 females out of 12 seedlings. I flowered small so not to waste time in veg while not knowing the sex, so they weren't really that big to start flower.

Then they had a severe nute problem with some new stuff I tried out and sort of stopped growing for a while. But in flush they REALLY filled out. I just kept letting them go. They probably flushed for 3 weeks.

The taste and stone were like nothing I've ever had. It tastes soooooooo good some like candy some like grapes. When I open the jars for curing u can smell the skunk on the top floor of my house.

The stone totally kills you. I let them go really long so that's probably why lots of CBD. But everyone else who I give it to says that if they smoke a J of it they can't do anything else for the rest of the day.

This is the best stuff I've ever done and would recommend it to ANYONE.

Well, here we go.... Outdoor BogBubble!!!

First off, sorry for the shitty pics. Fucking digi cam sucks. Also, the guy I teamed up with this year did not want me to take any outdoor pictures. Fucking Fag, just let me take a damn picture. Last pic is one of the cloning rooms. All bogbubble room before they were put out. Wish I had more pics!!

Second, I just took 3 hits and I'm fucked up so, there may be many mistakes.

Med Users:

This is great shit. My girlfriend just came home from work, complained (like usual) about her cramps all day. "I can not concentrate, like a knife my stomach" After three hits she started talking about how pot is great for cancer/aides patients and how she feels 1000x better.

Started around 150 BB clones.

Put the plants in 5 different locations... the shitty part. 2 spots, near each other, over 200 plants... Big Bud, Magic Bud, Ducksfoot, Adirondack Gold (best pot in the world, IMO), Bogbubble and then ROBBED. That's right.... fucking hunter (most likely hunter's, it was two huge fields). I won't waste your time with details but remember outdoor growers... The most important part of outdoor growing, not strain, not sun, not water, not soil, it's location location location. You can have 12 foot plants, the best pot in the world and it doesn't matter if you get robbed. Remember that.

Plants were put out anywhere from 3inch to 2foot clones. This plant really needs a good root base before it should go out. 3inchers when I put them out only grew to 2 feet. 5 inches grew 3 to feet. 1.5 foot clones grew out to 5 feet tall. This is max for Bogbubble.

Unlike what BOG recommends, you should top this plant outdoors. I know it is a branchy plant, but Bogbubble has a very weak stalk. So, outdoors with large wet (because of morning dew) buds it because top heavy. This will keep the plant weight more distributed and reduce mold by keeping the buds smaller.

Mold

We had an extremely wet summer here in the Northeast. Bogbubble showed mold in the veg. stage but responded VERY well to store bought (neem and non-neem) based products. Rained 3.5 inches a week before harvest and mold was not much of an issue.

My problem with bogbubble outside is its lack of vigor. Big Bud was touching a pine tree no sun all day and when the Big Bud plants were 6 feet the bogbubble was only 3 feet. Plant is very compact and small. Would be great for a back yard who is looking for stealth. Small compact plant with lots of buds. If this is what you are looking for in a outside plant then Bogbubble is for you.

Grow Style:

Visit plants once every two weeks, 1 hours in the AM, feed, mold and deer spray.

Location:

Northeast - Closer to Canada then NYC.

Maturity

September 19-Oct5 Didn't think it would mature in time. But don't worry it will. Grew from clone so this will (my opinion) usually decrease the maturity time by about a week. So Oct 10 from seed late Sept. from clone.

Potency:

10... Great shit. 1-3 hits and your blasted. Only thing that gets me higher is my AG. Great mix between body and head. Outdoor potency is BETTER than indoor potency. I have grown Bogbubble both in and out and Outdoor is more potent.

Taste:

Great!! Like great kind bud... you all know what that taste like, I don't need to explain

Conclusion (This is an outdoor analysis... Indoor I give it a A-)

Overall B

Potency 10

Taste 8

Finish in time 6

Yield 7

Ease 7

Height: 3-5 foot

If you're a small time grower looking for a great looking, tasty, very potent plant this is a great plant for you. If you are a outdoor grower looking for large plants this is NOT for you. This is why I gave it a B only because of the size and yield outside Yield was good for the size of plant but I like larger plants.

Bag appeal

Great. Nice green buds with orange hairs and tons of crystals. Recommended for looks.

Again remember about the stalks!! Make sure you top the plant or stake and tie it up. Bud weight is too heavy

May work on some outdoor crossing. Love the potency so crossing it with a larger local outdoor strain may improve it's outdoor appeal. Maybe a purple cross?

Sorry... Just ran out of gas. Need to go to bed, PM if you have any questions. I know I'm forgetting a lot.

December, 2004

Bog bubble was a very fun strain to grow. I started with 14 seeds and ended up with 9 females.

In veg they all grew even and were short and branchy with nice dark green leaves and sturdy stems. No real problems at all except that they like to have lots of root space and some needed to be re-potted earlier than I would have normally.

When I flipped them to 12/12 there was a minimal stretch of about 75% of the original size. They started to flower quickly and were starting to show the first trichs at two weeks. I was really happy to see the resin start so early.

Once they were fully flowering FROST was the key word. Bogbubble is the most trich-laden bud I have grown from seed. Every single plant had a full coat of resin that made sticky fingers inevitable. I was very happy because sometimes when growing out new seeds one or two will be great and the rest will be just ok or average. With Bogbubble though even the plants that are obviously not keepers because of structure or growth ECT. are still highly resinous and more than worth the time to grow them out. I think on average Bogbubble will be very consistent in giving short stocky resinous buds but will still give you the variation in the plants bud structure to find what you are looking for.

Awww the smoke. Good good good. Very potent individuals can be found for sure but on average Bogbubble was a solid 60/40 high leaning to the indica side. I didn't get the sleeping sitting up effect but Bogbubble is a good strong indica without question.

The taste was really pronounced on two of my nine and was very sweet with a very dank after taste. The others were good but more of a mild sweet flavour.

Over all I am very happy with Bogbubble It lived up to BOG's description and was a ton of fun to grow. I would recommend it to anyone.

Grower Report

December, 2004

Easy to grow, and I was lucky enough to get 4 girls from 6 seeds. I can't really add too much of any significance to what has already been said about Bogbubble plant care and growth. The seeds are easy to pop, I did mine in water for 24 hours and then put into soil. The seeds were vigorous and never gave any problems in veg. One plant was a trifoliolate but went on to develop normally. In flower, the plants more-or-less doubled in size, much of this growth occurring in the first 2-3 weeks. The plants were quick to frost up and didn't show any nutrient problems. Root formation was notable for Bogbubble and I would encourage large containers to allow good root growth.

Smoke report.

A great smelling weed, but one that won't stink the room out like white widow can. This was a very crystally weed, and it looks great with all the trichomes glistening. After harvest I was stoned so much that it took a long time to get round to the report. Literally it took a couple of lost months to find time, so I guess you could not call Bogbubble a good "everyday time toke"! That's how good this weed is, but from my experience this is best taken with the wife and kids in bed and the telephone unplugged. If you have a hot chick then good for you "because" you will appreciate her all the more after a toke of Bogbubble. Another feature of Bogbubble is that the second joint of the day is just as good as the first. Some weed isn't really powerful enough to lift you when you are already stoned but this stuff is!

Curiously I got the flu after harvest and found that one toke of the Bogbubble cleared the pain, re-invigorated my soul, and gave me an appetite once again. I am not joking, I was laid on my bed feeling like death warmed up until I hit the Bogbubble, so I reckon the med users will like this weed.

In terms of potency I think it is worth an 8 or a 9 which is VERY high from me. It reminds me of White widow in terms of potency, but perhaps not quite as crazy as widow. You won't be disappointed with the quality of this weed, make no mistake it is a humdinger. Great for anyone with insomnia as well, toke this baby late at night and you will struggle to get off the sofa and into bed, unless you have a hot chick awaiting you that is :).

During my grow I noticed that one of the Bogbubbles had pink trichomes, the BOG himself kindly mailed me to tell me that this was his personal favourite pheno. To be honest they are all great plants, but it was nice to hear from BOG on this pheno. He was right, the pink-trichome plant is a beauty and a substantial smoke. Yields from all the plants were good, though to be fair I was growing under fluoro's, I would love to see this baby grow under HPS.

All in all, Bogbubble comes highly recommended. It was so good I didn't get round to posting my grow report for 2 months. You will not be disappointed by this plant, and if you are it means you didn't grow it correctly

I decided to grow bobbubble after reading lots about BOGs strains. I started 2 bogbubble seeds using the paper towel method. They both sprouted within 48 hours. Growth on one of the plants was slow and it was the runt all along. It turns out the male of the two was that runt. So I was left with one Bogbubble female. The plant was very sensitive to all nute changes, stress, etc. Throughout both veg and flower she showed many deficiencies. Toward late flower she became very top heavy but I was confused as to where all this weight was coming from. The buds didnt develop to well and were fairly leafy. Yeild was somewhere near 14 grams dry. Overall I would grow this plant again, but finding a good mother pheno may be the key to ones satisfaction.

April, 2005

At first, I wasn't going to write a report for this strain. After wrestling with it during growth, and unsatisfied with the final product, I was somewhat let down.

However, I've given myself time to mill over the BogBubble grow, as well as let the final product cure, and I feel that now I have a solid report to offer.

This was my first attempt at multi bucket DWC. I grew individual DWC's with THSeeds Bubblegum before and got excellent results, so I figured I would do just fine with the seven-site setup.

There were some factors I didn't consider... a learning curve going from two or three buckets under a four hundred, to seven under a 1000 for example. The biggest mishap was flowering them too late. Reading other reports in the strain guide, I let these go to sixteen inches and larger before flowering because most said they had minimal stretch. However, mine went notably beyond the four feet I have allotted to vertical growth. To make matters worse, a female in the center of the garden outgrew the others and rested its [massive] buds on the other plants, effectively shading them.

There were seven plants to begin with, four ended up being female. The biggest female that I spoke of made up most of the weight, by far. I would say it yielded about six ounces plus. The other plants yielded skimpy because this monster cut off their light. Together, the remaining three females may have yielded about an ounce to an ounce and a half a piece.

My biggest complaint was the appearance of male bananas on the plants. Toward the end of flowering, there were a few here and there on two of the four females. This could have been from over crowding, as I spared no expense getting the other parameters down. However, Bog himself stated in a PM to me (after I asked about the genetic stability of his strain), that Bogbubble has some hermie traits in its genes, which can manifest themselves in less than ideal conditions.

After their unpredictable stretch and hermie characteristics, I was very disappointed. I assumed the bud would be full of seed. However, after it was trimmed and dried, I could only find one seed in over nine ounces, so that was a big relief. It weighed out to about what I expected. Nine plus isn't a bad figure for four plants, especially considering three were all but living in the dark.

Immediately after drying, I was not impressed with the appearance of the bud. It looked good, don't get me wrong, but didn't seem to have the qualities I have come to associated with A+ genetics. The smoke was somewhat uneventful as well.

At this point, it has been curing for two weeks. Now, the bud has a nice texture and appearance, and the crystals are really starting to gleam. It has an excellent odor, and tastes very, very good out of a clean, glass water pipe. I have to say, I am certainly happy with the product. Although there were some screw-ups on my part, the bud still turned out great after a few weeks in the jar.

I have to say, it gets you very high as well. Definitely indica influence...narcotic type of bud that is very relaxing. After about two hours or so, you have to smoke some more or else you'll fall asleep...good stuff. As compared to my last grow, THSeeds Bubblegum, I'd have to say it's a close call. Bogbubble, being bogs bubblegum, is a good comparison test. I've seen debates on the matter in forums during months past. My opinion would suggest the finished Bogbubble has a slight edge over the THSeeds Bubblegum. The TH had a nice high, but the smell and taste weren't as pleasing as this BogBubble. In terms of nug appearance, or bag appeal, I would say each of these are good contenders, perhaps giving a nod to the TH. The TH is also much more stable and manageable as opposed to BogBubble. The TH plants were incredibly uniform...like clones from seeds. The BogBubble exhibited some variation. It was also more sensitive than the TH. More importantly, the TH was marketed as a strain that stays low and bushy, and it did just that. The BogBubble, however, did not stick so much to this description, and tended to stretch considerably more than what had been advertised. As a plus, odor was more than controllable with a carbon filter, which should be a standard item for everyone in this hobby.

Overall I give BogBubble a good mark. The product is very nice. I don't give it a stellar review because of variation and stretch in the strain, as well as the appearance of hermie traits. The real question: would I grow it again? Although it was certainly worth my time, and I relish the product, I would probably not devote my garden to BogBubble again. There are strains that are much more exotic, which offer a better all around experience. As a final thought, I would recommend THSeeds bubblegum over BogBubble if you were considering one of the bubble varieties.

Grower Report

September, 2004

I grew out a pack of Bogbubble not knowing what to expect. I had heard great reviews but was still skeptical as there were some BOG bashers, and others claiming "average" potency. I now know that these people didn't know what they were talking about or got a poor phenotype.

I started a pack of seeds and out of 15 only was left with one female!! Fairly dissapointing as I saw a lot of variation between the plants. One male was especially special, as it grew the largest leaves, thickest stalk, and a pungent odour. The phenotype of the lone female looked to be almost a sativa/indica mix. It still had the tight internodes, however the leaves were not as thick.

I took 6 clones from the female and rooted them in perlite and vermiculite. Then placed them into the 6" netpots full of rockwool. The plants grew a lot faster than they had in the soil pots they were started in, but the veg growth was extremely slow. I had to harvest by a certain time, so I has forced to flower before they had a chance to reach proper size for the space.

The went through veg cycle with no problems. The stretch during the first two weeks of flower was minimal to say the least. They seemed to continue growing at their original pace, and then stopped after around 3 weeks of flower. They didn't fill out the screen I made but there were still enough buds to make it a worthwhile harvest.

They were under a 940 watt HPS as well as a 430 watt HPS. There was an inline fan for exhaust, and passive intake was used. During the last two weeks of flower I was busy with school work and made the mistake of neglecting my babies. One specific incident had the pH dropping to the low-mid 3's for two days. The plants had a rough time with this and it showed in the growth, i beleive through a magnesium deficiency. Next time will try to perfect the nute cycles, as I didn't quite get the handle of "feeling" how much nutes to put based on the plants, but I have picked up quite a bit of knowledge from this first DWC grow.

The plant growth characteristics were not very acceptable in my books, but the buds that started to grow and swell made me not even think twice about them. Thick, juicy, white buds were starting to make my room smell like someone spilled some sort or artificial sweet odour in the air. It really smelled like those little round cheap peices of gum that are multicoloured. Well the plants smelled the way they taste.

Once it was time to harvest I had sampled several buds on an almost daily basis and the stone was impressive to say the least. Every person that smoked the buds said that it was some of the best bud they had ever seen. Even a police officer commented on how crystallly the bud was and asked if I knew where it came from...LOL!!

The stone was a stong buzz that hit immediately. It gave you about enough time to make a meal, get comfortable, and prepare to pass out. You wouldn't necessarily fall asleep, as the buzz prevented you from closing your eyes. It did make you not want to move, which is hard if your an active individual. This is definately movie, tv, end of night type of buzz. One dealer who goes through literally pounds a week commented that it was some of the strongest bud he has smoked, even superior to a white widow he gets thats supposedly an amazing mother. But for all I know its lowrider, or Top44 being sold as "the Chronic"!!..(by the way, check out my chronic, serious seeds grow report. another great strain).

This is definately a plant to grow and keep in the garden. As soon as seedsdirect has bogbubble back in stock I will keep a pack for a later date. Maybe i got lucky with the one female, but if not then there are a lot of pheno's to chose from that hopefully have better growth characteristics.

After growing LSD and Lifesaver and having great results, I decided to grow one of BOGs Bubblegum strains. Out of the 5 seeds I germed 2 turned out to be female, very similar in structure and size. After a four week veg I decided to throw them into flowering. I will say once on 12/12 they may have stretched 6 inches max ALMOST NO STRETCH AT ALL. One plant I cut down at 46 days with the other at 55, not to much difference in the high just a slight increase of yeild. They where grown in 5 gallon dwc buckets with flora series nutes under 600 watts hps.

Here is where I would have to say I was not impressed at all by this strain, first of the taste was very musky, no sweet/bubblegum flavors at all - kinda tasted like funk(not a good one) and second off the yeild buds where very tight but didn't weigh anything at all I yeilded a little over two oz's all together off two plants. I have never had that poor of a yeild, ever.

I will say that it is pretty pungent stone quite numbing, I am going to give her another go round to see if I can get better results and may update this report later.

Bogglegum is a beauty. Very well suited for indoor - short, many branches, and fairly low odor. Vegetative growth is very hearty, and flowering is fairly short at about 50-60 days. Buds are quite sizable, but not especially dense. However, the girls make up for it in trichome production.

Trichome production is excessive. I've had plants, from seed, producing trichomes before they had shown signs of sex! And once you flip them over to 12/12, they just explode in sparkles. It's really quite impressive.

Yield is a bit low for a pure indica, due to the low density of the buds. However, this is counteracted by its potency... A pretty good balance between a heady-high, and a body-high, but beware - it's definitely a creeper high... 30 minutes plus to completely hit you. Definitely not a functional high... It shakes up your brain like a snow globe.

Overall, it's an excellent strain, and certainly worth the price. If you're a fan of a good indica, or just want some sexy buds to show off to your friends, give it a whirl... You won't be disappointed.

One thing - MAKE SURE TO SUPPLEMENT MAGNESIUM!! My bogglegums seem to suck up far more magnesium than any of my other plants. I usually gave them twice as much epsom salt as my other plants, about 1/2 tsp per week per plant, mixed in 1 gallon of water. Others received 1/4 tsp, or less.

This strain is an easy grower, starts off fast in veg; branches out nicely. I feed them 10 days after popping out of the soil, it's all down hill from there. Never gave me ANY troubles. Vegged under a 400w MH till there 18 inches, then "topped". 5 weeks Veg.

Flowering... Under a 1kW and 400w HPS Bogglegum takes off producing nice "long colas", pretty fat too. I've been growing for around 2 years and Bogglegum always gives me big buds. Trics are heavy on the buds, and the smell is always sweet. A good strain if you're looking for stealth. I usually harvest around 50-55 days and get 3-4 oz's per plant.

After a good cure Bogglegum will impress ALL your friends; you only need a couple hits to feel "the rush". It sneaks up on ya so take caution not to abuse, or it will abuse you. It's a very smooth smoke with great potency, you know you're smoking something "exclusive".

This is BOG's baby, his 1st strain released. Overall, this is the best joint weed I've ever had.

Bogglegum is very easy to grow. I only tried germinating one seed, which ended up becoming an absolute monster of a plant, displaying vigorous growth from day one. Despite numerous mistakes growing with aeroponic hydroponics for the first time, this Bogglegum plant never ceased to impress me. I realize that 85 days of flowering is a very long time, but I made a couple mistakes that caused this to happen. First of all, I had some problems with nute burn, forcing me to flush the entire hydro system, shocking the plants and delaying everything. Second, at day 50, I stopped giving them nutes, a premature decision, causing even more delay in flowering. Third reason, was the gigantic size of some of my colas, which took forever to properly ripen evenly. My guesstimate is that these 3 factors caused a 7 day delay each, adding up to 21 days. I harvested by closely monitoring the trichomes. My personal preference is slightly more cloudy than clear, with a few amber ones thrown in for good measure. Good bud is analogous to strong coffee. In the morning, I like my coffee strong and flavorful, cause I like to taste it when I drink it. It's no different with my bud. Towards the end of harvest time, a bunch of my colas turned purple, which yielded the best and most incredible grape bubblegum taste of the entire harvest. The first thing that strikes you when vaporizing some is how smooth it is. Some buds taste like Bazooka Joe bubblegum, and some of the buds have a grape Kool-Aid flavor. Even when it grows, Bogglegum doesn't smell like regular weed. It's low odor, and doesn't really stink until it's ready for the chop. When harvested, and starting to dry, it smells like wet straw, or hay. Only when it's completely dry and cured does it start to smell, and even then it's way different. When I open a glass jar of curing Bogglegum, it smells spicey, like nutmeg. No doubt about it, Bogglegum is more potent and more tastey, after a good cure in a glass jar. Its bubblegum/spicey taste really grows on you.

Potency wise, I would give it a rock solid 8.5 - 9. This stuff can really kick your ass if you vape too much. It has absolutely ruined and/or crippled a few of my hard core veteran toking buddies, to the point where they almost passed out from one too many hits. Moreover, I must admit it has had the same effect on myself a few times. The high is pillowy, creamy and thick, with lots of bottom. I love how the taste stays in your mouth hours after having some, especially after drinking something with sugar in it. Very yummy!!!

You defintiely know that you're smoking an indica dominant phenotype here. Even when exhaling a big vapor hit, the vapor plume seems to have a darker blueish hue to it when it's Bogglegum.

My only knock against it, is that the buds are not very tight or dense like some other strains. It's alarming how much weight you lose when your Bogglegum dries. What were big fat colas wet, will lose more than 80% of their original weight after drying. The only buds from my harvest that were exceptionally tight and dense were the ones from the monstrous main cola it produced. Because of this, it takes more volume in Bogglegum buds to yield the same weight. Having said all that, my lone Bogglegum did yield over 275 grams, dried and manicured. Not too shabby!!! If you're an indica lover, you'll be moonstruck with Bogglegum.

This was a fun grow. We planted all 12 seeds right away when they dropped in the mailbox, all germinated/sprouted in 4-5 days, there was 5 males in 12 seeds so we were left with 7 nice females to play with...

The plants were grown in soil/Leca-clay mix and were fed with GH nutes, which did the job well but since then I've used Biobizz organic nutes with way better results, didn't have better nutes at the time.

There was two odd plants in 7 females, one runt and one self topping girl but the oddities didn't matter, they both performed very well after all, the runt especially, it made a nice Coke-can cola and yielded about 60 grams despite it's shortness. We had one 600 w hps for veg and for flower we had one 600 w hps closer to the plants and one overhead 600 w hps because the room was very small and the second 600 water tried to cause some heat issues when close to plants so we decided to raise it to the roof, we didn't have the best ventilation at the time

These girls are very easy to grow. There was two phenotypes, one sativaish lanky girl and the rest were fat indica girls. We decided to clone them both for a nice variation of the same plant. This was a bit of a ghetto grow, the grow room was a electric sauna @ my friends house and our main idea behind this was just to get good clones for the next grow which is going on at the time.

The plants were cut @ 56 days flowering, we didn't give them the 48 hours dark period - these girls were frosty enough and we had to move forward to the new garden. The cured product has a great bag appeal, these smell is something you can deal with, very far from the usual cannabis smell, a fresh, fruity taste and smell, not a skunky stink. Yield was more than enough for three daily smokers to smoke and expect bigger yields with pruned clones, these plants were not pruned or touched at all, just a few lower branches were removed in early flowering.

So, this was my first try with BOG genetics and I'm more than happy with the results...Bogglegum is good for rookies but I must say it really isn't just for rookies. Very easy to grow with great results.

I sprouted 3 seeds 1 male 1 female and 1 eaten by my cat. So I vegged the female into a mother took some clones and started on my first grow of Bogglegum. The plants grew very uniform and they bushed out a lot. I topped them when they were a few inches tall.

They more than doubled there height in flowering, but overall not bad at all. They started to produce signs of crystal very fast just a couple of weeks. At week 5 I hit them with a PK boost for one week and they fattened up nice and good.

Now as for the smoke the Bogglegum is good not great. smokes smooth and gives a good high. taste is sweet.

Grower Report

October, 2004

This was a very nice strain to grow, very hardy grower forgiving, fairly low/pleasant odor, good yielding, relatively short with profuse side branching if topped, fairly fast finishing and GREAT smelling. I started out from seed (thanks SD and BOG) and have been growing now for three generations...this grow report will be an amalgamation of sorts.

I use a weak solution of 1 tsp Liquid Karma and 2-3 drops of Superthrive during seedling/rooting stage and they LOVE it...pretty aggressive growth once they root, i grow in a soilless mix Promix BX, Perelite, 1.5 tbs/gallon pulverized Dolemetic Lime, grow rocks on bottom layer.

...in the clone/veg chamber,(2x3x3 foot area at the far end of rarely un-used closet) while previous generation is finishing in the flower chamber. i start off the clones in rockwool cubes, they stay in the humidity dome/tray until roots show, for generally about 5-7 days after cut then i move them into 5" square pots where they stay with their sisters under a 125W CFL 6500K Blue spectrum. i top them around 4-5th node and then top again once later to get nice full and squat bushes...once they fill out a bit i transplant the ladies into 1 gallon pots and i'm always amazed with the root development...a testament to superior genetics and IMHO the good stuff in Superthrive and esp Liquid Karma...i use this clone mix until they move the gallon pots and then i add 1/4 tsp GH FloraNova Grow to the mix moving the strength up from the intial 1/4 to 1/2 tsp until they get to about 10-12" tall then they go into the flower chamber...

Welcome to the flower chamber, a 3x5x10 foot side closet...in here i have a 400W Kool-Tube set-up using Sylvania's GROLUX Enhanced Spectrum HPS bulb, a 265CFM Fantech Blower >>> to a Can Carbon-Filter. a small turbo-style oscillating fan mixes everything up nicely and blows across the tops...temps stay generally in the 72-80F range with lights on, humidity gets low in the winter 30-60%...a good solid flowering environment for the ladies, good ventilation and pruning being key. i put the plants into 5 gallon pots for flower...for me this is the best mix i've found under the 400W and grow environment i have, 4 big well topped and pruned bushes in 5 gallon containers, the plants really love the room the stretch out, i've tried more/smaller plant set-ups, but with Bogglegum's fantastic root structure and fairly low-profile i've found the extra week to 10 days in veg under the 400W to get big bushes is worth it...i trim-train-prune and generally persuade my ladies into a nice even canopy around 2.5 x 3.5 feet.

...the nute mix jumps up from the 1/2 tsp FN Grow to 1.5 tsp and 1 tsp LK to 2 tsp by the time i flip the lights and the ladies explode in the new 5 gallon containers under the new 400W HPS and jump from 12-14" to 20-22" in 7-10 days (no kidding).

Flowering is def where this strain earns its keep, literally exploding into a bouquet of awesome colors and smell...the grape bubblegum pheno i have really looks/smells great and really starts to pack on the weight fast and early it makes the LSD i have and grow with look pretty puny early on...then it hits kind of a plateau and fills in more slowly for a couple weeks, then the last two weeks it starts packing it on again nearly doubling in the last 14-18 days. The stretch in flower in really negligible maybe 20-25%...thats it.

i generally let this pheno go to about 55-56 days, i had cut them @ 49-50 but the extra time is DEF worth it for potency and yield. trichs @ chop are about an 10% clear/80% cloudy/10% amber mix under my trusty 100X illuminated mini-micro-scope from radioshack ($10!).

THE HIGH...is def a nice uppy daytime high, nothing too intense but also not mediocre either...two good tightly packed pulls on my trusty glass bong is usually good for me. the high starts off pretty-electric-heady and then becomes a nice relaxed buzz after 45 mins to an hour. My girlfriend LOVES this high it makes her and her friends giggle and laugh, a nice social high to go out with or stay home and listen to tunes...or make them, watch a good movie or conversate.

THE TASTE/SMELL...with a 4 week cure the smell is of faint grape bubblegum, not piny at all...the taste is about the same, very earthy grape bubblegum...fantastic!

Well ... the first thing I noticed when I started this grow was the amazing side branch production. Very vigorous and nicely spread. The internodes of the plant were the shortest I have ever seen and there were tons of them. I vegged for 5 weeks and then hit 12/12. The plant took a lot of Mg during veg and also in bloom too. The leaves stayed nice and green, very short in length and overall very pretty. There were times I couldn't water right on time, due to stealth and or lighting / work schedules, but it never seemed too dry even if it went a day too long. This plant seemed like it could handle just about anything really.

When I transplanted, first at 2 weeks, the root structure was filling the bottom of the container. Very fast root development and very healthy too. It never showed signs of root binding at all. Perhaps I caught it in time, perhaps it still had room to grow a bit more.

I went 55 days on harvest and the last few days made it all worth it. I cut when the trikes were cloudy / amber (more cloudy). That left me with a high that is very heady, some body, but mostly head. It's a lasting high and it creeps up on ya. Kinda grabs you after 20 mins or so and you just stare out into space and your not sure how long you have been doing this. :) It's great as far as being an "up" type high too, doesn't slow me down like some MJ does.

Bag appeal is right up there, looks nice, smells nice, and it's SO sticky. You leave it in a bag in your pocket for more than a few minutes, you will need to peel the weed off the bag. The buds cover in trikes and most of the surrounding leaves too. When I cut, the buds were nice and full, thick and ooy gooy. As they cured / dried, the buds were not as thick and the hairs turned from a golden color to a light redish color.

I think I could have done this better, and I will try again trust me. I found the plant overall to be very easy to grow, it took abuse alright (not that I gave it much), and it's the best bud I have ever grown personally.

My hat is off to you BOG .... very nice genetics!

Also grew out some of his Grape Punch too, report to follow.

Potency: WOW what a rush - I am somewhat a heavy smoker (between 2.5 - 4g a day) and let me tell you this smoke rocks with the best of them. MHO - one very strong herb.

Taste: On this pheno I am not getting the strong taste of grape although there is a mighty fine sour candy after taste.

High: Starts at the top of your head and tingles all the way to your toes. Very nice little body rush. I get a heavy forehead after 3 hits - hope you can relate to that. Heavy Heavy High. I like it.

If I were to rate this - and I am - here would be the score card

Looks: 10. Most beautiful plant and buds I have seen or grown.

Potency: 9. I have had stronger but I could only count on one hand in the last 20 years of a stronger hitting herb.

Taste: 8. I have other phenos growing and have harvested another that had a way better grape taste so this mark is only for this pheno. Still a very pleasant smoke and will keep her in my garden. I have chosen one of her clones for my mom plant.

High: 10. I say this because I suffer from sleep disorder and have a very hard time controlling my anger. Not only does this totally take care of those problems, but it also seems to be a very good pain reliever. Things I have noticed are: Lower back pain - almost gone, Headaches - Gone completely, Sore muscles from working out - makes you forget all about it.

Grow ability: 10. Easiest plant I ever grew - never once showed signs of nute probs but my other strains I had to constantly keep changing nute strengths to keep them happy. I do have a problem cloning the Sativa pheno - none die they just take forever to root. The Indica pheno on the other hand clones very fast and in 3 weeks I will be harvesting an Indica clone.

From seed I harvested the pictures to the left at 56 nights 12/12. From clone I take them at 49 nights. From 11 seeds I got 6/5 f/m with 3 Sativa and 3 Indica phenos. As BOG reports, not the most stable, no 2 plants looked alike except all where tric laden, all had different but similar tastes and the highs very from a full body stone to go to sleep good night. All highs very strong. I found the one I wanted (a sativaish pheno) and made her a mom. My wife smokes very rarely but loves how medicinal this is for her headaches (There goes MY stash). I use Pure Blend Pro Organic nutes with their liquid karma for a catalyst. Used every watering at bottle recommendations and had no signs of nute burn or any other problem while growing. When she is touched or brushed against while in flower she fills the room with an odor of an old time candy store. When harvested I find the odor very strong with a skunky/fuel/candy smell that turns to a nice sweet/skunky smell. Bag appeal is fantastic as the tric's shine and the hard dense buds don't smash flat when squeezed. Being so dense you all know it looks smaller than most in a bag but when you break open those sweet glistening buds you realize what you have. Most peoples first reaction is "Holly Shit" when they see it. Yield is above average now that I have everything worked out, around 3 - 4 ounces in a 4 gal pot in 49 nights. Yield goes up with one more week but so does the stone (a little of both is what I like). I have found if you can handle a heavy high this smoke is OK for the day time but do keep busy for if you sit down - 15 minutes and you're asleep.

If I forgot to put something in holler out and I will answer.

Peace and WOW WHAT A RUSH

The Lifesaver I grew out and smoked was the Sativa pheno. It had low odor during growth but once cut and trimmed the smell of grapefruit was very strong. The smoke was a little harsh but the taste was definitely there.

The high was heady and from what it seemed, I believe the Sativa is a "roofless" high. What I mean by that is, the more you smoke, the higher you get. The high remains for a few hours and is motivational. I go alot done while smoking Lifesaver.

On the med side. Well I am a med user with extreme chronic back pain as well as migraine headaches. The Sativa pheno even though heady still gave me relief from my pains. It relaxed the muscles in my back which allowed me to get things done. Lifesaver is definitely a good med strain, even as a Sativa.

Overall I would give it a 7.

Very easy to feed organically, they love guanos!... This is a great strain for the begginer who wants a low cost, quality product! I'm stressing the word quality, just look at my pics! They even turn a nice purplish color at the end of flowering. The smoke is very smooth and tasty (fruity) although I've definitely had strains that had a more pronounced taste; thats why I gave it a 7 and not an 8 , 9, or 10. If you never smoked it before then let's just say you're in for a pleasant surprise as far as the high goes! It gets you ripped. Not as high as say G-13 but it's up there!

Extremely easy to grow, great for newbies in the game. Some phenos smell like candy but there were a few that didn't. It's very hard to find the blue pheno but I am sure it's somewhere in the thousands of seeds BOG has in stock.

This strain truly is the king of Indicas!

As far as the high goes it is extremely couchy but very mind-numbing and mellow. This bud is good if you have nothing to do, or if you wanna go fishing on a peer, watch a movie, or just lay back on a winters eve and hibernate. Not really a party high, which I enjoy most. You will find that it will drag you into a deep sleep with its incredible drowsy power it has. But man, it is fantastic...

The smokeability is way up there, the feel of it is very crunchy, my friends call it capn' crunch for this reason. Once inhaled the smoke opens up your lungs and the smoke is so heavy on the chest you cant help but blow it out quickly. And when the smoke is exhaled it leaves you with a pleasant candy aftertaste that's to die for. Many testers have tried explaining the taste leaving them dumbfounded. The overall strain is a triple threat, with its high taste and smell leaving the connoisseur aching for more!

The Lifesaver was my first real grow. I experimented with some bagseed once but I went no-holes-barred on this last round. Many of the issues to be graded on I'm sure would be a 1-3 points higher if I had more experience and a more optimal environment to grow in. The grow itself was a roller-coaster starting from week 1. I germinated 5 seeds, all had nice taproots except for one that had a short taproot. After planting they were vegged for 60 days to reach a height of about 24 inches. In this time period, one of the 5 had some bad looking problems (leaves browning and curling, soon becoming necrotic). I took it outside and threw it in the garden through the last week of veg and it began to flower. Luckily the bastard was a male. I only had one other male which was destroyed as early as possible. This left three healthy females inside a male outside.

In flower, a second plant began with the curling necrotic spots. I took her out to the garden under the sun and pollinated her with the male that had been waiting for her to show up. She stayed outside for the rest of her life and yielded some decent seedy buds (although only about a half ounce). The two remaining indoor plants went a full 61 days and some change before they were harvested. I still think they may have been a little early but due to time constraints, they had to go. The two plants had significant differences leading me to believe that I had a sativa-dominant pheno and an Indica-dominant pheno growing. The shorter (Indica) yielded about an ounce and a half while the larger sativa plant yielded closer to two ounces dry bud.

The smoke report is still underway, as the cure is about 75% so far. Both batches are still relatively greeny smelling (like homegrown), but have a very fruity scent when broken into. Tons of hairs and crystals guarantee a heavy high, and so far I've found that high to be relatively heady-and like I was expecting, a potency that leaves you wanting to take a nap. Not a great weed to work on, but it makes for a chilled party!

I germinated 3 seeds and got 3 nice females. All vegged well and I had no nute problems. They had a short bushy Indica growth pattern. The buds were solid and very frosty. They put off a nice fruity smell during flower. I cut them at about 63 days. I could have cut them sooner but I let them go when I saw the color come on. My night temps were about 55* F.

I got two phenos one was more Bogbubble, and the other two were more Blueberry. The Blueberry ones produced a beautiful purple color with the low temps. The Bogbubble pheno has a nice fruity smell and flavor with a familiar b-gum undertone. The Blueberry ones have a fruity flavor, but a rich, earthy undertone. Both showed good resin production. It smokes well in a joint.

The high is a good Indica high, not devastating, but a good couch lock.

Easy to clone and vigorous in vegetative growth. We had the "Sativa" pheno of Lifesaver which is lanky with a high flower/leaf ratio. This plant finished quickly showing a high degree of resin by 28 days in flower and tightening with milky trichomes by 40 days.

Lifesaver in flower was a bit more sensitive to the Fox Farms Bloom than some other strains but tolerated the 700 ppm.

The bud cures to firm nuggies with great appearance and a light grape odor. The smoke is very smooth and amazingly potent producing a strong body stone. An excellent medical strain for those with spasm or back pain.

It's pretty much all body high, mentally the effect is just one of untroubled calm, very nice. Medicinally, the Lifesaver does help with pain to some extent, definitely worth smoking if you're hurting and don't have anything important planned.

The two Lifesavers yielded almost identically to each other and combined weighed 2.3 oz, an ok yield, nothing exceptional. Smell was minimal – a good little stealth plant. Both were very pretty and healthy looking plants. One plant had more sativa characteristics than the other, growing faster and taller, and with narrower leaves. I didn't really notice a difference in highs though.

Grower Report

March, 2004

Overall Summary

Lifesaver, it cures what ails ya! Said best by BOG himself. This is a wonderful strain & I'd recommend growing it to anyone! It's a very uniform plant for the most part and it's really easy to grow out. I was working with two females out of 3 seedlings that I had pop up. 3 out of 4 seeds germinated. But 2 of the 3 were female, so it was a score. On top of that, I had 2 phenotypes to work with! Even better. The first to finish in 55 days was the indica dominant bogbubble phenotype. Short & squat with thick fingers like any indica would. The second phenotype I had was the sativa dominant "grape" or purple pheno. This pheno was trained to be short but considerably taller and more lanky than the other phenotype. It finished in two intervals, the top at 63 days and the bottom at 70 days.

Smoke Report

--Bogbubble pheno

This pheno tastes very earthy. It has a spicy taste, but its very smooth. It gives you a very mellow body high, and you get that heavy weight feel in your eye lids. Common indica high traits, but its so much more. It did pack a punch, and in my own opinion, is a little stronger in potency than even the sativa phenotype.

--"Grape" pheno

This phenotype tastes so wonderful that BOG should trademark the flavor! It tastes like candy, but also has a undertone of spices & melons, very unique. The high is almost like the clarity thinking of a mushroom trip. I feel like my thoughts are much clearer, and I'm kind of energetic and ready to take on the next challenge of the day. A great high for sure!

* Growers note: Lifesaver (both phenos I grew out) gets REALLY frosty during flowering, more so than a lot of plants I've seen and grown myself. From the stems to the leaves, even the fan leaves. If you like frosty buds, this plants for you!

Lifesvaer has made me fall in love with Indicas. I kept 2 out of 3 plants, 1 hermied. One is plump and fat like BogBubble and the other is sweet, has purple trichs and smells like blueberries. The latter is extremely uplifting to the senses! People just love the fruity purple pheno!

The high of the BogBubble pheno is very stimulating at first and comes on in the face and neck and then mellows you out hard. Heavy yawning.

The purple pheno is so tasty. It tastes like blueberries out of a friends bong or bubbler but It tastes even better out of my vaporizer. The purple comes not from color in the leaves but rather the stalks of the trichomes. The heads of the trichs are bulbuous and clear/cloudy/amber but the many purple stalks are what gives the bud its purple hue. I must say, it is my favorite weed and I hope to never lose these genetics. This high comes on gradually and it is characteristic of a very complex indica. After a morning vape before going to the laboratory, the high starts in the base of the head and back and creeps up my spine. It also makes your head tingle as it comes on. My thoughts are mindful and calm yet the body feels energized and I feel strongly planted on this earth ready to go about my beautiful day. It is thoughtfully stimulating as well. It will not have you staring at walls but it is not a good social weed. It is better for serious contemplation and reflection. Along with yoga and regular exercise, it helps keep me hungry, fit and healthy. It is a life tonic!!

I only have room for 2 moms so I'm thinking of growing something else because the 'fruity healer' and scrapping the other pheno. This is for sure the lambs bread collie.

I have IBS and defiantly need something to control the pain, nausea, and spasm incurred by such a disorder.

Germination: I grew out 5 Lifesaver seeds out of 10. Out of the 5, I got 1 female. She is being kept as a mother (THANK GOD, I'D CRY IF I LOST THESE GENETICS). I've had Nirvana seeds yield higher proportions of Female/Male, so by the point I was a little pessimistic. I think, don't quote me on this, but the Lifesaver males are twice as vigorous early on in the growth... Anyone doing any breeding, consider using a Lifesaver male, they will overrun your house!

Cloning: Cloned VERY nicely. I used DWC cloning with distilled water, and I think (I lost my graphs in a format) it threw roots in about 11 days.

Setup: I grew 3 Lifesaver plants in a microgrow cabinet with 3 42 watt CFLs, in 4" pots, using Schultz's Professional Indoor Mix soil. Peters 20-20-20 to feed with. Tap water to water.

Veg: I clipped the tip at 3 nodes high, and used string to train them so all the buds were on the same plane. Only vegged for 12 days.

Flowering: During flowering I used a really aggressive feeding pattern, denoted by slight nutrient burn on the leaves in the picture. I started at half strength nutes, and then every watering, I'd add 1/8th strength (or smaller) or something of nutes to the water, and I'd gradually increase this as I saw fit, if the plants didn't look to be taking it, I'd back off. I was always feeding them. The leaves never became any more burned than what you see in the picture. I flowered for about 45 days. I harvested at mostly milky trichs, and a few amber, but not before flushing the soil.

I germed out 3 lifesavers hoping that I would get at least one male, all germed and I got 2 females and one male..

Since the seeds has good genetics, no vegging of the plant at all. Just let it grow...Both plants topped once at the 3rd node and the 5th node for the other plant... The shorter plant is the indica pheno and she went 45 days.. No Problems at all...Very tight nodes, seen her with 5 nodes-branches in like 6 inches. Very nice clusters of buds that were growing..Very crystally buds, leafs, stems and about halfway down the fan leaves's stem into the stalk. Had to repot to a bigger pot from 2 gallons right before flower to 5 gallons pot, and didn't skip a beat. Crystalizing buds were a sight to be seen...Wow I say!

The Sativa pheno did 60 days and no Veg at all. She was growing along side of the indica and showed her flowers in 30 days from seed first. Since I was waiting for the indica pheno to show sex, 6 days later then I repotted the Sativa pheno and she went into shock with buds on them. Took 2 weeks before she started to like her new home and then started to grow again ...grew a little taller ... Very Sativa looking plant with crystally buds ALL the way down to the lower buds...Nice size nuggets and crystally. Very sweet-candy like buds...Yummy! By far my best smoke so far and even the smell is out of this world!

Smoke report: Indica

Very Good smoke... After a week cure, when smoked it has the "lung-expanding blow-the-smoke-out-now" Āĉâ,~Ëœcuz you ain't gonna hold me in any longer. Kicks early than most weed I've touched. Very potent smoke. Late at night smoke, if smoked early ,be ready for the couch or you can get mindless if walking around doing nothing. That is mindless but worth it. Buds are semi-smelly and hard, broken up the buds don't smell. Just a hint of hash, like some golden hash smell. Friends find this really stoney weed and a good One hit or Two. Indica pheno will hit you with a stone pretty quick closer to most say "Baseball Bat" stone and without knowing it. You're stoned, had a half joint and didn't know it's in my hand. Then you're staring into something non-thinking-space. Funny stone sometimes.

Smoke report: Sativa

Wow! By far is amazing buds I've touched, smoked, drooled over. After 60 days it was time to pull her. Very smooth smoke that a huge hit can be tasty and no kicking of smoke wanting to leave the body temple. Even with the 2 weeks of none growth, still have very potent smoke that makes up for a huge yield with semi-potent smoke. Very crystally, I'm always breaking up buds and taking a good whiff of these candies buds all the time. Smoking it too, exhaling smoke is very pleasant, relaxing, smooth as in glass smooth. Friends blink twice with this stuff. It's a great pheno!

The Sativa high is what I like Āçâ, Æœ cuz it's keeps the high flying as you will try to catch the "Wave" and it's like a "Tide" high stone type. You go with the stone, relaxing high, as well with the funny stone weed, Laughing with this weed is common. She's a 10 for sure.

Cloned 2 of them from the Indica pheno, just slice and powder and put into soil with nothing over it and it's growing like on the Sativa side or maybe I got the labels switched. Yup, happens when smoked THAT Indica pheno "label switching-in-the-stoned-zone". Do what you need to do THEN get stoned. Male was only 2 feet tall then culled.

This is my first indoor report. I decided to try Grape punch because I have smoked two of BOG's strains {lifesaver and LSD} I liked them a lot so I decided to try the new strain. So let me start with the grow.

I germinated three seeds in paper towels and a zip lock bag within 24 hours they all sprouted. I put them in one-gallon pots with 2/3 fox farm soil and 1/3 perlite. I veged them for 40 days under 150hps 24/7 and then I switched them back two 12/12. I used sensi bloom 1 and 2 and voodoo juice and some big bud during flowering. I did not have much of a problem with nute burn i had a bit but It was a mistake on my part due to inexperience. I ended up with 3 out of 3 females so I was happy two of the plants showed sex in 7 days the other took 13 days.

I took clones from two of the plants so I could decide its mother. I did make a anther mistake I didn't know my ozone generator was on the first 30 days of flowering so I think It kind of screwed with the smell a bit when you cut a bud open It has a nice smell kind of smells like skiff real hashy. I let the first two plants go 50 days I think they could have gone 55 but I was a bit impatient.

The third went 56 days and just for an experiment i gave the third plant 24 hours of darkness before I picked it. I liked this strain I get so high from the shit I would have to say I liked life saver better but I do not want to discourage any one from trying grape punch.

The one I am going to keep for my mother is potent and Christly and fast growing. It is the fastest growing weed plant I have ever seen it was kind of bushy only have three plants next time in my garden apposed to the other plant I took cuttings from which is really slow during veg but it did yield a bit more but hay I liked the bushier plant it is stronger and puts me to bed happy

June,

This was my first time trying one of BOG's strains. Me and a buddy split a pack so I germed 6 seeds. Of those six I got three females two indica and one sativa. The two Indicas were very hearty and took off well and both had a lot of resin. They were very smelly like a nasty stinky smell that was not sweet at all, I would describe the it as a dead animal and armpits mixed, very nasty. I decided to not grow them again and hopefully the smoke would be better, which it was. The smoke and taste of the armpit plants was quite good and very potent but not keepers due to the shitty smell. I had one other pheno that looked very different than the other two though. It was very hearty, really it was the fastest growing plant I have ever seen. After cloning it was double the size of the other plants after one week even though it was started at the same time. It was really impressive. It turned out to be a much more sativa pheno. That pheno is the subject of this report.

In veg it grew very well and never had any problems at all. Loved water and nutes and sucked down everything I gave it. The stalk grew very thick and sturdy, I never thought once about it needing to be supported. Extremely fast growth in veg, more than any other plants it just kept coming and coming no matter if left untopped or topped.

When I flipped it to flowering there was a pretty large stretch, I would say about 150% of its original size when started is about where it stopped. After that it started to direct its energy to the budding sites. The buds had resin from week three and never stopped. They started to fill in nicely on the branches and created some nice thick colas that were coated with trichs.

The finished product was very nice indeed with large swollen resin glands that stood out like little diamonds on the buds. The smoke was sweet but not near as sweet as the smell of the resin when the plants were growing. It was more of a earthy after taste that was very tasty and distinct, it had slight hints of berry and musk as well.

The high was a very nice and clear 50/50 indica/sativa mix that leaves you very capable but sill affected. Dry mouth and the giggles are the main effects, but you can still go over to your moms without losing you mind. Very nice high and flavor that will keep me coming back for more.

This is some outstanding "smoke" when going out to social events.

Germed 10 beans and got 5 females LSD#3.

VEG: Vegged for 5-6 weeks until sex was shown, started Pureblend grow @ full strength 10 days from sprout. Never gave me any troubles, they always ate what I gave them always asking for more. Sturdy and stout they developed quickly and were moved to 2gallon pots from 1qt. I topped them around 18inches tall, determined sex and moved to 5gallon pots a week before flowering.

FLOWERING: After a Foxfarm Bigbloom bath I switched to 12/12 and switched to 1400 HPS lighting from MH. 5 plants literally "exploded" overgrowing my growroom not in height but in width. Massive cola's and wide shoulder's would best describe this strain, this strain can really pack it on. I had to litteraly donate a plant to a friend because I didn't have the room, he didn't mind at all considering he pulled 4 oz's off it. But LSD grew very uniform, made a great canopy. Harvest 54days.

YEILD: When its all said and done LSD yeilded 20oz's off of 5 plants. I've been growing for a few years and this was my best yeilder, you get huge *buds* It was my 1rst 1lb harvest yeild ever, remember i had to give a plant away.

POTENCY / TASTE: *This is some great smoke i give it a 9 Sativa-Indica mix more towards the Sativa side. When your out on the town, people have told me when they smoke LSD and have a few drinks its like a *euphoric rush* very motivating and upbeat to surroundings. You could actually function and be wrecked at the same time very unique. The smoke is very smooth and you can taste a bit of sweet fruit in it, very funky and pleasant.*

SMELL: *In flowering i had to types of smells, one being of fuel on one day the other I swear I had a dead rat somewhere. It strengthens heavily towards harvest *Air Control a Must* but its no worse then Bogbubble either. There just both strong. When buds are cured properly it smells like *DANK* You open a mason jar of LSD and the whole room fills, and it smells great too...strong*

OVERALL: *This is one of the most easiest strains I've grown, they do all the work and never complained once. They filled out fast and yeilded *heavy* and the smoke is just outstanding. You get great bag appeal, people loved the sight of *big red-haired buds* You get a lot of bang for your buck here, I will definitely do LSD again.*

Hello OG'ers,

I hope all is well in your Garden of Eden. Today I bring you the long awaited smoke report on BOG'S Sweet Cindy. I'm sorry for the delay it's been five weeks since harvest.

Two things held me up. I cured these buds very slowly; they still have moisture in them and must be dried out two hours before smoking. I didn't mind because I was smoking previous grows. The second is the fact that I'm the first one reporting on this strain. I'm very nervous about doing it accurately. Well here goes...

Appearance:

The buds have large reddish orange pistils jutting out of green leafy calyxes. The buds are covered with very sticky trichomes. The Sativa buds form a christmas tree triangle shape. The Indica buds form fat round buds.

Smell:

I have a hard time trying to describe the smell of these buds. Mine came out smelling medicinal. This is not a sweet smell nor a sour diesel smell. More like a medicine from the doctor. Open some Robatusian cough medicine and you have it.

Taste:

The taste is very smooth but like Chinese duck sauce very sweet and sour, with the forementioned robatusian cough medicine after taste. I'm NOT saying that this taste is bad at all. I'd just trying to describe it to you the best I can.

High:

I find the high instead of trippy quite euphoric. This strain gives you a huge lift in wellbeing. The high is all in the head with hardly any body stone. But you feel fine, healthy and younger. This is a very fine wake and bake strain because you can smoke it early and just feel fine about everything the rest of the high. If you go to work you will be in good spirits. Also it's wonderful for listening to music ether at home or in the car. You hear every instrument, no matter how small.

I find that if you smoke too much you will be fighting to keep your eyes open and will be looking thru slits. I rate this weed highly for those that have depression or some mental illness. Because it will help you feel much better about your environment and enhance your mood. For Sativa lovers this has a strong, long lasting high that you don't need much of to keep you going all day. For Indica lovers the high is a strong change of pace high but if you smoke too much looking for a body hit, you'll find yourself very sleepy with eyes hard to keep open.

Veg Stage:

The SC99's germination rate was 5/5. All of the seedlings where females (5/5). This plant grows very thick branched. It has good vigor and large leaves. Expect 6-7 weeks in veg. growth for a nice bush. I suggest topping this strain to optimize yield and get some nice side branches. All my phenotypes appeared to be very similar. I did not see any significant variation worth mentioning.

Bloom stage:

This SC99 grew very uniform. I personally would choose this strain to grow if you're looking for a great yield. You can expect 7-8 ounces (no co2) if you grow a fat bush. The buds get very thick. So if you have a humidity issue do not bother with this strain. Also even if you don't have those problems try to keep great circulation going. The nugs get REAL thick. The trichomes are very large and thick. They make the buds rock hard to the touch. The ST#3 I believe is what threw the mold problem in there. You can expect it to mature in 8-9 weeks (60-65 days). It grows very uniform in bloom not giving any problems if you have room restrictions.

Final evaluation:

Good job by the BOG on this one. This strain is good, but I am not the biggest fan of ST#3. The C99 he chose must have been very strong. It improved the ST#3 IMHO. I like the taste of the bud, but due to humidity I can no longer grow this one. The yield is absolutely excellent. The high is also very smooth taking on the parent C99's high. I would say this strain would be excellent for beginners as well. The taste was really not my cup of tea, but you ask for everything. Overall it's a very nice strain.

September,

So I finally finished my SC99 and here I am writing the report on her! Im not going too go into super detail on her, as I didnt keep a whole lot of detail writtin down, but I think I have the essential info needed on the pheno that I got!

First off, I germed 6, all sprouted, and I got one female out of six. Germed under compact fluroecents, and put under the 400w HPS from inside-sun (which means no glass or cooling system on it) at about two weeks or so.

They were grown in a soil mix of Wal Marts Sams choice soil, mixed with 10-15% perlite, and about 5-10% Sphanagon moss. As for nutes in veg I used Pure Blend Pro grow with Liquid Karma and a little high N Guano from Sun Leaves. And in bloom I used Pure Blend Pro Bloom, Liquid Karma off and on, and high P guano again from Sunleaves. I pretty much just followed directions on the bottle/bag for how much nutes too add, and always held off a bit when the leaves start hooking.

She was great through veg, an extremely vigorous strain with real tight internode spacing. I topped once and tied down for training. She would be an excellent strain for scrog as you can see, which I may try with this pheno.

In flower she was pretty average flowering time, with limited smell. She had a real sweet smell which was intensified when you moved the plant... But it wasnt too much, cause I never even used smell control of any kind on this grow. She was harvested at 55 days, just as BOG said she would be ready.

All in all, I really liked SC99. She was a vigorous grower and a high yielder, yielding about 2 1/2 oz (no scale) under a 400w hps at 50 wpsqf. She stayed relatively short, and bushed out like crazy. Watch out cause she likes too hog space. She was also a real easy one for cloning.

She produced extremely frosty, potent buds, with a kick ass fruity sweetness taste that all the ladies are sure too love! Her high is energizing that last for up 4-5 hours. Shes an awesome all around, anytime of the day smoke. I plan on having her in my garden again I liked her so much, and shes got me anticipating trying any other BOG strains.

On a scale of 1-10, I'd say the sc99 gets a well earned 7.5.

I purchased the seeds directly from Bonguru at seedsdirect in amsterdam. They germinated very quickly, probably because they were very fresh. 100% germination.

All of the seedlings were hardy, vigorous, and very uniform.

I grew out 3 plants personally, and gave one to a friend. I only germinated 8 seeds, and half were males (naturally).

My plants were nice and stocky, find branching, very dense and tight resinous nuggets, nice colas. Very high calyx/leaf ratio made manicuring a breeze.

I did not find the plants to be very susceptible to mold due to their structure (not saying that they can't get mold), master kush had much worse mold issues.

Given adequate sun, these plants get HUGE, and very branchy. 8+ foot plants with multiple very large branches is not out of the question. The growth from plant to plant was very uniform, i didn't notice any radically different pheno's.

If i had the chance, i would definately grow this strain outside again, as it was an extremely effective for guerilla growing.

I ferted with Alaskan fish emulsion, and Fox Farm Big Bloom. The high from Baldy is great. Not the couchlock type high I was expecting. I prefer a more sativa high, and that is what it delivers. This is a report on a mostly haze phenotype.

Vegetative:

Out of 2 seeds, one germinated and turned out to be a female. Growth was incredibly vigorous in vegetative state, with strong and fast hardening stems. With the clones I made of this plant I tried LST and FIM and both worked equally well. In any cases, some kind of training is required or else this baby is going to become way too tall for the average grow box. Among other things interesting with this strain are the pre-flowers that appeared really quickly and that it was really easy to clone. Also, from early in vegetative state, there has been a stem producing half-albino leaf blades. After some research it appears to be somewhat common with haze crosses and is due a recessive genetic malfunction. It did not cause any problems except that the white parts were more fragile and dried out faster. In greater proportion albino leaves would be detrimental to the plant since they do not produce chlorophyll and therefore cannot process light.

Flowering:

As you may guess, Blaze stretches quite a bit in flowering but it wasn't a problem for the growing styles I used. Really easy to grow in flowering as well: smell is close to none and wasn't picky on nutes although it seems to be more of a low - mid nutrients lover. The colas are long, of medium density, and have a typical sativa calyx formation that looks like a ear of wheat. The total yield was more than acceptable. Only major downturn is that this pheno takes a full 100-105 days to mature.

Smoke Report:

While curing, and even afterward, Blaze keeps its fresh scent, a mix of mint and pine. Although the taste of the smoke is somewhat spicy, vaporized buds keep the fresh piney feeling on your tastebuds. The high is highly cerebral, but do not seem to induce paranoia.

Bottom line: This is a low odor, mass producing, easy to clone and feed sativa dominant plant but can outgrow your garden if you do not pay attention to its training and it takes a loooong time to mature.

Grower Report

April, 2004

I started with 10 seeds.

Seeds were soaked overnight in dilute Maxicrop Seaweed solution. Germinated in papertowels within 24 hours.

Seedlings were started in seedling potting soil. After 7-10 days they were transplanted into 1 gallon pots of Fox Farm Ocean Forest.

I had read that a shorter day period during the third and fourth weeks (i.e. 14 hours) would stimulate more females. Instead, 14/10 caused 8 of my plants to flower at day 22.

3 of these were female.

A week later I switched to 12/12 and the other 2 revealed themselves to be ladies as well.

I had two distinct phenos. One was light sensitive at 14/10, the other at 12/12. I called them pheno 1 and pheno 2 respectively.

I was able to take clones from pheno 2 just before I put them into flower. Of the two plants in pheno 2, the clones from one rooted in three days. The other took a little longer. They made great mother plants.

In pheno 1, there were distinct differences between the three plants.

2 smelled like bubblegum and finished at 45 days. The third plant smelled fruitier and went to 55 days. It could have gone another 5 days easily.

So in pheno 1 there were two unique sub-phenos. Pheno 1 and pheno 1b.

Pheno 2, that was light sensitive at 12/12 consisted of two plants. One plant was much smaller than the other and was sick from the day I put it into flower. The second plant was huge. After some serious nute problems due to ph lockout and salt buildup, she managed to finish around 70 days. I lost at least 2 weeks to nute problems.

Weight from pheno 1 and 1b - 40 grams

Weight from the big pheno 2 plant - 45 grams

The smoke is easy on the head, nothing too special for a stoner like myself.

While finishing the plants in flower, I had been collecting clones and moving new ladies into the flowering chamber. Some of the pics are from my "single-cola" grow. I wanted to see whether or not I could do a single cola grow in my box. However, it seems that the Bubblefunk are too branchy, turning my "single-cola" into a "mini-tree."

I started to tie my plants down to distribute the auxins to the lower branches and train the plants for less vertical height when one of my ladies snapped. I put her in the greenhouse outside and pollenated her with one of the boys. Two months later I had more than 40 seeds.

*BColumbiathum.jpg*This strain was developed in Humboldt, California back in the mid 80's. Named Heavy Duty Fruity not only because of it's extremely fruity smell and taste, which are like berries and citrus mixed together, but also because it packs a powerful punch. One of the biggest yielders in our collection. Definitely a good producer of very high quality, fruity bud. Breeders will enjoy working with HDF as it is very stable. Available only from The British Columbia Seed Company.

Grower Report

Since this was a 1st grow to test a small grow chamber, I wanted a variety that didn't need special care when growing, and I wanted to stay with North American genetics. It worked much better than I thought it would. All seeds germinated. Out of 12 seeds I ended up with 6 female and 6 male plants. I let them grow for 8 weeks (they were repotted to 6 inch pots from styrofoam cups at 4 weeks) under 16 hours of light per day, then switched to 12/12. 10 days later you could see that they had started to bud. I let them bloom for 8-1/2 weeks and then harvested the buds. The smell from the plants is always fruity and hardly noticeable. Dried the buds for 2 weeks. The smell of this variety when curing is very fruity - permeating plastic bags when dried. It smells like strong, very sweet fruit. The smoke is smooth and fruity - no choking on this one. The buzz lasts a long time - even feeling it the next day somewhat.

I also grew out some cuttings (clones) and they rooted under 16 hours of regular fluorescent (a 20 watt - 2 tube fixture, 24 inches in length) lighting in about 2 weeks. I didn't take that special care of the clones and 9 out of 10 of them rooted and I got a crop off of them as well - but the yield listed in this report is of the original 6 plants only.

The nice high you get with this variety and it's fruity taste is well worth the grow in my opinion. Not only did it amaze me but friends as well. If you're looking for a plant that doesn't need special care when growing, this is the one to grow.

I grew this as a newbie and it was as hardy, stable, squat and low odour as the classic NL reputation suggests, with all the potency as well.

Odour: Oddly, plants smelled more skunky in veg than flower, when they were sweet 'n' low odour. A very sweet 'n' citrusy grapefruit smell, but stealthy. I vented from a closet back into my small apartment and had no stink-related security issues. Heated-oil room fresheners will easily mask small grows.

M/F Ratio: 60/40, no hermaphrodites.

Uniformity: Plants generally alike, except one specimen which had more advanced branching by far than all others and in fact any plant I've had, and I now have several strains and grows under my belt. Turned out to be male so I pitched it (damn) - keep an eye out for a super-branchy plant with these!

Ease: Never any problems, very tough and resistant to my many newbie mistakes. No nute issues with 1/2 strength GH and B1. Vigourous and branchy, ideal for SCROG. My cloning techniques were not textbook and yet these took easily.

Height: Classic low Indica profile, no lanky ones here.

Yield: Buds everywhere, but they weren't very dense. I now believe this was due to newbie mistakes. I'm sure this will yield above average when

I try it again (and I will!).

Appearance: Got frosty fast and crystals stacked up everywhere. These really look great.

Flowering Time: I cut at fifty, but in retrospect I'd say leave them another 3 to 7 days to bulk out. I suspect that was what made my yield suffer.

Taste: Sweet grapefruit comes through, with definite piney, earthy tone as well. When my Bubble Gum and NL get mixed up in sessions, I know the NL because of the piney taste. Not really a mind-blowing taste, but nice enough.

Potency: Psychedelic couchlock. Delivers the hard body blow that makes walking seem inadvisable combined with a trippy, heart-pounding "gasping for reality" type of edge that can bring out the sweat. Gripping the edge of the futon and holding on for dear life, face feeling numb while your reality falls to pieces, and so on. This is the first time I've literally felt like my molars were going numb from weed. My girlfriend can handle her reefer and she pulled a whitey, freaked out and hit the sack shaking the first time we took big bong rips of this. I had to tell casual smokers to be cautious when handing them the bong. Very good for glimpsing the truth of the universe from your couch. Will allow you to concentrate very, very hard on dub reggae. Basically, this is potent dope.

Overall: Easy in all respects, short, low-odour, very strong. BCSC's Northern Lights #5 would seem to be a faithful version of the classic NL strain.

I flowered 2 British Columbia Seed Co. NL#5 along with 3 Sensi Seed Bank Northern Lights. The NL#5 out performed the Sensi in every way. The buds swelled up a lot more, earlier, and had even more resin which is saying a lot cos the Sensi is heavily resined.

This strain is very very hardy and hard to hurt. Perfect for first time growers to get them hooked on the hobby.

I vegged for 40 days and my plants grew to 4 feet from the top of the soil. If vegged sooner they should go 3-3½ feet without training.

I found two phenotypes: a pole-plant pheno that was just one big 20" cola with four little crown buds around it, and a xmas-tree pheno that has more branches, smaller cola, bigger yield but takes up more space. The xmas-tree pheno actually tastes a little better.

The smoke is amazing! <-I will add a smoke report one of these days...

Being from the NW I used to get NL#5 back in the day all the time, it was the local favorite for many years spanning the 80s and 90s. Then it all seemed to kind of dry up after BC bud became what you would normally see. So ever since I started growing I have allways wanted to see if I could get a good NL#5 plant. I didn't have any good connections to get the clone so the next best thing was seeds. I researched my ass off and after looking at all my options i.e.: Sensi's NL, Sag's NL#9, Nivana's NL, or BCSC's NL#5 I dicided to go with BC's. Their discription sounded exactly like what I wanted, a short high yielding branchy plant with great resin production and high. The tripple threat right?

Well I finally did it, I bought two packs of NL#5 and started all 24 seeds I was really only looking for that one pheno so I figured with 24 seeds I had a damm good shot.

All but 1 seed germed and then one didn't come up so I was down to 22. They all did fine as sprouts and there were no aparent runts in the mix. I transfered them into my veg room under a 1k MH once they had their first set of true leaves. They grew well in veg and I ended up with 5 males that showed in veg.

I transfed them into bloom after a month of veg. They all showed strong indica traits as advertised, some you could tell were more calumner and others more branchy. Four more ended up being males and were killed, so I was down to 13, one over 50% no complaints here.

Once they started to flower two different phenos apeared, the columnar pheno and the more brancy pheno, there were 5 columnar and 8 branchy. The columnar phenos remained shorter and the branchy phenos had more of a streach but none over 125%.

The columnar phenos were good they had average resin on most with two having slightly above average. One had a nice orange citus smell. The columnar pheno was ok, but nothing special.

The branchy pheno was my real hope because I already knew that is what I wanted, as opposed to the more columnar pheno. Unfortunately the brancy pheno of which there was 8 plants were almost all crap. Three had to be killed at 30 days because they were straight up hermi's and not just bannana's either (which all but 1 brachy pheno had) but full on nut sacks growing out of the buds. So I was down to 5 branchy pheno's after that. Those left had below average resin production with a generic, skunky/fuely smell and no pungency/potency at all.

Need less to say I was very disapointed with NL#5 from BCSC and would't recomend it to anyone. It was a total waste of time.

The pics I included with this report are mainly from the columnar pheno's as they were the only ones photo worthy but I also included a couple of pics of a brancy pheno for you guys to see.

Grower Report

May, 2005

Well, this was officially one of the most depressing experiences of my life. I spent months planning my first grow and building a wardrobe grow cabinet. I spent $1800 on equipment. I spent 3 months growing the plants. I started with 6 seeds. 1 didn't germinate, so I started a 7th. I got 2 females and ended up removing one of them to give more room to the other.

At harvest time there were virtually no trichomes on the buds, but the buds were very large and nice looking aside from that. The plant grew very well and easily for the most part. It just about doubled in height after switching to 12/12. The plant yielded about after drying 3 oz.

The horrible news is that the plant had LITERALLY no potency. I simply couldn't get high off the bud. Not even a little head change.

I stupidly believed that this was some genetic anomaly, and I decided to grow the last 2 seeds out in my computer case. One of them was female. Guess what... It sucks too. I just harvested and am very depressed. I'm pissed that BCSC could release these genetics. Although I must admit that the seeds were obtained from Marc Emery before he got busted. They were not in special breeder's packaging with logo etc, so I suppose there's a chance that Emery screwed up, but I highly doubt it. I don't know if BCSC even uses special packaging or if they were using special packaging at the time the seeds were obtained. This second plant hasn't been weighed yet, but it looks like about 1 to 1.5 oz.

So my first two and only grows were all for nothing. Totally worthless. It's hard to imagine a more depressing situation given all the months of waiting and all the care and planning and money spent.

I sent both BCSC and Marc Emery emails to explain what happened. Neither of them replied to my emails. That is super lame if you ask me, and as a result I will not be purchasing their seeds again.

Everything advertised about this strain came true in the sense that it was easy to grow, high yielding, short, and low odor. However there were two major things that didn't fit the bill... it took closer to 70 days to mature, and it had zero potency and no THC trichomes.

This report is on the 50/50 phenotype, not Genius. Yield is better with this pheno. Germ rate was 9/10 with 4 females This was the 2nd female chosen from a pack of BG A11 F1's.

This was an extremely easy plant to grow. GH nutes at 1.6 EC, E&F setup. Very vigorous during veg, seemed to like the nutes. They were vegged for 30 days, and topped twice. Placed in my SCROG and trained for 10-14 days. This is by far the easiest strain to train. I just love it. Abundant branching provides numerous budsites.

Stretch during flower wasn't bad, though this is my stretchiest strain. I am able to keep it 4"-5" above the screen. The 50/50 has stronger branching than Genius. If you have to many budsites the buds are small. Maybe 1 per 2 sq. in.

The plants mature at 47 days. Be sure to flush nutes the last couple weeks. Easy to manicure, you just have lots of smaller buds. The nugs are dense with tons of trichomes. I prefer the smaller buds. Easier to store and more THC per toke.

A11 is fairly low odor. It smells sorta like lemon pledge, but milder. No odor problems here. Taste is like mild spicy lemons and very expansive in the lungs. Smooth, nice smoke. I just smoked a 45 day cured bud and was impressed with the taste even more. Really is great after a long cure.

The high is well awesome. It is clear, and uplifting. No couchlock unless you smoke too much. Take 3-4 hits and wait. I will always have A11 around and highly recommend this strain for SCROG. A TOP 5 for sure.

California Indica from Brothers Grimm

brosgrm-thumap11-2.jpg Bros Grimm got so many requests for a good "couch-lock" Indica that we decided to test a pure Indica cross. We grew out a large sample group - these are the type of plants one might see a picture of in the dictionary under the definition of "Indica". Dark green, broad leaves, short stature, thick stalks and heavily branched...this pure strain produces heavy buds with a NARCOTIC stone.

I grew this strain from m/f seeds purchased at HS. They were vigorous growers in veg and flower, and gave very few problems along the way. 4 seeds were started, 3 females and 1 male from the batch. The male was discarded as I was just looking for smokables on this grow. 2 of the 3 females were very squat, with about 3/4" internode spacing, and very good branching. Plants were vegged for 6 weeks, then put into flower. Plants showed sex around week 5 by the way. These plants (the 2 squat females) hardly stretched in flowering, although the branches did stretch a bit. Flowering was fast and vigorous as well, showing nice bud formations at 3 weeks, and beginning to reek up the place! If you have odor concerns with your security, measures should be taken to keep the smell down. Very pungent weed in grow and smoke! Plants were done in 53 days, and were some of the resinest buds I have produced to this day. Great for bubble hash, this is a leafy strain, but the leaves accompanying the buds are covered in trichomes, so you have the option of leaving them on. Super dense buds, care must be taken to keep the air moving in flowering, as the combination of bud density and heavy resin content make these a candidate for mold.

All in all, a very solid indica, not a lot of yield, although a longer veg time may improve your yields. Recommended highly for body pain, arthritis, etc., don't smoke too much too early as the high is extreme couchlock, with no cerebral effect whatsoever!

DTC99 from Brothers Grimm

From: Brothers Grimm

*brosgrm-thumap11-2.jpg*The Super Sativa Seed Club (SSSC) bred a Thai strain for four generations to stabilize its traits favoring indoor cultivation. SSSC's famous Durban Poison male was used to pollinate a particularly sweet Thai female from this fourth generation. The hybrid was called "Durban Thai Highflier" by SSSC is has quite a reputation among Cannabis "Old-timers". They exhibited the best genes from both sides of their heritage, maturing early and remaining reasonably compact due to the Durban's influence. True Thai weed is sickly sweet, but when crossed with the Durban, the hybrid took on a taste distinctly like black licorice. Bros Grimm decided to cross a particularly early-maturing female SSSC Durban Thai with a Cinderella 99 male. Expect a hybrid that is heavily Sativa-dominant, yet suited to indoor cultivation.

The DTC99 is a strain created by the BROTHERS GRIMM. It is a cross of SSSC Durban Thai Highflyer x Bros Grimm Cinderella 99. This is supposedly one of MrSoul's favorites. This was the first Bros Grimm strain I ever bought, I read so much about the Cinderella and Apollo, I figured these guys knew what they were doing. I was not disappointed.

I bought the seeds from Heavens Stairway Canada in 2001. I germed the seeds in 2003 and got 9/10. Damn good if you ask me. 5 of the plants died in an accident by my partner, I couldn't believe it. Of the 4 remaining plants, I got 3 females and 1 male. Note: the male was originally a female (had the female pre-flower indicators with pistils) but it is now a full on male, with the male spade pre-flowers. The plants grew quite vigorously with the exception of #5, this one was a bit behind the rest. I cloned all the plants and had approximately 80% success, so it was fairly easy to clone. The male is #2 the females are #3, #4, and #5. The plants were all looking finished in less than 50 days so I cut em down, I pollinated #5 so it went an extra 10 days for good measure. They were all very nice plants, easy to maintain and handled the nutes well (I went 75% of the recommended dosages to ensure easy flush).

The plants may look a bit less than optimum because my pump was down for 3 days before I realized it, this occurred during the 5th-6th week of flower. I flowered them at approximately 10in., #3 and #4 stretched like crazy, these 2 ended up at a little over 2 ft. #3 and #4 also had long side branches that stretched all the way across my grow tray which is 4 ft wide. Some buds that I thought belonged to #5 were actually from #3 and #4. That was a very nice trait as they seemed to want to grow everywhere, kind of doing its thing for me by filling the open spaces with flower tops. #5 however didn't stretch at all, this one ended up under 1.5 ft., and there were no sprawling branches like the other 2. The resin gland formation was very nice, overall a very nice feature of this strain, for some reason, the resin on these DTC99's was more attractive than the AK47's (F1; cherry pheno) I had growing next to them. They were nowhere close in the yield department though, the AK out yeilded these guys by almost triple.

The smoke from #5 was the best, this one had me tripping out a bit, kind of spacey feeling. Heavy duty in the fuck with your head dept, there is not much body though, I can feel the bottom of the high but it is not very heavy in that dept. As I smoke #5 right now, it is clearly my favorite. Tastes like licorice cotton candy, sweet and spicy, this one is my 100 % keeper. Also during flowering this one started to turn purple on me, buds and leaves.

Note: During the middle of flowering the DTC99, I installed a new A/C unit, so there might be something to that.

The smoke from #3 was decent but nothing special, in fact im almost certain the high/stone is totally unacceptable as a keeper, I will run it 1 more time to be sure. The trait that stands out about this one was the yield, almost double the weight of the other 2. The buds on this plant had better density, they were heavy while the other 2 were a bit light in the weight department, not airy at all. The bud formation of all the specimens seemed to be mainly at the top of the plant, so the #3 was falling over but the canopy supported it nicely with no adverse affect on the surrounding plants. The stretch was also the most in this one, and the structure did not support much. #3 also had some purple but not as much as #5.

Now #4 wins the contest for best looks, this was one of the most unique bud formations I have ever seen. It was growing braided buds like a pure sativa but it was forming the little bud/flowers in a tight fashion, not loose whatsoever but the resin content was very much like an indica. Like bud dreadlocks or braids. This had great taste, a bit stronger in taste than the #5, but similar flavors. This one did not turn purple whatsoever. The #4 also had the most pronounced resin formation. The resin was all over the place on this one, even on the leaf stalks there were crazy standing trich's; defiantly the most resinated out of the 3 females. The smoke was also nothing too special similar to #3, but with a bit more sativa kick. The structure of the plant was similar to #3 with a decent amount of stretch but it stood straight up, unlike #3 which was very leggy.

Overall I'm very happy about the DTC99, this was not a waste of my time, space, and energy. Although the yield leaves something to be desired, the smoke I got was worth it, and the finishing time is great. I will run all 3 plants again for a final test, but I'm certain that the #5 will be kept, its now all about observing #3 and #4.

The pictures I have included are pics from harvest time. I also have pics of the plants in veg, but the pics in flower are much more interesting. Anyways please enjoy. peace and positive vibes. asiatica

I grew out 3 packs of Grimm's White Shark from seeds. Very stable looking strain, I found 2 phenos. One very skunky looking the other more like Widow. Both are very frosty indeed, they taste and smoke nearly the same. The skunk looking pheno is very strong smelling like a skunks arse. Very happy with this strain, pretty good yeilder too. The taste of the smoke is very fruity with a kick like a mule, it hits hard. A very narcotic stone if you over do it. I'm keeping this strain around for a fair while as it's got that old time stone and taste to her. All round I'd give it a 8 for ease of growth plus the stone.

Source Description

brosgrm-thumap11-2.jpg Created by crossing the mother of Cinderella 99 to a male White Widow from Green House which actually had resinous leaves! This strain will be the resin queen of the new millennium. Ice Princess grows best indoors, producing a compact plant which matures rapidly into a sticky, crystal-covered "Christmas tree". Her flavour and scent combine spices & fruits, but with a skunky undertone. The high is cerebral, but with more "body effect" than Cinderella.

Germination: Place seeds in a cup of water for 12 hours, and plant in a cup till they pop up. Then put under lights.

Veg: Transplant into 2 gallons pots, light on for 18 hours. Veg till about 5-8 inches tall.

Flowering: Topped and feed with earth juice and Foxfarm. After sexed transplant into a 4-5 gal. Depending on how tall I want. Harvest around cloudy with a few amber trichs! Depending on what ones self likes. This weed was so good and Brothers Grimm you can't find, so I breed the last two males and a females of the original pack of seeds I bought. Also made a cross between the BG-IP male with a Dutch Passion female also. The Ice Princess will grow tall and lanky if not careful.

Smoke report: I'll put it this way, it is hard to finish a joint by yourself!! But fun trying.

Source Description

brosgm-thumap11-2.jpg Rosetta Stone is a fast-flowering plant with heavy resin production and average yield. It clones remarkably well and is generally an easy plant to work with. It was created by pollinating a unique Ginger-Ale female (Ginger Ale makes the densest nuggets we've ever seen) with a male we've tracked for a long time as a reliable resin-enhancing father. Rosetta Stone is a super potent, wonderfully sweet, fruity smelling, perfectly balanced Sativa/Indica hybrid. A definite keeper in any connoisseurs garden.

This plant has a pleasant smell and is fairly easy to grow. The smell while growing and the smell once cut are different. While growing it had a fruity/floral smell. As it cured the smell and taste turned to more of that like hash/mild spicy taste. The smoke was very smooth. The buds are covered almost completely with bright orange hairs. The nugs are fairly dense and lost about half their weight while curing. This green is definitely creeper bud. It takes about a full half hour to kick in. The buzz is very much in the head. It can also be psychedelic if you smoke enough. Your eyes will get a little fuzzy and colors will stick out more or prisms will appear on white surfaces. Buzz feels like there is some pressure on your temples. You are still able to move around quite easily. But the buzz will drift throughout your body. People have passed on hitting this due to being too high. I have found I can peak out so it does seem to have a limit, but that could just be me. All and all a fairly nice strain to grow. A real good afternoon buzz.

I really enjoyed this strain, although it was a bit pain to grow, it did not stretch as much as I was expecting and was surprisingly manageable. It was extremely sensitive to nutrients, especially nitrogen. I had 6 Destroyer seeds, all germed and I got 3/6 females.

Destroyer is a cross of Thai and Mex/Col, and I got 1 of the Mex/Col pheno and 2 Thais. The Mex/Col finished at about 70 days and yielded about 30 grams of very high quality bud. The bud was extremely crystallized as well as the close trim, although it was not very dense at all. It had a nice piney minty hashy taste. The high was a very nice head buzz with a little body and some interesting minor visuals such as tracers.

One of the Thai pheno plants simply didn't make it through the canopy and was sort of sick, I took it down shortly after Mex/Col because it had many cloudy trichs. This plant yielded only about 7 grams, but the high was soaring.

After the 2nd plant was cut, the only plant left in my flower room was my big healthy Thai pheno plant, I moved it right under the light and spread its branches out to get light to all the lower buds. I also gave it a couple small shots of 0-10-10 fertilizer at this point to see if I could stimulate some more bud growth. Well, the plant simply blew up at this point. All larger buds had to be tied up so they wouldn't fall over and the plant just kept pumping out more bud up until day 108 of flower when I finally decided it was done growing. This plant weighed in to an astounding (to me at least) 110 grams. My largest cola weighed in right at 1 ounce, but I had to cut it up to fit it into my biggest curing jar.

10/10 germinated and 8 were females. They were grown in pots in organic soil on a very sunny terrace. They were germinated in late January and force flowered after 10 weeks.

There were 2 basic bud types with others somewhere in between -- a tighter, faster flowering bud and a looser (but by no means scrawny), longer flowering bud. They were all very good to exceptional in terms of vegetative growth and resin production characteristics. The smell during flowering was a beautiful fruit salad.

They had excellent structure with very little stretch -- although the growing conditions help a lot in this department. I can not comment on how they would be indoors.

They were very light feeders, especially sensitive to nitrogen. The looser bud types were the most sensitive.

The tighter group were harvested at around 60/65 days of flowering (counting from first proper flowers) and the others between day 70 and 80. The yield of the tight group was very good and the other group less but also good.

They all cloned very easily and the clones were placed on a balcony receiving light from a streetlight at night. All of them eventually started some kind of flowering despite the light at night. Again, I can't comment on how they would perform indoors under constant 24 hour light.

The high from all 8 plants is excellent -- after sampling lower buds of them all, I closed them up to cure. I'm now smoking them 1 by 1 instead of dipping into each one. I have just finished a jar of one of the loose bud plants and have just started on a jar of the other type. The smell in the jar is good -- astringent fruit, and the taste is pleasant but not a strong point.

The effect is very animating with no paranoia (for me anyway) and no comedown. In other words a good strong sativa high to be used as such.

Taskenti from Canna Biogen

*cannaBiogen.jpg*A 100% Indica originated in Uzbekistan. Its name comes from one of the best hash in the world, according to experts; a very powerful and resinous strain, of enormous yield, mainly outdoors. It has a refined and subtle hashish perfume, a shade between mint and lemon, very intense.

Original latitude and height cultivation conditions have made its acclimatization very simple, similar to Southern Spain Mountains. Nevertheless a meticulous selection and improvement work has been done to fix genetic dominance for the most important aspects, allowing simultaneously diversifying the zones of growing indoors (also hydroponics) and outdoors.

12 for 12 germed, all within 72 hours. I started them under a 250w Metal Halide for their first couple weeks of life, they all grew fairly uniform.

I like to veg until I see pre-flowers, so the veg time varied a few weeks for the plants, though all vegged for over 30 days.

I ended up with 5 girls, and two distinct phenos. One is more columnar and holds its branches close to the main stalk, and smells a little heavier. The second pheno is sweeter smelling and a little more spread out in form. Both produce dense tight buds.

The dried bud is not overwhelming to smell, has a tight form and is heavier than I'm used to. This strain has more leaf in the buds than I usually end up with, but it doesn't detract from the quality at all.

I don't want to miss a detail when describing the high because this strain has outstanding smoke! As you inhale the first hit, you will notice that there is little taste on your tongue, and no bite on your throat. Then the smoke expands into your lungs and you notice that it feels very thick. As you exhale you taste lemon and a hint of pine- then the coughing starts....

To me the high is a bit of a creeper, although I feel the full effects within 10-12 minutes of smoking. This is a surprising high for me I was expecting more of a sleepy stone, but this stuff is euphoric, very happy high, but definitely will put you to bed if you smoke too fast.

One interesting thing I've noticed over the last few days smoking Taskenti is that I tend to feel memories stronger -kind of nostalgia inducing. This is the most unique tasting Indica I have and my new personal favorite Indica high.

IMHO this strain will make great breeding stock, though it's great all by itself.

I germinated 10 seeds only 4 were female, no hermies, and 6 males. I vegged these for 28 days, 21 under 4 4' flouro tubes and the last week of veg was under a 400W MH which I also flowered with the first time around. There wasn't a lot of branching unless topped or LSTed, and they were very uniform in stature. It would be a great strain for a SOG grow. 3 of the females were left to grow single colas and 1 was topped. There wasn't much of a difference in yield between the topped and untopped girls.

Where this strain really shines as far as growing goes is the next generation. Clones rooted very easily in peat pellets 7-10 days. And when you can fill your whole space with these plants you will get a great yield. I had 10 LSTed clones give me 11.5 oz from a 400W HPS in 45 days. I now flower with a 600W HPS and they really pack on the weight under the extra wattage.

Potency was much better than expected from a $30 pack of seeds. The original seed plants were pretty potent, but the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd generation clones just keep getting better.

BigGun definately has a perminant place in my grow room. I've kept 2 mothers both from my favorite 1st generation clone.

The first few weeks of flowering stretched the bushy plants a little bit, by this time they were about two feet in height. The plants showed there sex in as little as a week, with bud formation at around two weeks. I harvested at 58 days, at this time the buds were thick with white trich's and heavy with weight. One of the better strains I've gotten to work with. Check the pics to see what I'm talking about

I smoked a 1g joint after just a week of drying (cured buds are yet to be smoked). A very hard hitting stone, makes your body feel disconnected from you mind, and my body became feeling fuzzy, almost numb. Just two or three tokes is all it takes, a whole joint is just overkill. Smoke the whole thing and your guaranteed to pass out. A great nighttime bud, or for medical purposes. A 8/10 smoke rating

I started with two seeds which both germinated in about 24 hours. The smaller plant went male and the larger went female. I found Cinderella 99 to be extremely easy to grow. By mid flowering I had her taking in 3 times the recommended dosage of age old bloom and foxfarms big bloom and she never showed the slightest bit of nute burn. She flowered and ripened very fast and I cut her down at 49 days. The high can be very racey at first. The high for the most part has lived up to the hype that surrounds it. The raceyness that the high begins with subsides after maybe 45 minutes into a much more sleepy indica feeling high. Kind of like the best of both worlds. I enjoyed growing this strain very much and would recommend it to anyone.

December, 2003

I germed 10 Matanuska seeds and got 8 hardy plants -- ALL FEMALE! I did not buy feminized seeds but I typically have a high female ratio. This is the most plants I've ever gotten 100% female on tho from regular seeds (have gotten 100% on 4 seeds at least twice). I would describe this strain as a good solid plant -nothing spectacular (other than fem ratio!), and nothing disappointing.

Growing

7 of the plants were almost identical -this strain is pretty stable. 1 plant was more sativa dominant and started stretching even in veg. The one bad thing I can say about this is the sativa has autoflowering traits! The sativa dominant looked ready to burst into flower when I put it into flower and it did flower quick. The clone I took autoflowered under 24 hour lighting @ about 2 months genetic age. The indicas did not have autoflower problems. I experienced a bizarre yellowing in half of one plant don't know what that was about. I yielded a half an ounce on each plant average in 2 gallon vertical treepot containers. After checking the pots root growth was inhibited by the tall pots and I feel this hurt yield significantly. They probably could've gone an additional 1-2 weeks for additional yield and more potent couchlock effect. Bud is nice and thick very much like commercial bagweed you often see not airy at all. As I said I probably could've gotten some good additional yield gains and more potent couchlock type buzz by letting it go another week or two but I wasn't able to wait. Yield was a consistent 1/2 oz give or take 1/8.

High

High was very good. When you first smoke it (or if you're not a heavy smoker) it's pretty cerebral but with a good 'Huh?' couchlock stone at the same time. It definitely has a ceiling to it so that you never get crazy high, but the thing I liked best about it is that even if you are a heavy smoker like me, it always gets you decently stoned by smoking a bowl or two and never develops a total tolerance to where you feel like you're almost not getting stoned. If you aren't a heavy smoker this strain will knock ya on your ass. Good overall medicinal effects and good to help ya get to sleep although it doesn't make you sleepy. I found you can even smoke this during the day and work if you have some tolerance to it. So maybe not the strain if you're going for killer knockout high but for a good overall high I give it a thumbs up. I don't plan to buy any in the future though only because so many other plants can give a similar high. A friend is going to try to reveg his flowering plants and if he's able to I may grow a clone out from the clones I gave him.

The most disappointing part of this strain is bag appeal. None of the plants really got super frosty and even though I opened the grow room window and let cold air come in to bring temps down into the 60s I didn't see any color changing. Still I smoked ounces of this stuff for weeks and it kept doing it's job and that's the most important thing.

Four seeds were germinated for this grow , the other six from the pack were lost on earlier mistakes. 4/4 seeds germinated , however one came up a week late and later died.Plants were fairly easy to take care of during veg.started feeding them pure blend pro veg two weeks in , and later started adding cal-mag to the mix because of some yellowing.Plants were kept in vegetative growth for 4 weeks , I beleive sex was shown during the first week of flowering.Ended up with two males and one female.During veg one of the plants showed vigorus growth , growing much taller than the other two. This was the first to show sex with large ammounts of pollen sacs.

During flower I used pure blend pro fruit and flowering and never had any problems with nut def.Un-topped this strain will produce a very large main cola , take care to watch out for mold!! Keep an eye on that humidity during the dark cycle.Plant was harvested at 56 days , Id estimate its yield was about 2 OZ.

Smoke

High from this stuff is pretty good , If you dont toke much a few hits will get you relly stoned. When I first started toking it I found it to be slightly paranoia inducing , If you smoke a great deal it starts to become a couchlock high. Overall Im pleased with the results of this strain , this was my frist grow and this plant was very easy to care for and produced some decent bud. I dont think I will be growing it again though , time to move on to something frostier.

I put them into flowering to pre sex; after 12 days the first girl showed, then 2 days later the other. It took a while for them to revert to veg stage so I could start the clone process. After around 45 days there was enough growth to take a few cuttings. The first batch of clones perished (user error). After some searching, I made a clone chamber out of an old ice chest & fluoro strip for a fish tank. It works great. I have an 80-90% survival rate. The clones were put under 12/12 for around 55-60 days. I sampled buds at 45 & 50; they were good, but the high faded quick. Also the last 10-15 days they really fill out. The buzz/high is mellow, not slamming you, very functional. Often I can't tell that I'm high at all, till I try to do something other than what I was doing at that moment. Doesn't really make you crash either, fades nice & even. I'll probably keep it around for breeding projects, seems to increase a lot of desirable indoor traits especially yield with the Sk1.

Peak19 f2s from CSC. I wasn't overly happy with this plant through germ and veg. But the two phenos I ended up with are lookin fine, one is very indy (MTF) dom, and her sister is on the other side of the scale being very sativa (Stonehenge) dom.

I run a perpetual harvest so I don't alter my nutes for new strains. The Peak19 just didn't seem to like my formula. I think they like to feed a little heavier than the rest of my crew. They expressed N and MG deff mid way through veg, when no other strain shows symptoms before late flowering stage. Out of 6 seeds started I got 3 males & one runt, but the 2 girls that made it to flower are looking well,

I harvested the first of the Peak19s, this was the smaller of the two, w/ much more indy traits than the other. Buds are extremely dense, very good cat to leaf ratio. The cured smoke will determine the fate of this strain, as of now I have no plans to make a mother plant of this strain. Frosty pics none the less.

The cured smoke of the Peak19 is good. Very good indy dominant high, couch-lock for sure, but enough of a sativa influence to keep you from passing out. The flavor is subtle, a hint of garlic accompanies the herbal flavor of the strain. Not as strong a high as I expected, and the smell and flavor were some what lacking compared to the stench they gave off in flower. Yield was average, but buds did have very nice bag appeal, with their bright lime green color contrasted by the brown/red hairs. Overall I'd say this strain is a 6, no way Top5 material.

I only started 2 super silver haze seeds from capricorn. both germed within 48 hours, and i put them in 16 oz styrofoam cups with promix potting soil and perlite. one of them grew somewhat slowly, while the other one grew very vigorously with large indica looking leaves. when they were about 7 inches tall i transplanted them to 3 gallon pots with promix, perlite, bone and blood meal. the slower plant was a male which was chopped.

the fast grower turned out to be female. i topped it and placed it outside in a very large pot, probably about 8 gallons of soil. as the plant grew, it looked more and more like a sativa. it began flowering in late august, at which point it was about 3 feet tall and very branchy. it was outside till about october 20th, where i finished it inside under 400 watts of hps. it flowered till late november. i chopped it with about 5% amber trichs, mostly white and clear, i tihnk it could have gone longer.

harvested about 3.5 ounces of dry bud off this 5 foot plant. buds were long and airy with fat calyxes and lots of shiny trichs. the smoke was smooth and had a sweet classic haze taste. very strong weed. you feel the buzz instantly. its a very heady high, not much couchlock at all. i think it would have been a 10 in potency if i let it go a little longer. would definitely recommend this strain to a somewhat experienced grower. would absolutely reccommend it for outdoor if you have the climate to accomodate it

Aurora was my first plant I ever grew three years ago. Since then I have grown out 3 packs and fell like I've had a pretty good impression of the strain.

It is quite variable in both structure and potency. Some plants will lean towards the Christmas tree shape of the NL while others grow like the branchy blue dom Chimera uses. Expect a little stretch, usually about 2 x the height at flower to an overall height of about 3.5 feet. As for potency some bud comes out like straight NL but others come out as a nice mix of both and some are dripping with resin and take after the dom. She has been the first plant in my garden a few times to show PH or overfert problems, I believe she is a light feeder.

I have two mothers now, one is a short pole that flowers in 45-50 days with a narcotic heavy ass stone while the other takes 60 days and is bigger but not as narcotic, it grows like a Christmas tree. I will be growing out more seeds as I know about one in every 5 or 6 females is really super potent and I don't have that female in my mother room but I know I can find her in a pack or two. I have before.

Over-all one of my favorite strains, I encourage more people to grow it out.

I put just three C4 seeds under paper towels, all popped, two were female. The two females were grown with there four other female friends, for 12/12 under a toasty 400w HPS (+100w side lighting)

The ladies were not hot and heavy under the bright HPS the whole time however, they were under two, 60w florescents with a few of their boy-pals (three) who I eventually tossed for there excessive manly-ness. The two C4 girls were nearly identical in growth characteristics. They were both short, yet firm and strong ladies. Kinda bushy in their bottoms but had a nice, long cola towards the top. Their plump budlets started to form in about 16 days flowering, and started smelling quite a bit.

By week 6 (37 days) they really be began showing a side of them I never saw before. Their hairs were changing colors, and their buds were getting perky like never before!! Man, was I in for a treat...

I had to hold on, I knew they were not mature and it would be wrong to take that away from them so early in there life. The last two weeks were unbearable, every day I would come home to their sparkly, erect buds, luring me with there piney fragrance. Damn there nugs of perfection were getting hard! Dense and firm I tell ya...

When the day came, I could hardly hold my hands firm to cut their stalk. For I was too excited of what joy we would have together after their short-hang in the closet (10 days, w/ purfier for air flow). After I dismembered their firm, smell & hairy bodyparts, I put them in jars for the cure (2 wks, lid opened once a day).

SMOKE REPORT... now this is the day I was waiting for, I have to admit I nabbed a little samples before the cure, but this is the smoke I will report on.

It hits nice and soft with a piney taste. A few times you can almost hint at a fruity taste, hard to describe but its citrusy (orange?). I took just a few hits -holding them in for a while, on the second I began to feel the effects. A wave of highness moved threw my body, & I was more relaxed, as I slouched deeper into the couch, not to move for a good half an hour. It really makes you good for the munchies and great for a movie for sure. Hard to remember the last half of the report (damn potent shit!!). 9/10 smoke rating on C4.

C4 from Chimera

From: Chimera

Source Description

*chimera-thum.jpg*A quick finisher, the C-4 is unassuming and disappointing until it BLOWS UP in the final week or so of flowering. Medicinally, it is a great strain in that it is very fast to hit; a few puffs and you definitely feel it, so it would be a good strain for those looking to accurately control dosage. This was the first of Chimera's strains that I have grown, and I was very pleased with it. It has proven to be a favourite among my circle of friends, as the smoke is refreshing and won't knock you out. A perfect balance of sativa and indica.

2 Seeds were started indoors under a 400hps with a few other ladies.

These were started quite late, maybe 3 -4 weeks after the other seedlings.

It was planted out at maybe 30-40cm tall and proceeded to grow really well.

One seed became a boy which was promptly removed to allow the C4 to reach full sensi-potential.

Big leaves in veg and a nice bushy structure soon exploding into numerous golf-ball budsites. Couple days later and they`re massive golf-ball like buds. Solid and round.

From the get go the smell was strong, citrusy but rather over-ripe in it`s smell. A very fast finisher which puts on most of it`s weight later in flower. Covered in crystal it glistens in the sun.

Smoke-wise I took some early testers and smoked one nice sized bud over a 2 week period and boy it was one dazed session. Very expansive smoke in the begging creating many a coughing fit. But with such heady, couchlocky smoke it`s ok to cough when you drift into your head. Tunnel vision smoke and a serious conversation killer.

After a further 4-5month cure the high becomes more sativa/heady and visual over the massive couchlock, silent group effect. It becomes very trippy I find after a few bowls.

A couple bowls wakenbake style will keep you going for ages.

A definite keeper in my garden for yield, quality and all round great smoke. Personal smoke only shared with close friends.

I grew out half a pack of C4 from Chimera back in 2004 and this was the best female. 6 seeds sowed, 3 males - 3 females. Extremely tolerant of nutes and very vigorous. Rapid growth throughout veg and flower. Very thick resin packs on early in flower. This plant stayed green and healthy while others in my garden were exhibiting nute burns from overfert. The odor consisted of a pungent celery type, very different then anything I have experienced. Near the end of flowering I was expecting the buds to fatten out but instead it just hardened up and foxtailed, not that it's a bad thing ;) High yeilder

End result consisted of dense buds with extreme resin (these pics do not do justice). Smoked smooth with pungent piney fuel taste with some kind of vegetable fragrance similar to celery. More head then body stone and long lasting. A very different and unique smoke at best. People were asking for more C4 as it was much different then all the skunky and fruity stuff going around. I give C4 an A- low growers. I also would like to add since my first report in Jan 04 (below), that I feel if SOGged "small" Calizahr would give you some fat bud-cycles. I haven't tried Calizahr SOGged, but from watching the plant grow I surely can see it.

Calizahr is a breeze to grow, a little needy on the feed but not bad. Germ rate was 100 percent and I ended up with 50/50 on the male/female ratio.

These big ol? bushy plants are structured perfectly for Tree/Bush/Scrog style grows. Lots and lots of side branches that produce some nice buds. Due to the amount of lower side branching massive amounts of training would be in store for one who chose to SOG her.

This Calizahr was grown using organics such as top soil, peat, cow manure, bone/blood meal, green sand and fox farms big bloom. I can?t say it was 100% organic as I once used FF Grow Big during veg, but very close to all organic.

Pulled at 58 days her high is nice and balanced. Powerful, I Give her an 8 of 10, She comes on strong, stays a good spell then disappears without a trace. Calizahr does not tend to drag one down. Which a parent of hers (Cali-O) is know for, a nice daytime high that leaves you active.

She could have gone a bit longer maybe 60- 65 days or so. I harvested because the lower buds were starting to fall over from their own weight. The branches were drooping a little more each day. Very dense solid buds, citrus-y smell, the 28? incher produced almost 2 oz. Not bad at all! It has a mellow creamy orange-y-zest thing going on in the flavor dept.

Her flavor is mellow as stated, but I must add that it has Cindy-ish overtones about her. Not saying they taste the same cause they don't, just have the same style of flavor. Where Cindy is of pineapples and grapefruits, Calizahr is of creamy-orange zest.

Over all I liked Calizar. I have one in the bubbler that has just exploded into a massive bush! It looks like she was screened though she was not.

Grower Report

October, 2003

I grew out the Calizahr from seed in the light-polluted, space-limited world of a northern European urban balcony. I was quite impressed with the hardiness of this plant -by the end of the season it had become a bit rootbound but it still produced very potent, dense buds despite being harvested early because of inclement weather.

In the veg phase it does everything that I like to see a plant do: extremely short internodal space, stocky christmas tree shape, nice, strong branching.

In the flowering phase it added dense, thick buds which were extremely sticky and trichome laden. It basically became a christmas tree laden with colas.

Despite its sativaish characteristics I managed to get it to finish on time (mid October). Without the light pollution problem so common to outdoor growing in cities it probably would have finished about 1 week earlier. So I am happy to have found this quality strain with sativa characteristics for my clime.

The high is quite potent despite the early harvest. It produces what I like to call a philosophical stone. Can be smoked both in the daytime and is not a party killer unless too much is smoked. Actually, it is the best weed I have come across for hanging out at the lake and swimming, wind surfing, rowing etc.

This plant does well indoors and out. Even very small clones put into flowering will produce dense buds.

Favorite characteristics of strain:

Easy harvest! Very little trimming is required with these dense, compact buds. Also very few popcorn buds towards main stem.

Extremely easy to clone. I have not seen a single one of the clones from this plant die. All in all, an excellent strain for finding a long-term mom.

Compact growth. I like plants that have short internodal spacing and don't need to be topped, fimmed, etc.

Mold-resistant despite thick, dense buds. This has become a problem with other strains in my clime.

Needed only a moderate amount of ferts. I used a mild, sugar beet based organic fert in veg and the sea kelp-based 'Plagron Alga Bloom' in the flowering phase.

A note of caution when growing this strain:

Some of the plants have a tendency to get red stems. This seems to be a natural quality of the plant and does not mean it is unhealthy and needs to be drowned in ferts. Also, some plants will naturally have light green leaves.

When it starts getting cold, a majority of the plant may turn red, making it a great plant to grow guerilla style in a stand of young red maple trees.

Conclusion: Definitely a keeper.

Grew quite vigorously in Vegetative state. They stretched somewhat mildly when flowered @ 7wks of age. From seed they took ~ 57 days, from clone we got one as early as 42 days, most @ 49-50.

Clones took easily. 14 days with some stress in soil w/ humidome. 7-10 days in AeroCloner with NO signs of stress.

They seem to like median levels of fertilizer, and are quite stress resistant. One of our ORIGINAL Frostbite from seed is still in its pot @ 7 months age, after being harvested 2 months ago it is was re-vegged and is about to be a big time momma (and is still in immaculate condition).

Chimera's Frost Bite produces long trichome covered colas. The bud grows at almost every region along the main cola from the bottom of the stem upwards. You have never seen anything like it when it does that. Hardly any visible node regions on the stem that do not contain bud.

Frost Bite is a very resinous strain and produces are very strong smoke. Frost Bite has some of the best trichome development you can find on any strain. The glands are clearly visible within a few days from initial flowering and cover most of the cola leaves to their tips.

The problem with this strain is that is does not branch too well and the calyx to leaf ration is quite low - meaning that you will have to do lots of manicuring to prepare the bud. Check my pictures.

Overall Frost Bite is not a bad strain and is a must for trichome lovers who want to enjoy a frosty plant.

Seeds were started on 8/27/2003. By 8/31 all the Frostbite seeds had sprouted and the seedlings fully emerged. Plants were vegged under 24/0 lighting until 10/16, when they were placed in the flowering room under 12/12 light schedule. All plants were harvested on 12/20 (day 65).

Plants were grown SOG style in 4 gallon square pots. All lower branches/nodes were trimmed off to increase budmass in the upper (main) colas. Soil was Miracle Gro potting soil, with GH series hydro nutes given for fertilization. Soil/nute amendments & supportives added: Biohumic/fulvic acid, "Dark Energy" plant supplement, and finely crushed eggshells.

This was a fairly easy to grow plant, not at all fussy. It was described as being primarily a "single cola" strain (columnar) and my experience with it upholds that description. It was branchless and held true to type as a columnar plant. One plant was too vigorous during the stretch, and had to be topped in order to stay within bounds, but the plant still remained quite branchless even after topping.

It was also described as a very heavy yielder -and again, my experience with it fully supports that description. This plant gets HUGE! In fact, I would strongly suggest staking these feisty critters up during flowering -they get so fat and so heavy that even a thick stem isn't able to support the weight of the buds.

Taste was surprisingly powerful, given the relatively low odor of this plant. It produced a very intense pine/cedar flavor, rather like smoking incense rather than cannabis -simply excellent. The effect was somewhat couchy and overall quite pleasant, tho it gave a powerful attack of

This plant does NOT like too low pH. You are going to have to keep it faithfully in the 6.5 - 7 range. Given that, I don't think it's any harder to grow than most other strains. Not much odor till late in flowering, then i had a week or 10 days of a strong musky/spicy odor. That faded to very little through the end. The high is very heady and energetic. This stuff doesn't put me on the couch. It is, however a strong buzz. The first few bowls actually had me forgetting what I was about to do. Once mastered, it's a great buzz. I took these plants just as they were starting to show the turn to amber trichs, at 9 and almost 10 weeks. I believe I rushed 12/12 a week or two though as they took 3 weeks to really flower up. They only had 6 weeks of veg. Chimera says this strain is 'californian x Dom'.. ask him.. :D

I didn't do this grow well due to pH problems for most of it, thus I got a poor yield. I'm growing the remaining 6 next and expect to do much better. Dolomite Lime is your friend.

The plants showed P/K deficiency through the last half of flowering, despite my applying a double dose of the BigBloom. I'm not happy with the BigBloom and don't recommend it.

I grew 3 females out of 5 seeds.Two of the fems were Soulshine dominant and one was BB dominant.All 5 seeds germed and the veg period went very well.This is an extremely easy strain to grow,a good choice for newbies.

At about 30 days flower they really start packing on the weight and continue for about a month.The Soulshine phenos finished from 65-75 days however the BB pheno finished a little earlier.Some of the fatter ones may require staking and topping is highly reccomended,especially if you have high humidity.

This strain produces a very nice,potent Indica stone.It maintains a very nice fruity/grapefruit flavor in a pipe,joint or bong.It kind of reminds me of Sweet Tooth #3 only a little more potent and I didn't encounter any mold.

I did make F2 from the BB pheno and have grown out the F2 generation with near carbon copy results of the F1.

I would reccomend this strain to new growers and old alike.

Schnazzleberry from Chimera is probably the most potent strain from his genetics. Schnazzleberry is a hybrid line from Breeder Steve's famous "Shiskaberry" strain crossed with Chimera's Dom.

Having grown all of Chimera's strains I can safely say that Schnazzleberry is the best one in his entire collection and is worth growing again. In vegetative growth the sativa leaves grow almost upwards pointing to the sky. The whole plant has lots of vigor. The calyx to leaf ratio is very good and much better than his other strains. Trichomes are everywhere. Expect lots of crystals.

Although this strain is a medium/small yielder it certainly does pack one hell of a potency punch. The buds were almost all covered in trichomes. Watch out for the taste from the buds. They almost taste like manure. Some of my friends even said that it tasted like sh*t. I would agree. These buds poong!

WARNING: This strain is not for novice users. Even hardend smokers will have trouble finishing a joint. The effects are quite heady and paranoia inducing. It is very profound! Extremely potent!

January, 2004

Chimera's Schnazzleberry:

Germination:

I soaked my seeds for 12 hours then placed them between wet paper towels. 12 of 12 germinated and all sprouted.

Vegetation:

***about 30 days or until 1ft tall

This strain was really simply to grow. It loved my nutes, loved to drink and I never had any problems other than spider mites. The plants grow hardy stems within the first few weeks of vegging with proper ventilation. From seed to plant these guys/girls can really grow! Branching was uniform and big Sativa leaves dominated. However slight Indica traits can be noticed in this strain. I'd say this strain held up pretty well against mites too. The plants all grew out pretty much the same, average height but more tall than bushy.

Flowering:

***45 days for all to reach maturity

I was able to determine sex with clear and visible signs such as pistils and seed sacks within 4-6 days. I got 5 females and 7 males. Flowers were only noticeable after 12 days. I'd say the plants really take off after the first week or two of being put into 12/12. The flowers start to have an apparent frosting of trichomes after about 3 weeks into flowering. From there beautiful resinous buds fatten up each day. My plants leaves started to curl inwards (giving a claw effect) with the introduction of BigBud. It didn't really affect the plant more than that...

The Smell:

The smell gets unbelievably strong, especially in the last week or two of flowering. Serious odor control is required if smell is of concern. It smells sort of skunky.. yet fresh or minty too... I find the smell is vary hard to describe and after curing for a week now I find all the jar smell a little differently. Either way, they stink, stink, stink...

The Smoke:

These plants produce some pretty potent buds. I wouldn't rate it as the most potent buds around (I've smoked stronger stuff), but it's definitely not your average smoke. I described the buzz as a well balanced buzz since you can get a lot done if you only take a few pulls off a joint. If you smoke the whole thing expect to sit down for a while. If you smoke more than 3 joints, you are "lights out" so to speak... I found the buzz to be more of a head buzz that's quite heavy. Less of a body buzz yet it can literally wipe you out if you smoke too much. It's also good smoke to call it a night and leaves you feeling refreshed in the morning. I found it hard to watch/follow a movie after smoking a whole joint...

The yield:

I had 3 phenos that had the classic "Christmas tree" effect. Medium sized colas with heavy budding starting from the bass of the colas to the top. Then I had one pheno with huge colas. It had 4 main colas with less bottom budding. Since one plant was rootbound but now recovering... Total yield off of 4 plants was 113 grams. I think I could get more off it if ever I have another go at it...

I had a blast growing this cool strain and would recommend it to anyone.

Notes:

-Strain is very easy to clone

-Very good smoke for $$$ spent (Great value)

CHIMERA - SCHNAZZLEBERRY

Germination:

I used the paper towel method for this, 8 of 8 germinated within 48hrs.

Soil Mix: Pro Mix Soil - Perlite - Worm Castings - Blood Meal

Water when needed, used Black Crystal for veggie stage, and used Scotts Bloom for flowering stage.

Vegetation:

5-6 weeks in veggie stage, very nice looking, and smells pretty strong. At this point I was able to determine the sex of the plants. There was 4-Females 2-Males 1-Hermmie 1-Dead. At about 4 weeks old, I didn't chop any, I just pinched them at the top. They got about 18" tall, before going into flowering stage.

Flowering:

So after I determined all the sex, about 6 weeks in veggie stage, I started the 12/12 cycle. I put the males and hermmie into a different closet, under 12/12 as well.

FEMALES: After about 2-3 weeks into flowering, they really started to show a lot of pre-flowers and lots of white pistils. After about 4 weeks you can see the buds forming at the top, with a lot of WHITE PISTILS, and white CRYSTALS, smells really bad as well, kinda like Skunk. I had them in flowering for 55 days, before I chopped them. I noticed that the lower nodes of the plant weren't as fat as the top half. So I chopped them in half, and let the lights on the bottom half for about another 3-4 weeks, before I harvest it.

MALES/HERMMIE: Had them in another closet, they started to grow pods in the 2-3 week. After about the 4th week, you can see that the males had started to pollinate. I collected all the pollen from them, and just stored it away for my next grow to breed it with another strain.

Harvest:

I put them in 48hrs of DARKNESS even before chopping them in HALF. I used the paper bag method for this harvest. When I chopped the ladies in half, I cut all the big fan leafs and then I put them up-side down for another 48 hrs or so. Then I put them in paper bags for about 3-4 days, opening the bags everyday, also moved them around. I then put them in the freezers for another 3-4 days, again opening the bag each day, moving the buds around.

Yield:

I got about 4 o's outta 4 females. I think by me chopping them in half so the lower levels would fatten up. If I didn't do that method, I think I would have only got about 2 o's, or just a little more.

The smoke:

Smokes really well, and gives you a punch if you smoke too much of it. I would grow this strain again, but with a lot more lights.

Out Come:

I like and would grow this strain again, strong smell in veggie stage, lots of white crystal's and pixel in flowering stage. Nice looking plant over all, and a pretty good high smoking it. I would rate it 8/10 overall from what I have smoke from b4.

Grows good, smokes good, I would grow it again.

Where to begin... I mashed from her right now.

Well lets see, 4/5 germ I believe, 1 just kind of refused to grow, though I gave it a chance, just died after 5 days or so. The other three grew quite well but always seemed to be really touchy with any PH fluctuation, where it didn't affect any of the other strains going at the time. Doesn't like much nutes it seems either, but still a joy to grow. Very stinky, even in veg... more on that later.

I know that I vegged them for a least 65 days under 80w of fluoro lighting, but not sure exactly on veg time.

When the lights where flipped they showed sex within a week 2 females, and 1 male that was used to seed a female Schnazzleberry and C99 branch. I noticed that they liked more nutes in flower than veg, so I gave them full strength and they loved it, but still got a little tweaked every now and then due to ph fluctuation. Buds for rather quickly, and so does the smell. There was minimal stretch, and node spacing was quite short, only 1 pheno between the two females, they differed only mildly in terms of strength of smell. Seems to me like she would do good in a SOG situation, but I grow 8-10 cola style. Flowered under 1000w hortilux eye.

Around week 4 the smell really kicks in, really, really kicks in! I almost cut them down a couple of times out of paranoia due to my living situation, having once detected smell outside of my residence, so top notch odor control is a must! The smell of the plants during flowering is incredible though, very unique and hard to describe, fruity but with a stench that overpowers, kind of musky I guess.

Well, I harvested them around day 50 when most of the trichs where milky with a few amber here and there. I had a problem when drying them though and they where dry in 5 days, and put into jars.

Yeild: Was above average, though I'm sure that I can improve on that in future runs, maybe not so many tops next time.

Smell: After 2 weeks in the jars, a fruity smell is more pronounced, but the main thing that I smell is a musky almost sweaty armpit like smell, but its good, I know that sounds sick... but it is what it is... great smell! LOL.

Taste: A bit harsh because of the drying problems and it hasn't been properly cured, but very good all the same. Slightly fruity, but mainly a skunky kind of spicy taste I suppose.

Edit: 8/19/04, the taste has improved greatly, less harshness and a bunch of fruitiness have come through. My grow partner is now so pissed that he has none left, but I told him to keep her, oh well.

High: Woah, here is where this baby really shines! Mostly in the head, but with a good deal of body numbing that I've never felt with MJ before. Comes on fairly fast, gives a good shot of giggles, and very hard to think coherently. It makes you stupid, in a smart kind of way, LOL! Very potent! Lasts for a good 2-3 hours, pleasant come down.

Edit: 8/19/04, the potency has also increased a bit with the cure, very hard hitting!!

Overall fantastic strain, has a super strong smell that turns heads, and everybody loves to smoke it. I will just be keeping my mom in veg until I move, just too stinky for my current situation.

Schnazzleberry ranks in the top three of my favorites to grow, and in the top 2 of favorites to smoke. I do not recall the exact female ratio though I don't ever remember having a disappointment with the results. While I have 2 Schnazzleberry ladies in flower now, I will account the grow of my first two.

Vegging: I generally veg between 5-8 weeks depending on space as a perpetual schedule is the main goal. These were vegged around 7 weeks then planted together into a 5 gallon bucket with Expert Mix Soil (yellow bag) from WM. I don't suggest planting 2 per pot, but I confess to a nOObs mistake. While I'm pleased with the results, each precious Schnazzle should have her own beauty and breathing room.

Flowering:: These girls flowered exactly 9 weeks and the trichomes were a screaming amber and slightly cloudy. The frost was unlike any I've seen. In addition, so was the odor. No complaints from this grower's perspective, but measures should be taken to avoid complaints/notices/drooling of others.

Nutritionally, they were easy to please.

Yield: Average. It was more about quality (ideal for scrog/sog).

Trimming: A breeze.

Smoke: For me, it's right on. The taste is gently skunky (around here, that is mouth watering) and the smoke is full on to the lungs. Prepare to cough. Maybe sit and hit.

A small test was taken at harvest and then again about 3 weeks later. The longer the better (no surprise). The buds were tight, picturesque, and dried rather quickly for curing in jars.

Two jars remain for next summer. Unless, the 2 new girls replace them in their pardon of time.

High: Absolute and highly desirable/calming and I am happy to report it is the closest strain I've found to helping bouts of insomnia. When I intentionally stay focused on Schnazz, I find myself creative and artistic.

Schnazzleberry starts out as one of those who make you think "she's a heartbreaker". Such a natural beauty and low maintenance that makes certain to please. I'd only be heartbroken if I knew there were not more where she came from.

I got 2 males and 2 females. The first nugs (uncured) taste good, sweet, but very planty and green. After about a month the taste has increased dramatically. The smell has sort of dissipated from the stink it emits during growth. But you can definitely tell it's some good herb.

Yield was fairly low about three 1/4's a plant. However, neither plant ever exceeded 14 inches in height and i was using CFL's not HID lighting.

I germed several seeds and got one female. This strain is purple even as seedlings. The plant was very easy to grow and produced little leaf. In many respects it's a typical Indica as far as growth and bud structure. Less typical is the wonderful purple color it produces, followed closely by its fruity/berry flavor. I could stand there with my nose in the jar all day.

I grew out only 10 seeds, and ended up with 5/5. I then grew out larger numbers of clones of each mother to decide, which mother(s) would continue in my growroom.

I have logged those selections in a thread here at OG. In quick summary, I was graced with a range of phenos which I believe represent what is possible when growing Blueberry.

A very short squat, most Indica of the bunch, berry pheno. A keeper, but not my favourite.

A couple of earlier finishing frosty ladies, one more branchy, that were sweet to smoke, but not very berry, and didn't exhibit the same color change I saw in the others.

The most Sativa of the bunch, didn't smell very berry at all, in fact, I'm tempted to think, after growing Flo, that she is almost in those proportions of Sativa/Indica balance and has a much more coffee smell. The high from her buds is very nice, but still not my favourite.

The winner among the five, was a mix of the best qualities of all the rest. Very berry taste and smell, great color, and decent yields. The calyx formations on this mother were the most remarkable and stacked of all the ladies. The resulting high, makes her the winner hands down, and is potent as I've smoked. I receive great feedback from any who smoke her, and have witnessed less experienced smokers turn her down, as they have had too much. One even told me they experienced visuals.

I feel after growing a few batches of Blueberry that it is a very unforgiving lady, not suited to novice growers. It will point out the weaknesses in your growroom, very fast. Sensitive to nutes, and temperatures, she does best when fed lightly, and kept cool. The most vivid color change seems to come from temps in the cool range. Less than 80 lights on, and under 70 lights off.

Having said that, she is worth the grow, as the taste and high, are truly a treat. I can wake and bake, and still function, even given the heavy Indica influence. The bit of Sativa she has, provides a great balance, IMHO.

I have always wanted to grow Blueberry and after doing alot of research and reading his book I choose to go with DJ Short. I bought my pack from Brad over at Hempdepot and germinated them. I got all but 1 to pop but had a bad luck with the male/female ratio and just ended up with 3 girls to choose from. They were all similar in growth but one stood out and was alot better yielder then her sisters. They grew decently vigorous in veg and I kept them vegging for 8 weeks because of the small amount of girls I had. This strain needs very little nutes and can be easily overfed if not careful. In flower this plant is absolutely beautiful. They get nice purple/bluish hues very early in flower which keeps getting more and more impressive. The crystal/resin amount is incredible on the leaves and buds. There isn't really much of an odor problem that I noticed but I don't really care about that too much where I'm at. I am just flowering the clones off the biggest yielder as I write this and look forward to seeing how they turn out. It looks even more resinous in this clone run. I think once I get this strain completely dialed in the way I want it will be a really decent yielder but the first run was kind of small kinda becuse of the conserative nutes I gave it. The buds really thrive with a slow dry and cure process. The taste when cured if so nice as its got the sweetest earthy/berry flavor that makes you go YUMMM after every exhale. The purple in the dried buds are also cool to show off to the boys. The high is my favourite part...its like a instant mood changer if your having a bad day or something. It really makes you feel all around nice inside and I highly recommend this strain to anyone who suffers from anxiety or even depression. I plan on buying a pack of the new True Blue also after trying this wonderful work from one of the top cannabis breeders of today. I hope DJ Short knows how much his hard work is appreciated, THANK YOU!!

Blueberry by DJ Short

These plants were a present from a very good friend of mine. The plants started off short and squat but then started to stretch a little, especially in bud. I was using a 1000 watt HPS for veg and for bud and grew in Promix soil. The nutrient in veg was 'Total Nutrition' and in bud part A-B solution from a local hydro store here in steel town called 'Happy Hydroponics'!

The plants over-all appearance was very beautiful and a deep emerald green. It was grown in five gallon buckets and I had a total of four Blueberry and two Northern Lights. The Blueberry finished in 42 days, but I let them go an extra 4 just to make sure. They have an extremely short bud time which would make it a great choice for a perpetual garden.

The seeds a friend of mine ordered from DJ Short and he sprouted them. When I seen them early in veg I couldn't believe the consistency of the plants. Each one looked almost identical with only one being much taller than all the rest. Out of 10 seeds we got 4 females and 6 males. All males were destroyed immediately and the remaining females grew vigorously and strong. I wish I would have kept a male now as I would love to produce more seeds. I received a clone off my friend and grew it into my mother. I have grown this exact strain twice now and have had similar results both times.

The buds were extremely dense although the finished buds were half the size of my Northern Lights. I wouldn't say it is a great yielder, but the potency is one of the best we have tried to date. Also, the taste was out of this world! Not quite like blueberries, but very fruity. I would say this is the best tasting bud I have ever experienced. I would have given it a perfect 10 on taste, but I reserve that for perfection which I think is close to impossible to achieve.

The plants did not like too much nutrients and seemed to respond negatively to the initial dose. I fertilized every watering with each week giving it a break to pure water. The fertilizer was half dose and the plants seemed to like this best. About the middle of bud the plants started to yellow up a little more than I would have liked. Next grow I am going to add a tablespoon of Dolomite Lime per gallon of Promix to act as a buffer. I think PH in the later stages prevented the buds from getting to their full potential. These plants would be a great strain to grow many crammed under one light as they don't bush out too much and produce six or seven big cola's without clipping. I didn't clip these plants once and they grew in their natural form. The stems from the start were red even when only clones and the buds turned a purple/grey at maturity. This was a very pretty plant indeed.

I had a mite problem with the very first crop I did with these plants. This time there were no mites to be seen. To prevent them I sprayed with a diluted insect soap mixed half with water, half with soap, once a week to prevent infestation and it worked great. It seems these plants attract mites like bees on honey as the other strains in my first grow had hardly any mites at all. It seemed the mites just loved these plants and stayed as close to them as they could. I think this is due to the plant not being very resinous in bud. The buds were covered in almost a dry crystal, unlike the Northern Lights which were extremely sticky. I guess the dry crystal does not give the problem of travel for the mites that the more resinous plants would.

The buds glistened like diamonds in the light produced by the 1000 watt HPS, and in the end had great bad appeal. I now know that stickiness and potency have nothing to do with each another as this plant knocked us out with a heavy couch-lock stone. After cutting and curing it seems the plants got stickier and now I would say is average in resin production, but only after cutting and drying. Taste is very smooth and sweet. I wouldn't say it tastes like blueberries but is definitely very fruity. I was told the blueberry taste comes with age, but it seems it never stays around long enough for me to find out.

Over all I would say this is the best plant I have grown to date. It has a great smooth taste that makes you come back for more. It is a little on the tricky side to grow due to the sensitivity to nutrients and its urge to attract mites. No mold problems noted, although my humidity never goes above 60%. As I stated above it grows nice cola's and doesn't bush out too much so that many plants can be crammed under one light. I could have put many more under mine. I think if grown properly it would be a great producer and supply an extremely quick turn around. I will definitely grow this strain again, but with some other bigger producers. I think the Blueberry is my personal favorite due to its couch-lock effects, non-paranoia type buzz and superb taste. It will always find room to have at least one growing for personal. I would hate very much to lose this strain.

I had a couple other fems that were really sparse and seemed to take forever but the shorter more solid phenos finished from 53-61 days. Most of them showed at least some purpling even though the temps at finishing were around 80°F-90°F with the light on.

An exciting, but not "racy" head, and a mild narcotic body, very euphoric and desirable effects that most seasoned heads prefer

Out of 10 seeds I got a couple really nice females. Some of them showed leaf mutations from the start. Twisted,crinkled looking. When you flower them sometimes they snap out of it and sometimes they dont. These are fairly small Indicas, they remind me a little of FLO in overall growth. Not exactly a huge yield but there may be better yielding phenos, topping may also help in this area. If I grew them again I would give them a little more veg time as well.

Every one I grew went deep purple no matter the temperature. The color comes on strong about the 6-7 week. My finish times ranged from 53-67 days.

The buds are very dense and covered in white frost. It has kind of a musky/grapy/bluberry flavor but a little curing helps bring out the flavor. The bud has a very nice Indica stone to it,a very kind head. Again in this area it reminds me a little of the FLO.

The OTM is a very interesting strain. All 10 seeds germed fine but between the males and mutants I wound up with one really nice female. If I had known how it was going to turn out I would have cloned it for my own breeding projects. If I remember correctly the OTM is actually an F5 Blueberry. The plant finished at 68 days and grew like any other Indica except for the mutation during veg. The buds were nice and fat with medium density. The bud formation is really differnt from anything else I've grown. The beautiful color developed over the last couple weeks. A really nice purple hue rather than blue. The flavor is kind of earthy/cinnamon/musky/spicy. The flavor is rather complex and hard to describe. The bud has a fairly powerful Indica couchlock stone but nice and clear at the same time. If you're thinking the bud in the breeder's description looks just like mine you are right, it's the same plant.

The Kali side really adds alot of sativa to this strain, the phenotypes were very different. One pheno is very sativa in stretch and finishing (70days), one's a very even mix with excellent yield and a very indica-like bud structure (70 days), and one very indica pheno with a tendency to purple with slightly low temps and moderated nute strengths as well as a quick finishing time (60 days).

Germination rate was 100% and cloning was very easy in the pre-soaked peat pellets. It reacted well to supercropping and LST training. Yield wise I think the indica pheno could be better suited for my setup, someone with lots of spece in a 1k+ setup would do great with any of these.

The stretchiness is a small price to pay for a nice sativa high with a killer long term buzz. It is one of the more potent strains I've grown with above average trich production. It has a very dense clustering of buds that are very crusty with thrichomes, they make those spiraling calyx towers I love. The smoke is thick and hashy with a lavender aftertaste, a very creative high and a good daytime toke.

This is a very good hash making strain as it yielded very heavy in the bubblebags with some good trim. It is not a very leafy strain, mostly bud, so trimming is quickfast. I did a 60 day cure with some of these and they were much hashier and sweater but I was smoking this stuff practically wet and it was very smooth, even newb's don't cough.

Cups were drilled for drainage and the resulting mixture was wetted down upon insertion of the cracked seed pods. Plant cups were placed under a Sylvania Super Metalarc 400 watt metal halide for their first 18 days. I then added the 1000 watt Agrosun Gold Deluxe (HORT-POMB) lamp to the outfit and that was too much sunshine, but once we got the foot print down to just the 1000 watt system, things really started hopping.

Strong growth during vegetative phase with a minty skunk odor that comes on by the end of the third week. Plants were vegged in 1-gallon planters containing grow rocks and coco coir, with bat guano added. Towards the end of 35 days of vegging they got a heavy dose of Miracle-Gro Soil Acidifier, some H2O2, and fish emulsion. That really got them going. When I switched to flower the plants ranged in size from 12" to 15" in height and had very acceptable branching and good strong sativa dominant leaf sets.

The strain exhibited two (2) different phenotypes:

1. A columnar phenotype that I didn't want to work with because it would be more ideally suited to SOG or SCROG and I was doing a bush grow. This plant will double in height and produce a tight span of colas with a very nice main cola that will impress SOG/SCROG growers looking for the silver bullet. These plants yielded approximately 2 to 3 ounces of bud. Plant odor becomes overpowering in flower with a carrion odor with a slight skunk undertone. If you don't have odor control, I recommend you get some to grow this beast. The columnar phenotype goes about 70 to 72 days.

2. A classic Christmas tree sativa phenotype that responds unbelievably well to supercropping. Once these plants started to stretch, I started tying them down. The branches immediately reorient themselves and you have a SOG type result of multiple main cola limbs that will produce colas over 18" in length if they get enough light. I got this result with approximately 70 watts/sq. ft. This phenotype has the same odor issue, but the yield was astounding with one plant contributing over 8 ounces of bud. This pheno needs to go the full 80 days to get everything it has to give. Calyx to leaf ratio appeared acceptable as the buds finally started putting on the weight. You can also make these buds fork by topping them once they are a couple of inches long, then using wire force the buds to grow at right angles to one another once they take off.

Smoke Report

The plants were chopped a few days early due to a security issue and were water cured for 7 days before being dehydrated in a Nesco Dehydrator. Water cured, this is two toke pot that has outstanding medical efficacy and a bite severe enough to leave you paralyzed on the couch if you abuse her.

Medical Efficacy Scores:

Another winner from D-Man. This is an easy to grow plant that can easily reward you with an above average yeild.

I started 6 seeds, all of which germinated, sprouted, and grew. Unfortunately, of the 6 seeds I picked out of 12...5 ended up being male. However, the one female I did get is a real beauty.

The SSDD seems to enjoy the ferts. Some of the other plants showed slight signs of stress from a whap of Earth Juice Bloom I gave the room in week 5, but the SSDD's took it...and transformed it into some luscious buddage...really comin on strong and firming up very nicely near the end of flowering. As you can see, the top cola packed on the weight nicely, and while this was a mid-summer grow, the colors erupted with a vengeance in the last 10 days or so.

Small nuggets taken prematurely tasted good..but when she was done and the cure began, the flavor intensified immensely with time. After 3 weeks in the jar she was stoney, and tasted slightly of citrus/skunk. After 6 weeks, the fruit came in, and the skunk has dissipated.

Folks are clamoring for this one. Green/red nuggets of joy, with a really nice high that keeps you going and allows you to get things done...but also lets you know yer good and baked!

A bargain priced strain...like the rest of the D-Man catalog...and a strain that is highly recommended from this grower of 15 years/daily smoker of 35 years/med patient.

Thanks for another winning combination, D-Man!

Another excellent strain from Dr. Atomic. I remember when I was younger, looking at a High Times page with an Atomic add on it. They always looked so damn frosty, almost above anyone else in trich production!

In veg, they grew with more vigor than any strain I have tried. They love the nutes, and very airy soil. This mix was 50 percent soil, 20 percent vermiculite, 20 percent perlite, 10 percent hydro coils at the bottom of the pot.

This strain was very very easy to grow! This girl suffered from a Mg. deficiency, but it did not hurt yield, or growth at all! Will take almost anything you throw at it, including cooler temps.

Smell comes on strong in 4th week of flowering.

Temps were constant in flowering at 78-80 F, but in veg fell as low as 65 F at times.

Would recommend from novice to newbie, this strain is another winner!

High is excellent, and had cut a bud 6 days prior to chop. Trichs at the time were 60 percent milky white, while others were just starting to turn. This produced an excellent high. Not couchlock, but not speedy. It set the tone for a night of relaxation, and a trip to the mall with the wife.

And go figure, it turned a purple shade in the end! Seems like everything I touch turns to purple!

Out of 5 seeds I got 4 identical plants, and 1 twister. Three were female. Ended up keeping 1 to clone out as identical mothers. Very easy to clone. She stays squat and starts producing resin before 20 days. This is a 25% blueberry 75% Northern Lights, so there is not much smell to contend with, but if you brush a bud the nice smell of berries and honey comes out.

This strain seems to be the holy grail for sog gardening. Grows very compact, no stretching at all. Looks like a Christmas tree. Very tight nodes. Definitely mold resistant. The buds are a little wispy for how dense they were during flower, but overall you can't complain when you get over an oz from a 2 ft. plant. I grew them out using Fox Farm's light Warrior, Grow Big, TigerBloom, and big bloom. Never any fert burn issues.

The high is quite strong and is suitable for medical use. It makes my back spasms go right away. The taste is of blueberry muffins after a good cure. I made some pretty good bubblehash from the trim too. Overall I would say that Dr. Atomic's Blueberry x NL is a great sog strain, and would be great for beginners.

Two phenos so far. One with very low yeilds but the most incredible lookin' nugz i've seen in a long time. The other pheno produced a hefty 5 oz with quality slightly sacrificed. As a connoisseur it is definitely one i will keep in my stash. Can be cut early, but nice purple hues come out and a lot more frost is packed on all the way up to 70 days. Fed with floravora grow and bloom with floralicious as an additive durin' flower. Easy and highly reccommended.

Grew her in a organic mix of Perlite, Peat moss, Black Earth, Worm castings. The worm castings in the soil was enough N for her so I never watered with any chems or additives. Purely water, used a brita filter to lower water ph.

Vegged for 5 weeks under my 430 watt sunagro HPS, then flowered. For flowering I transplanted to a bigger bucket with High Phosforus Bat Guano. This was sufficient for ample resin production and healthy flowering.

Flowering took 8 weeks, results are mouth watering.

Mistakes I made was using a old HPS bulb that was VERY outdated, I'm guessing way less then half the lumens of a fresh bulb...very dissapointing..Also I might have benefited from a long veg period, as all my branches wer falling over near harvest.

Yielded around 2 ounces, not bad for 1 plant, altho i wanted to push the 1g per watt goal.

Over all very easy to grow, Didn't need much N for veg, and took a slightly higher amount of P during flower. If you can't tell from the pics, awesome smoke, smooth, fruity, and very intense high.

I recommend it for noobs and experts alike!

I got 14 beans in the pack from Dr. Greenthumb. I germinated all of them, and all of them came up. Out of the 14, I only got 2 males, and the other dozen were females. For the most part, they were pretty stable, some phenos varied in smell and appearance, but most were similar in every way. The Acapulco Gold is a very easy plant to grow, no special attention needed, and she took any nutrients that I gave her without any problems. For a sativa, she's also a very fast flowering plant. I flowered them kind of small, expecting a lot of stretch, but they did not stretch nearly as much as I planned on. Now overall in flowering, the AG is great all around. Now the best part about this plant is the yields that it gives. I got monster yields from the AG, more than most all of my other strains. Now the reason I got these AG seeds, is because I wanted to find a keeper AG mom, one that is a knockout like the AG from back in the 70's. Well that was not the case here. The Acapulco Gold from Dr. Greenthumb was some of the weakest bud I've smoked. The potency is very poor. You have to smoke a lot of this stuff to catch a good buzz. The taste is alright, smooth but nothing special. The smell is also nothing special when dried, just a fresh piney smell. In flower she smells really good, like lemon lime mixed with a hint of Haze. So overall, the AG is not a keeper in my opinion. I was very disappointed with the potency of this one. I suppose if you started about a couple hundred of these seeds to find that special potent pheno, you may have found a keeper mom, but other than that, I wouldn't waste the money on these if you're looking for something that is like the original AG from 30 years back. If it wasn't for the amazing yields she gave me, I would have been extremely unsatisfied.

This girl is 1 of 2 twins that I was lucky enough to separate and raise. She is extremely vigorous in growth and really packs on the resin and yield soon after the stretch. She is a quick finisher and flowers for about 60 days, producing lovely purple tint. Great bag appeal and calyx to leaf ratio.

The smoke from this mother was the strongest of all 4 phenos. After 1 bowl I was on the floor gasping for reality. It is an extremely heavy high that hits you in seconds. The taste is lovely like a mix of fruit and hash.

I was left stoned for a good 2 hours and really high and mellow for at least 2 more hours. I really enjoyed the second 2 hours as the high regained clarity and was all up.

Mother 2: Indica/Sativa mix pheno.

This is the second of the 2 twins. It is as vigorous as the other twin just that it has more Sativa looking leaves. She is not as quick a finisher but is still respectable at 65 days or so. This bud had no colors other than a green and lighter green shades. The buds are solid but have a higher leaf to calyx ratio.

The smoke is strong but not as strong as the other twin. It has more of a creepy high to it. It is also not as hard hitting and you are left with the ability to function. The high is mostly clear but the couchlock effect tends to come and go. The taste is less fruity and very nutty like.

The high does not last as long as the Indica mother but you are still buzzing after 3 hours. This is a good pheno if you like a bit of both Sativa and Indica highs.

Mother 3: Sativa Haze pheno.

This pheno is mostly Sativa in growth. It has good vigor and produces nice sized buds, but they are a bit airy. It does take a bit longer to finish at 70 or so days. The leaves and buds are dark purple, more so than the Indica dom, and lovely bag appeal. It does not have a great yield but is respectable.

The smoke from this pheno is great. Lovely fruity taste with a mostly up high. It is also very potent and covered in resin. This weed really is good for doing work and activities that require concentration (unlike the Indica mother).

The high lasts for a good 4 hours and is good for those seeking a good indoor Sativa with great hazey high.

Mother 4: Sativa dom pheno.

This was my Sativa freak mother. It had mutated leaves as a seedling and grew out thin, resinous leaves. It is not a great yielder and would not be recommended indoors as it has a long stretch and is hard to control. She also takes a long time to finish and could easily go 80 days. This girl has dark purple/blue buds and leaves when finished.

The small yield and finish time is made up for by the smoke it produces. All I can say is wow! I am a Haze lover and this has to be as close to pure Haze as a hybrid can get. It tastes like tropical fruit with a sour lemon twist and is very high in THC.

This pheno produced the best high I have ever experienced. It is racy and thought provoking. This smoke is great for wake and bake but not recommended for pre-sleep. 4 hours of Haze heaven.

Well the second run is going great. I would have updated pics but I will get my camera back in 1 weeks time. They are really starting to chunk up good. Loving the calyx to leaf ratio. Think it may have to do with the intensity of the 600w HPS.

The purple tint is not evident yet so I think that may have to do more with the weather rather than genetics. Will see when they are done. It is a treat to see them with all white hairs not like when seeded.

Smoking through some of the larger cured heads and damn it is strong. The nugs are rock hard to and I love that trait in dried weed. I am not a fan of the airy buds I have had in the past.

I took some to a party and had the time of my life. There were alot of younger people there and as always there was the guy bragging about how much weed he can smoke. Carried on about how he needed 5 cones at least, to get him stoned. So I thought I would see what he thought of the gear. I packed him a bowl, not even full. He gets about 3/4 through, then all of a sudden coughs his lungs up through the bong, spilling bong water all over himself. Me and my mates had a great laugh. 1 hour later I find him rolling in the garden, gazing into the stars.

This weed is definetly not for light weights.

Grower Report

April, 2003

Veg stage:

The germination rate was 5/5. The male to female ratio was 3/5.

Phenotype #1- This Phenotype lagged in veg. It was the more Sativa looking of the first 2 (phenotype 1 and 2). It takes 8-9 weeks for a nice size bush. It is average strength in veg. It's nothing special as far as vigor or growth size in veg. I topped this one to get it bushier.

Phenotype #2- This one looked slightly more Indica. The vigor, size, Veg duration, and growth rate where the same as phenotype 1. I also recommend topping this one.

Phenotype #3- This was the best of the bunch in veg. tight internodes with nice side branches. It has above average vigor as well. Seem to grow faster also (7-8 weeks in veg).

Bloom Stage:

Phenotype #1- The worst of the three grew tall lanky and very Haze dominant. Too bad the Haze high did not shine throw. This phenotype was a lager in bloom (75-80 days). Nothing great compared to the other to phenotype #3. This phenotype buds where big time calyx stackers with nice amounts of resin. Unfortunately they are not as thick as you would expect. The yield is high, but nothing exceptional about this phenotype besides the yield (5-6 ounces).

Killed due lack of vigor and undesirable growth traits.

Phenotype #2- This one might have been nice but it tends to have hermie tendencies. Which means it is useless to me. Killed due to undesirable traits.

Phenotype #3- The Winner (so far) - I really like this phenotype a lot. This is my mother of the Ghaze so far. It has very desirable growth traits (not super tall or lanky). It grew nice size colas that had fat calyx. Trichomes tend to look like hairs (they are long). The plant produces a good amount of resin even on the stem. The buds mature much faster as well (60-65 days). This plant yields (roughly 4 ounces) less, but the quality is twice as good. I really like the growth traits in this phenotype as well. It has strong growth, and nice sized side branches.

Final evaluation:

Phenotype #1- Bah I liked nothing except the yield here. Everything else was average. I am not a fan of overly spicy buds which this happens to be. The high is average as well.

Phenotype #3- Great phenotype!!! The taste of the plant was exceptional. Its very unique compared to others. I can?t wait to get a nice fat grow of this phenotype growing. The high is sharp to the head (instant stone), but has other qualities as well. Yield was less, but the smoke more then made up for the loss in yield. The hit from the smoke was some of the smoothest I have ever had. I am very glad I got this strain. My only problem with Dutch Flowers is the lack of accessibility to there strain base. With my first DF grow I am very impressed. I might be forced to throw down some big dollars to get a few more. This strain is at the back part of my Top 10 (that?s very good trust me). The smoke is also excellent for anytime of the day actually somewhat stimulating. The taste is among the Top 5 I grow. I would more then recommend this strain to anyone (who can get it).

10/10 seeds germinated for this one. 5 females.

Two of the females ended up having some noticeable Sativa traits in the leaf-shape and stem-growth.

I topped only 1 of them. I liked the way this one grew alot better than the others.

Very healthy growing. Ate up the nutes and the water. The more Indica phenos had nice medium-fat leaves.

This is a type of Blueberry, so it could have turned blueish if I were able to successfully lower the room temp at night, but I wasn't of course.

Of the more Sativa phenos, they grew to about 4-4.5 feet tall. One of them had to be staked up at one point and the other one did a leaning-tower-of-pizza thing -which was actually useful, as it helped to keep it out of the way of the cord from the light mover.

Good cola development on these as well. Very good score on resin gland development -they were very hairy and shiny. As the ad for this strain says, it is a 'hash plant' -it has very noticeable and beyond average trichome development.

I had to rush the harvest with a shorter day period, and my HPS bulb was already a year old so probably was losing its output, also affecting harvest. It is likely that this plant could have yielded up to 4 ozs a plant for a good pheno if grown with premium conditions.

The high is very uplifting. I smoked it after smoking some lesser quality weed and it totally ameliorated all the negative mood effects from the other smoke. Everyone who has tried this stuff says its some of the best weed they have tried lately. I have been smoking it non-stop for weeks now and I can say that it would be $45 an 1/8th bud where $40 is average.

The smell is a mango/berry fruity flavor. Taste is good and not harsh, w/ subtle fruit flavor. Leaves a great spicy after burn on the throat.

A calm relaxing stone that was some what of a couchlock high, not a very high yeilder but a very pretty purple. #### GROW:

This strain is by far my favorite grow/smoke ever! I only wanted to get an ounce off my 1 plant just to sample the strain, so I only vegged for two-weeks before switching it to 12/12. I grew the plant in 5 gallons of all organic potting soil, I kept the plant outside from early morning to evening to get the sunlight, but then I took it inside and gave it the remaining hours it needed under a 250w HPS. Flowering ended up taking 58 days and I reached my small goal of an ounce.

SMOKE:

I harvested the plant and kept it intact to slowly dry for about a week before manicuring the buds and placing them in a paper bag to dry, then after 3 days of being inside the bag I put all the buds into a glass jar to cure. The buds have been curing for about a week now and I just smoked a bowl! Upon breaking a fat nug up, an insanley intense fruity smell broke into the air, it was the best smelling scent I have ever imagined! After breaking the nug in half my fingers were stuck together with sticky resin, so I packed about .5 into my bong and proceeded to shnap the bowl. The taste was just like the smell, intensley fruity and stayed in my mouth for a good 30mins after the hit. The high came on instantly and was almost overwhelmingly uplifting, it made me feel like I was almost floating and light. This is by far the best smoke I have ever had, even better than the blueberry I sampled in A-Dam from the De Damkring cofee shop! GROW IT!

Grower Report

September, 2003

First off, I have to point out that this grow was prematurely ended 44 days into flowering. My A11s were much more vigorous than I'd expected and had severely overgrown my vegging chamber... it was pull the BB early or lose all 4 A11s. While I am in no way disappointed in the results, it should be noted that my plants clearly would have benefited from an extra 10-14 days.

That said, the trichomes at harvest were plentiful with about 40% cloudy, maybe 5% amber, and the rest clear... the timing wasn't terribly off. But the extra time would have added much appreciated weight and maturity.

Rewind...

I chose DP BB feminized seeds as an attempt at economizing the space in my box by avoiding any male plants taking up much needed space. Purchased from SeedsDirect, they germinated out at 4/5 and proceeded to blow me away with their steady & strong growth under 24/0. Using Fox Farms Ocean Forest soil made me cautious about adding any nutes during vegging... didn't want to burn them.

Once I switched to 12/12, however, these ladies started sucking up and utilizing all the Tiger Bloom I threw at them. Reading other reports about this strain make me confident in saying that I could have safely worked Grow Big nutes into the veg cycle.

Unfortunately, three of the four eventually flipped to hermies and I wasn't able to locate and rip all of the balls off... premature seeds were an unfortunate byproduct of this grow. Expected from this strain based on past reports, but I was still upset.

It was clear early on that there were two distinct phenos at work. One plant was leaning towards a Sativa bend and had the trademark leaves and inter-nodal spacing you'd expect. The other three were variations of the standard Indica-dominant pheno I was expecting. These buds ended up starting to show dark edges right before harvest - cool weather had the temps around 65 F during the last 14 days. I wish I had more time to let them develop fully.

Harvested, I dried the buds for 7 days and then paper-bagged them another 5 days. Once the stems snapped, I began a cure in glass jars that continues to this day.

Due to the abbreviated flowering cycle and all that wasted hermie growth (gr.....), I accepted that my yield would be low. Dried and curing, the batch weighed out at just over an ounce and a half. Disappointing to be certain, but not at all unexpected. Timing is something I'm still working out and definitely learned a lot about during this grow.

SMOKE REPORT:

PHENO #1 (INDICA DOMINANT - 3 PLANTS)

These three plants produce a couch-lock high that is surprising considering the shorter flowering time. Frankly, I wasn't expecting this much power after 44 days - I was wrong. Fat buds with sticky-icky resin that longs to be rubbed off on anything. The smoke is smooooooooooth - expanding lungs and coming out as smoothly as it went in. One of the first times I've ever backed away from a smoke... do not underestimate this plant. At 55-60 days, this stuff would have been narcotic as all get-out.

To counter-act the power, I find myself smoking a hit or two and GETTING OUT OF THE HOUSE! Otherwise, I may as well be Superman surrounded by Kryptonite - the house would burn down around me.

I've smoked stronger plants... but none so elegantly lethal.

PHENO #2 (INDICA WITH NOTICEABLE SATIVA INFLUENCE)

This bad-girl was trouble from the start and I loved her for it... crazy leaves and stunted growth had me eagerly anticipating a unique high. This strain is know to produce such plants and growers inevitably speak to their value.

And I'm here to get on board... this smoke is fantastic. Hits almost identically to her three sisters, but the high arrives faster and doesn't stun me so hard across the forehead. I love the subtle energy I receive from this pheno... wish I had more.

The first pheno was shared with tight friends... the second is off the radar except for Mrs. Black!

OVERALL IMPRESSIONS:

I have mixed feelings about this grow. One the one hand, I've never had genetics be so hearty in the past... the plant growth was so rewarding to watch. And the smoke is beyond reproach.

On the flipside, that DP BB Fem Hermie curse still has me muttering under my breath. I treated these ladies really well and there was no stress at all involved short of an early harvest.

Would I recommend this strain? Hell Yeah! But I'd definitely caution future growers to find a hearty female and clone that baby for all she's worth. I skipped that step and I know it cost me at least 1/2 an ounce in the end. Overall, I love the herb and there's really no other way to judge a plant at the end of the day.

My second run with DPs Blueberry. I got feminised since when I bought I only had room for a couple of plants and needed females. Both Grows the plant was a female with no hermaphroditic tendencies.

Vegged this plant under 125w until it was around 6 inches tall before putting it into flower. It did at first show slow growth and slightly twisted leaves, but grew out of this after the third set of leaves.

Flowering went by with very few problems, ferted with blood/bone/fish meal. It fattened up really well in the final 2 weeks and was cut down at 9 weeks, judged by microscope for mostly cloudy trichomes.

Odor during flower is quite strong especially if you brush the plant with your fingers.

Despite hearing horror stories of it being hard for new grower, I found it remarkably undemanding. Simply don't go overkill on the nutes and it will be fine (should be noted that I'm growing in a cool climate during winter time, so I can't speak for how it will do with higher temps).

A very pleasant grow, yield was between 0.5 and 0.75 ounces leaning to the 0.5, but with more vegging time and improvements to my room an ounce per plant should be easily possible.

The Smoke

Smell - After a 3 week cure it has a wonderful fruity smell that is almost like blueberries, but not quite, maybe not quite as soft a smell of blueberries, but beautiful in its own right. Hard to resist opening up and sticking your nose in the jar whilst curing. When put in a herb grinder the smell fills the room, bound to make you very popular with other smokers, but the smell is strong so beware around those who don't approve.

Taste - An excellent mixture of that usual cannabis taste and zingy berry taste, makes you want to smoke more than you can take and leaves a wonderful after taste.

High - I would say the description of 80% indica 20% sativa would be about right as it is predominantly a body high but with some head also to keep it interesting. Strong body numbing buzz, increased heart beat for the 1st half hour and a strong urge to sit down, however it also uplifts the mood, makes you very calm and I guess the best way to describe it is that your consciousness is in a floaty cloud. Lasts for a good 2 hours if you don't fall asleep. Maybe not the strongest out there, but way stronger than any commercial I've had.

Overall, great to grow and smoke. Im now vegging some of DJ Shorts version, so I will soon find out how they compare.

Grew out 4 mother phenotypes each having variety in colour, yield, potency and size. Picked the two best and grew one of the nicest plants I have ever seen.

Not suited for hydroponic setups or chem ferts. Nutrient deficiencies, burning and stunted growth were common. Perhaps the roots are sensitive. Found much better results converting to Soil and organic nutrients.

Less than average clone friendly, requires some skill, as it can take sometimes 3 weeks to root.

Cure buds for 3 weeks- 6 weeks for best tasting and smoking results. Less than that and the blueberry signature is barely noticeable. Potent, thick, and long lasting high that lasts up to 3 hours! Mixed feedback on the smoke. Negative feedback was because it was too strong, and lasted too long. Girls didn't like the effects in bed, found it too stoney. Hey but this plant is about it's looks and taste.

Not for first timer growers, but a beautiful plant for someone more experienced and would appreciate the look and smoke.

Grower Report

August, 2003

Of 4 seeds planted all sprouted and all were females, though 2 were chopped due to poor growth, and I had limited space. The plants were not as vigorous as other plants I have grown, like white widow. The Blueberry also did better for me under lower nutrient levels, I can say this from experience having grown it a couple of times.

The plants stretched some 2-3 times in length during flower and had limited odour until it started frosting up around week 4-5. You can't resist rubbing your fingers on the oily leaves and savouring the smell for hours afterwards.

Blueberry did well despite the confines of a growroom that was only waist-high. I used 3x125w Envirolites, giving some 30,000 + lumens of warm red during flowering but the Blueberries perhaps needed more. But this isn't reputed to be the best yielder. The beauty is in the smoke.

A wonderful aroma is released when you grind this herb, and the smoke is lovely too. What I liked about Blueberry is the relative lack of the 'haze hit' that sometimes gets you for the first 30 minutes with the other strains (Isis, white widow etc). In other words there is less of the 'god I hope the phone doesn't ring' sort of buzz at the start. That could be good for you, too.

Once upon a time I thought the best weed was the strongest Āĉâ,¬â€œ like white widow. Now I realise I sometimes like a strain to smoke at times other than last thing at night. Blueberry is good in that you are really stoned, but you can get things done. When I say stoned, well for me it went like this. You get stoned and lose track of time and current events a little, you forget how long you were stoned. You are trusting of yourself enough to know that you wouldn't have planned anything too responsible to do in the next few hours. So sit back Āĉâ,¬â€œ and think about something nice and positive, be glad for what you have, thankful for your weed. This is a well bred quality stone.

Is it spring time, or is it the Blueberry that is drawing my eye to the fairer sex again ?? H'mm.

Reminds me of a stunning Northern Lights (Sensi Seeds) I once grew and smoked. A stone for the individual who can appreciate the positive side of things. Sit back in the chair Kingy, And whoaaa man, you are stoned, the worlds buzzing around you, the leaves are green on the trees and nature is beautiful.

A stone that takes me back to the 80's, pure. The yields for the Blueberry strain were not the best, but if you are growing for personal usage then this is a strong, peaceful and up-high smoke of the grandest order.

The smoke is powerful, a short single Rizla, very lightly filled, keeps you well stoned for a looooong time. This is a lovely buzz, your heart pounds a little and your eye's redden slightly. The high is a nice euphoric one, just like the Dutch Passion advert says, and it lasts several hours, though towards the end it tails off into a lighter stone without a noticeable comedown. Personally I have rarely smoked stronger.

A good stone if you want something powerful that won't completely ##### you up for the first hour. But then again this is powerful, I really mean it. I give it an 8/10 for potency Āĉâ,¬â€œ from me that's very high and difficult to surpass. I would reserve a 9/10 rating for something exceptionally strong like white widow. Now something with 9/10 you would smoke best when the kids are asleep and so is the wife (unless she wants Āĉâ,¬â€œservicing' Āĉâ,¬â€œ and that is OK too). And with a 9/10 gear you would struggle like hell to use a computer and remember what you were doing. When I smoke White widow my wife says I am totally useless!. (but useless at what? I hear you cry. Hmmm, good question mon)

Well this Blueberry I would give an 8/10, because you can function on it, just. Now sometimes that means it is a better, more suitable weed than a White Widow - which I would rate as a 9/10 simply on potency. But sometimes you just don't want or need such a potent strain, and Blueberry delivers the goods here. And a 10/10 I would never give currently, perhaps no weed should score a 10 until they start genetic breeding in the future sometime. And if a 9/10 (potency rating) for me is at the limit then a 10 would be scary.

Make no mistake about this - I found Blueberry to be a strong stone and powerful hitter. Don't think too long and hard about whether you should include this in your grow list, for this is quality.

The classic Blueberry was always a favorite I can't help but let this beauty maintain residence in my garden a must for all who love the Original Blueberry and need the couchlock.

This is the stone David threw at Goliath no wonder he went down with only one hit. I personally find Blueberry to be the one that holds my head up high and leaves my arse in the cushions. It is a couchlock high so don't plan any extra activities, this plant is one of those who's main outlook on the game is to produce quality more than quantity with a public display of purple to put a smile on the miss's face (she loves the color in late flowering). If smoking is a crime I am the number one blue bandit, the smoke is always smooth even if uncured, but if cured properly OMG turn up the music and kiss your arse goodbye. I have personally made big talkers smoke their words now those guys have at least 2BB going in each cycle. This strain likes its curing time and will reward those who can wait I always hold some in curing for 2-3 weeks (or until I run out). The look is more than a blueberry beauty it's more like blue gold (its mine I tell you all of it) the quality is one I recommend to all, even if it is the first and last time you grow this beauty queen (I can't say no to this girl I'm sprung).

A Traditional keeper for everyone to grow even for beginner's (though I recommend a little experience to achieve optimal quality), using the aero-cloner was the smartest addition to my kab I have had this year thanks OG. You will find this strain to be strong and at time temperamental if mistreated.

I let the BB grow to its own height in Vegetation; this beauty is not very tall and it doesn't matter about the head room she does not need it. A winner (in my book) for those who want the power of the Chronic Kingdom in an itty bitty living space.

My seeds were purchased through www.goldenseeds.co.uk they were real professionals I had one pack delayed and they sent me a pack of Jack Frost as an apology (though it was only a day later than what they expected 7 days in total) I don't know what this strain is but my buddy offered me every bean he had for them so they must be worth something I think I will spout a few and see what they can do. I will deal with this company again they seem to have a fair selection with some home breeders of their own. All in all I would rate my experience with Golden Seeds web company as an 8 and the beans from Dutch Passion a 10 but that is just me.

I Grew Dutch Passion Blueberry about a year ago using hydrobuckets and those plants made some seeds. These seeds that I used for this grow, happened to be feminised. Anyway, I germinated 3 of my seeds using the paper towel soak method and within 48 hours the seeds sprouted and had 1 inch taproots. I then placed them in 16 oz cups with promix. They grew very well all throughout the vegetive cycle.

I initiated flowering after about 7 weeks of veg time (they were approx 12-14" tall) and gave a dose of foxfarm big bloom. It turned out all 3 were female. Through flower, different phenos reacted to different things.

Pheno #1 which was the more sativa pheno was always the healthiest. Didn't have any problems with her. She stretched about 12" and finished at about 2.5 feet.

Pheno #2, primarily indica pheno, was not too fussy but showed nuteburn after a moderate dose of nutes, and didn't stretch much at all.

Finally pheno #3, the problematic plant of the three which I thought was going to be a great plant. It was extremely fussy with nutrients and got severely burned in flower because of a slight increase in the nutes. Stretched about 8" finishing at close to 2'!

Overall yeild was average/below average. Ended up with close to 3 ounces dry from the 3 plants. The plants did herm at the end of the cycle (YAY MORE BLUEBERRY SEEDS :)) which tells me I made female seeds but they have a hermi tendency that begins around day 40 of flowering.

I find the smoke to be great and amazing for sleep. SUCH A BODY STONE! ALL YOU MEDICAL USERS OUT THERE, BLUEBERRY IS YOUR STRAIN! Overall I would grow this strain again.

If I was to give anyone growing dutch passion blueberry advice about the plants likings/dislikings I would say to be very care with nutes. They're extremely sensative.

Grower Report

April, 2005

This strain sprouted easily and 9 out of 10 seeds cracked. Seeds were vegged on 18/6 for 2 weeks then flipped into flowering. During vegging, pheno's varied heavily with many indica as well as sativa dominant plants.

Once flipped into flowering, it took a week for the plants to show sex. A further 2 weeks into flowering 3 runts and 2 hermies were removed from my grow room. I then began to notice that this strain needs conditions close to perfect in order to flower without hermie problems!

Later on in the flowering cycle I was left with only 1 female, although a somewhat special one! She filled my entire grow room with an extremely strong, super sweet smell! In my opinion one had got to smell a blueberry lady in bloom to fully appreciate this strain! WOW!

Due to the fact that I grew this lady 100% organic, I smoked her initially in a joint! Although still slightly harsh on the throat after 2 weeks curing, the taste was one resembling sugar cane or something equivalent. Very sweet tasting which almost completely prevented cotton mouth and remained very evident even half an hour after smoking. The effect was a perfect indica/sativa mix of body and head highs. (possibly slightly more body) The high lasted approximately 2 and a half hours until I began to experience a very heavy comedown. The comedown was almost impossible to fight as it is extremely sedating.

I highly recommend this strain as a day ender ather than a starter, yet the effect lasts a good while before the sedativeness kicks in. Hope this helps and good luck to anyone thinking of growing this truly fantastic strain!

If you are into citrus-fruits then this is the plant for you. Very enjoyable plant to grow. Germination of 2 seeds without fuss. Growth rate during the veg cycle is somewhat rapid with the correct conditions. Within one week I had 8" seedlings. I tried to keep clear of using ferts and nutes until the first week of flowering. I used organic "Bio Bact" once a week with watering. Plants were vegged for 6½ weeks, could of pushed that for another week. I did notice stretching after 50 days of flowering from then the weight increased. Only thing I would stress on is keeping a lot of air movement during the flowering process. My results under 300w HPS was under average. If I doubled my HPS to 600w I'm sure my buds could of tripled in weight. More light the better, of course! The high is good after a few hits, can be a very motivating high. Recommended highly for back pain. I found smoking excessively can cause an attack of the giggles, though enjoyable.

March, 2004

I have wanted to grow California Orange for several years. My desire stemmed from the breeders descriptions of the smell and taste. I love oranges! Let's start this off by saying I was horribly disappointed. California Orange is without a doubt the most unstable, underpowered strain I have ever grown. I would grow bag seed before I grew Cali-O again.

Germination: 8/10 seeds germinated with 4/8 being female. They grew in veg very quickly, stretching to 26? in less than 30 days. This led me to believe they might be more sativa dominant.

Potency ? Cali-O is more potent than Mexi brick and most commercial, but not by much. This strain never really generated much in the way of trichs and even when they were 100% amber it was still mediocre at best.

Effect ? Mellow body high, doesn't last very long and isn't very powerful.

Yield per Plant ? We yielded 3.4 ounces off three plants. The buds were grown under 2200W of light and they were light and fluffy. They dried into crispy little wisps lacking any substance.

Overall Opinion: Don't waste your time with this strain. I grew out four females and none of them shared any characteristics other than their green color. It was a crap shoot at best and I went bust on all four plants. As you can see from the pictures, they varied so much in appearance it was impossible to tell which one was "True" Cali-O. This will be the last time I waste my money on DP genetics.

Wow! I had a good feeling that this classic strain would impress me, and it has! After two grows of California Orange, I can say that I will continue to grow this frosty, stinky strain in the future.

The seed itself is smaller in size and germinates quickly in a warm environment, usually pops above soil within 4 days. Every seed of this strain that I have planted has grown up to be female--- which makes me believe that it is somewhat feminized. (Either that, or I'm really lucky!) The pre-flowers of this strain tend to be large and super-plump. The pistils are extremely visible, like super-long eyelashes! As the plant matures and goes into flower, the calyx become majorly swollen, quite juicy lookin' really. I've called them literally edible many times in my chats about this strain. (When trimming, I tasted a couple of the calyx's--- it was a sweeter taste than the AK-48 that I've grew out under flouro's.)

These particular plants in the photos went into an early flower because they grew up in October and November, the beginning of winter. This strain often grows a rather large main cola but can have many far reaching side-shoots forming a bushier rather than lanky plant. When it comes time to harvest, all of the calyx are plumped out and densely packed, ressembling corn on the cob. The leaves, fan leaves included, have large, sharp resin glands glistening off almost every bit of greenery. In fact, the trim makes some incredibly potent cannabutter that just knocks your head out!

After a short (10 day) drying and natural air curing, the bud turns light ashy green in color with a heavy amount of amber-colored "hairs." The taste is pleasureable and light n' lemony. The high is somewhat "uppy" at first, as I found myself doing dishes and mopping the floors while smoking the Cali-O. If you smoke larger amounts, your body *does* sort of give out on you but your mind is still sharp and active. My only complaint about this strain is that I wish it was a higher yielder... otherwise, I highly suggest this straining to all Ogers.

Flowered for 62 days, could have went a few more days.

This being a feminized strain I worried about getting some hermies. Well out of three plants harvested I guess there was a hermie somewhere because I got a very very small amount of seeds. I have found 1 seed out of 4 small buds so far. And looking at the rest I may end up with 50+ seeds out of several ounces. Not bad, I'll take that on any harvest with fems.

As far as the growing. DP's description makes them seem very sativa-ish. I found the plants grew to about 3' tall with wide leaves not thin. The Dolce Vitas were my hardest grow yet. Keeping up with her water and nute needs was a little wearing on a novice grower as myself. One thing I should have done was fed her more N during veg. As soon as flowering started she started pulling nutes from the bottom leaves right away.

I grew them to 62 days and ended with about 10% amber and the rest milky trichomes.

The taste.

Kind of sweet almost like menthol a nice taste really.

The smoke really expands in the lungs hard. This one had me coughing a bit more than others at first. After a 2 month cure the coughing is gone.

The high.

My three ladies each show a good 75-25 on head and body.

Now the high on this stuff is truly amazing. A few puffs and I just melt in my seat but my mind starts racing. In a 3 hour alone smoke session I have a hard time finishing a small joint. A few puffs and I totally forget I'm even smoking. What ever else I'm doing I get tranced into it. 30 minutes later I come down a little, couple of more puffs and zoom I am gone. To me this is a 10 on potency but I rated it as a 9 since I haven't grown but maybe 5 strains, but this blows them all away by far. I only have a handful of friends that I smoke with and each of them are in disbelief of the potency.

The look.

Bright green with nice amount of resin.

These organizations help patients to fulfill their daily Cannabis requirements, with a doctor's prescription. We hybridized this Indica with an Indica from Humboldt County (California). The hybrid is a beautiful Indica, very different from the others we produce. The high is "powerful", to quote our test team. In the beginning, a few very big fan leaves are formed, but later growth returns to normal. At harvest time, big, hard buds have been produced. In addition to the very dominant "high" and the excellent taste, yields for this plant are above average.

Some Seeds Banks say that this strain has a meagre THC of 11.6%, but Dutch Passion are claiming a whopping THC of 18%, so I wanted to find out who was right :) :) :)

I soaked 4 of these seeds for 24 hours in PH 7 Tap water and put in a warm dark place.

I then placed the seeds into potting compost in see through plastic drinking cups.

They were slightly slow to germinate taking about 5 days to appear, but once they did appear they grew quite nicely, under florescent lights and started to smell kind of like sweet candy and spicy from about 3-4 weeks of vegetative growth.

I put into flowering at 12 inches tall (Took about 6 weeks in Vegetation) and they showed sex after about 10 days and I had one female.

It tripled in height during flowering and finished about 3 feet tall.

Smell throughout flowering was extremely delicious. Not Skunky at all, but sweet, candy like, spicy which you could eat quite happily and made me feel like I was in a sweet making factory. Odour during flowering was not a huge problem with my one plant, but could have been an issue with more plants. Yes it does smell, but it is a very pleasant smell, like some of those women's perfumes like Poison by Christian Dior and makes you think about beautiful girls; not overpowering at all, but strong enough to notice it. Anyone familiar to growing will know what the smell is straight away and some odor control is necessary but not loads. You could spend ages sniffing the buds with this strain as it smells absolutely fantastic, similar smelling to DP's Blueberry. In fact I had some Blueberry growing along side the Euphoria and it was very hard to decide which one smelled better. Could this be a hint that Euphoria has THC level similar to Blueberry then? :) :) :) :) ..time will tell.

Flowering took a massive 9 weeks which is 2 more weeks than DP advertise, but this might be down to the high temperatures in my flowering room (85-90F), and I also had some dodgy compost which a gardener friend gave to me which had fungus and mushrooms growing in it, and had very poor drainage qualities, which made watering a problem.

Enough of the negative points; now come the positive bits:-

Nice looking healthy plant, excellent smell, huge, massive buds! Yes, this strain is high yielding and I had to stake the plant half way through flowering as the weight made the plant almost bend over in half.

I did not top this plant, and the main cola was about 6 cm wide and about 24 cm long! That is huge and you just have got to see it to believe it. I was extremely happy about the yield of this plant and imagine it would be a good SOG strain.

You can see lots of frosty THC crystals all over the buds and it looks wicked. Touching the buds makes your fingers very sticky.

I harvested at 9 weeks and trimming the leaves was very easy except that my scissors kept sticking together with all the resin! Not much waste here, just lots of buds, a few leaves and the rest stalks. It took me 15 minutes at the most to trim this plant.

I dried the buds in a cardboard box with buds hanging upside down on pieces of string for a week before placing in glass mason jars for a further two weeks cure.

SMOKE REPORT

The moment you open the jar, a fantastic sickly sweet candy/spicy like smell fills your nostrils! One of the best smelling varieties ever and makes a magical change to the skunk smell I was expecting. It smells nothing like skunk at all, but I am not complaining as this makes a brilliant change for me.

Took out a nice sized bud and grinded it into small pieces. Extremely sticky to touch leaving fingers stuck together and full of dark coloured resin. Placed into my Blue Meanie Vaporiser and waited for a couple of minutes for it to heat up and release the vapour :) :) :) :) :) :) :) :) :) and the result is :) :) :).

It takes about 10 minutes for anything to happen, but when it does, you soon start to get a wide grin on your face. I took a second vaporiser bowl full and after that I started to lose all track of reality. I just could not concentrate on anything at all, and I was totally spaced out for about 2 hours. I had to lie down and I listened to some music and I could hear every single instrument and ever note played clearly and vividly. It was as if I suddenly had Bionic Hearing or something. It made listening to music a real pleasure. During this time I did not know if I wanted to laugh or cry and it was kind of like a mild magic mushroom trip I once had. After about 2 hours the effects started to wear off, but by this time it was late at night and I decided to call it a night and retire.

Overall I am well pleased with this strain. I do not think it is as potent as the Blueberry but it finishes earlier and comes close and it certainly knocks the spots off the Skunk #1 I grew a few months ago!

I have kept a nice mother.

March, 2004

Grown under a 400w HPS light, in a 6 gallon shallow water culture reservoir, inside a C13 closet with General Hydroponics nutes (Lucas formula), I harvested 6.8 OUNCES total. From TWO plants! This is an incredibly easy strain to grow, is sticky from head to toe, and smells incredible!

These strains parents are Northern Lights #5 and Haze. The phenos I had were a nice mix of the two.

These plants vegged for a couple weeks (while they got roots) under three 15 watt fluoros until they had enough roots to go into the flowering room. Once there, they started out OK, but after a few days they started to get sick. We figured that we over fed them, so we had to flush and give them less. That worked, and after a couple days they started to look great. On day 12 of vegging under the HPS, I topped both the plants. Around day 14, the plants exploded! I should have put them in flowering at this point, but as it was my first grow I wasn't sure how big they would get.

I induced flowering on day 19 of it being under the light. By day 7 (12/12) they'd grown to twice their size. By day 34 they were almost touching the light (don't worry, it was aircooled). Some of the branches were higher than the light! I had to tie them down and move some away. Some parts got a little burnt, but it didn't really matter. I harvested WAY more than I thought I would get from this, so all is well.

I started harvesting on day 52, and cut down the rest over the remainder of the week. I let some of the lower branches go until day 60.

I smoked some of this cured stuff lately, and the taste and smell are varied from branch to branch. It's weird. Some are fruity, some are musty and piney. It's very interesting, and I definitely recommend this strain for growing. You won't be disappointed. The high is definitely unique: it starts off with a strong mental high, and as time wears on, a strong body stone sets in. Very relaxing.

I recommend this strain heavily... it's not grown enough!

This variety has been selected from "Seed Bank" genetics. A female mother plant was chosen from among 50 female plants grown from seed. After cloning this female, different clones were treated to produce abundant "female pollen". By fertilizing other clones (backcrossing), feminized seeds were produced. Growing seeds in this way guarantees offspring that are far more homogenous and powerful than offspring from seeds produced in the regular manner. Mostly Sativa, with a clear Haze influence. First class "high". Branches bow down at the end of the lifecycle of the plant, due to the weight of the buds.

A very vigorous grower in veg.

(Seemed to grow quicker than I could pot them up. LOL)

Produces a good root system also.

Looks rather Indica with large fan leaves.

I flowered at 5 weeks veg and was amazed how little stretch there was.

Very easy to grow alongside Indicas for a varied crop without having to pinch or train.

A very dense plant with tons of frost all over. Fantastic looking but no real odour.

The plants finished between 7 to 11 weeks, the latter ones being the biggest yeilders.

Isis needs a good cure to bring out the aroma and taste.

I found some were piney and some leaned more towards grapefruit.

Smoking the buds you will find it comes on pretty quick but still creeps up with a nice lift after an hour. Very little or no CL effect at all, so great for daytime, just find your dosage.

Feels like electricity running all round your head then sweeping down your body.

Classic Haze stuff. Can create massive paranoia in inexperienced smokers and can easily hold its own against any Sativa in my opinion. Think of Isis as a Nevilles Haze made easy to grow.

Bred and selected from old Seedbank stock, Isis is a Northern Lights 5 X Haze. 88% Haze/12% NL.

Only available in feminised seed. No sign of hermie traits at all! 10 females out of 10 seeds.

Isis is also a good cure for Classic Migraines if taken as soon as sytoms are experienced.

I enjoyed growing Isis and enjoyed even more smoking it. I had no major problems through out the grow except a little bud rot I had in the drying process (I turned my fan off for a day and I had some the day after). It is by far the stickiest plant I have grown. A mere touch of the bud and I can pick up a piece of A4 paper easy by just putting my finger on the paper where I touched the plant.

I find it quite trippy to smoke and I've had loads of giggles off it but also you can get a bit paranoid after a large sesh, but I find a few cans of strong-bow get rid of them. After a joint first thing in the morning mind, you will not get much done for the rest of the day.

The yield was suburb and by far my biggest grow yet. Out of four seeds I planted, three were monsters (for me) and one that was not so big but yet it yielded more than any other plant I have grown.

Smell wise it was not so bad and would recommend it for a stealth grow. Height wise, after vedging for 21 days and grown to about a foot high they went on to grow to a further 4 to 5 feet at the end of flowering, so not to much stretch either.

Although the seeds are expensive I would highly recommend this for any grower and I can't wait for my clones to root so I can grow some more.

They were grown under two 75w HPS for vedging and one 600w for flowering and in total I grew just over 17 ounces off four plants dry weight. I have not included in that all the weed I quick dried along the way and smoked.

I vedged for 21 days and flowered for 71 days and from the time I put my seeds in the rockwool cubes to the time of harvest was 96 days from start to finish.

I used 80watts of flours for veg and 150 watt HPS for flowering. It yeild all right for a 150watt HPS. all in all the strain dint really give me any trouble so it a good strain to grow

Have grown Isis from Dutch Passion for over 2 years now and wanted to post a Strain Report for fellow growers.

From seed, 100% female plants out of 20 seeds. 1 out of 10 plants will show signs of hermi, but I pull off a ball here and there and let them flower out. Rarely do I find a seed.

Isis is a fast grower, she never stops. She is a tall and lanky plant and I flower at 30 days. Otherwise, they would be too big for the 8' ceiling! Very tolerant plant. Also a very flexible as well. Easily trained using LST methods. Also tops well, but one is rewarded by enormous mail colas if left untopped.

I end my veg of 30 days at roughly 800ppm and end flower at around 1500ppm. Sometimes a bit higher if there are no signs of tip burn.

It is mandatory to tie up the branches on this plant. This is the biggest point I will make. The branches are thin and can not handle the weight of the buds. It is wise to tie them up early because when one falls, it seems they all fall.

One pack of feminised seeds was purchased in March-2004. They were put into 2-gallon pots in EB Organic Potting Soil. So far, I have grown out two of them at separate instances, germination rate of 2 out of 3 seeds in paper towel. The first one was more Indica looking and yielded slightly more (34g) than the second one (29g), which I have pictures of here. Due to the restrictions of my grow space, both were tied down at about 10" and the branches were tied out for better lighting exposure.

Flowering was induced when branches averaged 6" long, and the main stem was about 18". On the first, I waited until about 22", and it grew slightly taller than I wanted for my grow space. However, this second time around it didn't stretch nearly as much and finished with a main stem of only about 27-28". Flowers appeared just about a week after 12/12. Both flowered similarly, starting with very round shaped ball tops that eventually elongate to spears. The first plant finished rather well by day 60. However, the second plant seemed to fill in a lot more slowly. Even when I harvested at day 63, it looked like more spear/white hair clusters were exploding. Fed sparingly, about every 2 weeks, with mild chemical fertilizers until last week of flowering. They only like mild ferts. Overall, yield was okay, about what I expected.

Dried hanging for 6 days, and then put into mason jars to cure.

The final product: The nugs have an excellent appearance; with a dark green base and very brilliantly colored brown-red hairs. After 2-week cure, the smell is stabilized. Overall, it has a dark fruity smell, with a musky pungency to it. There is also a slight menthol overtone, which is a delightful touch. The taste is not as fruity as it smells, but leans more towards the muskiness. Very silky smoke, it barely even makes me cough. Even the second and thirds rip taste pretty good! It is not the astounding Kush knockout stone I expected... it takes a second to come on, but is very strong and full bodied. Every part of me feels pretty high after two bong rips. The intensity of the effect is about average for connoisseur class weed, with a very physical (but not overwhelming) characteristic to it. Got to love the smell and flavour though! Recommended as a personal stash grow.

Although it is supposed to be Hindu Kush x Hindu Kush, which is 100% Indica, the flowering traits seemed to be somewhat sativa like, minus the super-stretch.

This grow was very healthy considering it was my first time. The plants grew vigorously in veg and in flower, took over my space in no time but this was due to lack of knowledge on my part. I left them to veg for too long. As they were from seed I vegged for almost 2 months from sowing. Ended up with 2 massive females out of 6 seeds. There was masses of fat buds by the 7th week of flowering. Very high yield but was spoiled by a mold infection. I lost about 25% of the buds. Second grow was fine as I had improved airflow and extraction. Watch out though, bud density works against you in humid conditions.

Harvest was ok, nothing too difficult, not too much leaf to remove.

Smoke was a bit harsh flavoured but as mentioned I believe this was more to do with my flushing or lack thereof. Very much a body stone, very visable on the face after a lunchtime toke.

Very well suited to SCROG or for growers with limited height. I had 5 feet to work with and survived with a little bit of leaf burn.

I ended up with only two females out of 5 plants. Each of the females seemed to be a different phenotype. One was extremely large, bushy and yielded a lot. The other was smaller, buds spaced out further apart and lankier. The one phenotype's high is average, fairly potent, not very heady and is OK. The other's is very potent and a creeper stone. Yet it maintains its euphoric and motivational thoughtful type high at the same time. When I first started smoking it, 2-5 hits would get me completely lit to the point where everything would seem like it's sparkling. It doesn't make me tired or sleepy at all. Actually whenever I smoke it I feel like thinking, talking or getting up and dancing. Took about 2 months to build up a tolerance to where I need to smoke a whole bowl or two to get there. I quit for a week and a half and my tolerance was drastically reduced. I cut the plants down on day 45 due to security concerns, so they yielded less than they could (I got half a pound off two plants only!) and the type of high I am sure is different than what is normally characteristic.

Overall I'd say that they are easy to grow because this was my first grow and I didn't really face many problems. I was impressed with the yield off the two plants (I hardly used all the space available). People that I give to sample really like it and they ask for more (it's all gone now).

Grower Report

September,

I started out with 20 feminised seeds, from those i chose the best 6 plants to continue working with... ALL of them were pretty varied in growth (it is an indica/sativa mix, Mazar-e-sharrif X Skunk #1) so this was expected.

From the 6 chosen plants 3 were very indica-ish & had a major hash & Skunk taste & smell... (that's not what I was looking for in this cross, so those plants were culled after the first round).

The next 3 plants were classic indica/sativa hybrids... Longer in the nodes & a mix of indo/sat in the leaf shape & structure.

From these one was bubblegummy in smell & taste & grew with 6-8" spacing in all the nodes (plant discarded for being to tall & lanky & having the wrong taste & smell).

The next plant was more to the sativa in growth but had the most amazing true indica bud formation (so tight & dense that mold could have been a issue if your not on top of things) but this plant had a slight skunkyness to it also & was discarded for being slower to flower (always took 63 + days to finnish).

Now this last plant I'm most pleased with... It has the classic indica/sativa growth habits & grows nugs with a nice tight semi-spear shape. It has a uinique funky smell & tastes just like a Tart-Fruit Medicine (very kind !), always finnishes in 55-60 days and is just about as frosty & potent as pot can get (barring a true Haze). A true winner in all respects!

So in conclusion, you'll see that there is a lot of variation amongst the plants in both finnishing times & taste & smells. Not a very tamed hybrid (which is a good thing) as this will let you choose a plant that suits your needs in height & high & taste.

Just remember that its a indo/sat hybrid SO chose the traits you need most.

Safe growing.

Peace.

Powerful plant, one of the most potent I've grown!

Average yield of compact buds.

Strong couchlock and pleasant height.

Really good taste, make you hungry.

May be used medically.

Doesn't smell too much while flowering, and stay really short and squad : it's the perfect plant for indoor-grower (who loves indica effects).

I started to grow Mazar last year, I tasted a friend's one then I went to my growshop and I bought the seeds, regular ones...

I took 3 seeds, they germinated quickly and became 3 females later...

So, I had finally 2 different phenotypes and kept 2 mother plants (who are still alive):

- One indica, with a very few leaves.

- One more sativa leaf like , with many more leaves.

First one end to flower a bit quickly than the other, but potency and taste are almost similar.

in this report, we have 6 indica pheno + 3 "sativa".

The clones had 3 weeks of growth under fluoros, and 8 to 9 weeks flowering.

I started to use ferts at week 4, I used rippen the last week.

Buds are becoming really compact the last 2 weeks. would be patient...

I want to sat that they resist well with the insects. Last year I had a problem with white flies, I've lost some SuperSkunk plants, but the MAZAR were not very disturbed ...

Mazar rocks!!!

I had a good time with this plant it just grew the way it was suppose to... reeked the entire place up and outside of it significantly... it yielded well... flowered fine..... ,etc.. The pot was good but a little strong sometimes i preferred a more mild high like hte skunk red hair to be amongst friends... it wasn't lethargic though like the northern lights..... The big nugs looked "dangerous" as in dangerously good..... medium bud density like not rock hard and i had a hermie from an oasis plant which caused some to seed. the high was uplifting a bit and energetic with little burnout that can probably be attributed to the time in which i picked it.....

This was my second grow, I have done really a lot of reading and studying,so this part was o.k.,but there was lack of experience,wich have resulted in lower yields and lack of efficiency of growroom.In this moment I am sure that I could pull out considerably better yields from my setup. Ok,so here we go.....

The initial plan was to grow 4 moms,take cuttings from them and put rooted clones directly in bloom.We have wanted to leave this 4 moms and choose best among them,to have good cloning stock.But plans do change,so we have ended up with 20 clones(read-apple on stick)and 4 large plants.

Germination-Seeds that i have bought at Utrechtsestr.26(seeds of passion),have popped up in just 6-7 hours,all of them.I am very pleased with germination rate/speed of this beams.

Vegetation-It took 2 weeks till they have took off for real.Growing pattern of all 4 plants was equable.Growing rate was also good,about 2-3 cm per day.Pretty much space between noods.There was visible hit of sativa in leaf structure.This strain(in mine case)can produce many branches so SUPERCROPPING could be done,with good results as well.I have saw first preflowers at about 30-40day of veg.They have been in veg for almost 2 months.

Cuttings-I have used bubbler cloner to root cuttings with moderate success(50%)

There were certain problems,i have waited to get roots for 3 weeks.Now,when i have done this cloning method i can see what must be modified to get better results much faster.I think that i can recommend Mazar for all those who want to clone some MJ.

Bloom-After just 5 days i could see first singhs of bloom on clones and ex-mums.

After 20 days they have started to coat them self in nice coat made out of trichs.

There were 2 different phenos on 4 plants that were visible in bud structure.

Pheno A-(2 plants)-A bit darker leafs then on other pheno.Buds were more like fat nuggets,heavily coated in large trichs.That would be more indica pheno.

Pheno B-(other 2)Much smaller trichs then other two.Buds formed in kind of fat spheres.I think that should be pheno that DP is advertiseing,indica with hit of sativa influence.

Smoke report-This shit is very sticky,and hits you hard like bullet.It hits you in head,but also you can feel it in body.In mine case type of high depend on mine mood.It could be bad idea to smoke it if i am nervous or if there are some problems that i must deal with.But on other hand i have give a sample to mine bro,and he have told me that they have laughed like mad for 4 hours after one joint.I can tell for shure that this strain is very potent,although i have almost 10 years of smoking MJ behind me.

General overview-What can i tell.....Strain is easy to grow,it is very resistant .Potency is in range of much more famous strains like WW,BlueBerry,JackHerrer..

Also IMO it have great producing abilities.

Dutch passion have made good job with this strain.

All that I have to say is thank you Dutch Passion!

DP. I germinated all 10 seeds using the wet paper towel method. All 10 seeds popped within 36 hours of starting germination.

Veg Cycle: I then placed all 10 seedlings into 3 gallon pots filled with Pro-Mix soil and a very weak mix of food and water just to moisten the soil. I then started the veg cycle of which consisted of 18 hrs of light and 6 hours of darkness. after about a week and a half I started to feed the plants with Pure Blend Pro Veg at half strength. At the start of veg the plants grew very slowly for about 2 and a half weeks, then they took right off so be patient. In all I vegged the plants for 4 weeks rotating feeding and watering every 4 days.

Bloom Cycle: After 4 weeks of Veg I flipped the lights to 12/12, Within 3-6 days of flipping the lights sex was already showing. I ended up getting 7 beautiful females. I then started feeding them Pure Blend Pro Bloom again rotating feeding & watering every 4 days. I kept all 7 beauties in bloom for 62 days. Again bloom cycle started out really slow but be patient because the last 2 weeks of bloom The plants took right off again. And I also added liquid Bat Guano the last 3 weeks of bloom. I noticed a big difference in growth when I started to add the bat guano. All of the buds started becoming really compact.

Smoke Report: This Bud is amazing, Once I chopped the plants I of course let the buds dry and then I placed the bud into mason jars to cure. Well I cured for only 3 weeks and the bud turned out to be amazing. I was looking for a narcotic knock you over type stone, And I have definetly found it. I recommend this strain to anybody that is growing for medicinal purposes. Actually I recommend it to anybody that likes to smoke.

Conclusion: The grow was some what of an easy grow but sometimes you really had to be patient. If you don't have patience I wouldn't recommend this plant for you. The plants is also very picky when it comes to feeding. But trust me you will not be disappointed with your end product.

Bought a pack of 10 DP's Mazar seeds FEMINIZED.
I had some hermaphrodite and males issues so I ended up with 1 plant.

She was veg for 1 month and flowerer for 65-70 days.
She stay short, about 1.10 metre when finished with huge colas and many branches! Really liked that because I didn't need to top her. She had about 12 top nice sized top colas. I love these genetics.

I feed her with Bio-Bizz ferts that she loved them, but has some N deficiencies problems, so she likes food a lot.
My suggest is to give her 2 basic things (in all mj plants):
- Big pot size... she loves to take her roots everywere
- Air ... when I gave her fresh air from outside she repay me with growing & budding like hell!

Now for smoking...
The buds was cured for 30+ days, she smells great like pepper something. Curing gives her a very nice smooth smoke, so let her take time to cure properly!
The stone is very couchlock, top colas was "smoke and stay home" style with a lot of energy in your body to make you cleaning your house for ages.
With friends we had a realaxed stay home again high, with a lot of talking and lauging for 3+ hours!
Finnaly I think it was a strong strain for me & my fellows. 1 joint and two people were dead!
All through not my favorite strain because of strong couchlock high, but sure I will grow her for cold winters.
Peace

Excellent stable strain. Very little variation between plants except the yield and potency varies slightly, but never anything bad! That is for sure! If you are looking for a nice Indica plant with a hint of Sativa to add a bit strength to the high, this is IT. Growth is bushy. Topping once would prove excellent and huge! Thickest stem I ever saw from such a short plant. One of the most compact plants and buds I have ever seen and that is a lot of plants.

I recommend this strain to beginners because it is an easy plant to grow. Just feed it -it likes quite a bit of nutrients, and be sure to give it a full 8-9 weeks of flowering for better results. No longer than that or your trikes will have started to turn amber and degrade.

In a nut shell, Oasis (NL#2) is a great stable almost PURE Indica plant that has an excellent zone out body high, with a GOOD yield and LOW smell -the only thing it lacks is flavor.

"UPDATE"

I have found a new pheno with in the population of my Oasis. It is much better then the pheno I discribed before, so I am adjusting all the stats to that plant so that you will understand better the potential of this strain. You will NEVER be disappointed with Oasis. The very last pic is of the NEW pheno I have found.

Grower Report

November, 2003

Well, let me first start off by saying that I chose this strain because I wanted to see if feminized seeds were all they were cracked up to be. With just a few hermies and minor problems, the 100% female sex rate surpasses the hurdles! In my eyes, they are a little too pricey, so I will be sticking with standard seeds from now on, but are worth the $ for 100% beautiful women.

Early Growth:

Sprouted 3 seeds in a paper towel with a light mix of Superthrive in the H2O. 100% germ. rate (obviously). Planted all three 2 days later into small square pots with a mix of Pro Mix BX soil w/ a little extra perlite and vermiculite for added drainage. Watered with a light mix of Superthrive until the sprouts popped out of the soil. Saran wrap was placed over the tops of the pots to increase humidity and to keep from drying out. Aired twice a day, everyday. After second set of true serrated leaves appeared, transplanted into 4 gal. pots w/ Fox Farm Ocean Forest potting soil and extra vermiculite & perlite, using a dose of Superthrive to help with shock and any slight root damage that occurred.

Mid Growth/Pre-Flower:

Growth was pretty vigorous through this stage in their lives. 2 of the plants showed the expected Indica over Sativa ratio, but one plant leaned a little more towards the Sativa side than the others (thinner leaves, slightly taller). These girls sure like nutes. After about 3 weeks after transplant, had to start fertilizing with their waterings using store bought distilled water. I used Fox Farm Grow Big for the veg. ferts, w/ Nature's Best Liquid Trace Minerals as directed (give or take depending on the needs of my girls). All plants were topped once at their 5th node. After the second to the top node on each plant was alternating, they were thrown into flower all together. No preflowers that I could see for this strain.

Flowering:

Well, this is where I ran into my only problem with nute def. I didn't give them enough N after switch from 24/0 to 12/12. Some of the lower fan leaves turned a little yellow and a couple of the ends got crispy. A few feedings of a little grow ferts, and I was back on track. About a week and a half after light switch, I had nice white/pinkish pistil's peeking out! About 2 weeks after that, I had some nice little girls going on! For the flower ferts, I used Fox Farm Big Bloom & Better Harvest's Fossilized Red Seabird Guano. 3 1/2 weeks before harvest, I found the first set of hermie bannanas on the biggest top (cola). From then until harvest, found various hermie bannanas on the plants, mostly on the lower bud sites. The hermaphrodite trait in this strain sucks, but it's not too extreme. Harvested w/ 80/20 milky/amber trich's, at 59 days from 12/12 switch.

Harvest:

All three plants were harvested at the same time by cutting the main stem and hanging upside down in the grow room. Oscillating fan kept on 24 hours for air circulation. Temps were lowered to around 55-60 degrees to delay drying time (about 6 days). Averaged 1 1/4 oz. per plant dry weight.

Curing:

Tops were put into their own jars, mids and lows put into others. As of this writing, the bud has been curing for about 2 1/2 weeks now.

Smoke Report:

Now here is my favorite part of this strain rating. The Smoke Report! Well, I'm going to do this in real-time to type down what this bud does to me----*opens jar*. The smell of the jars is fantastic! Very dank, smells like good weed, just not real powerful *grabs bud, packs bowl*. When the bud breaks and crumbles into the bowl as you press down, a breeze of earthy, dank smell graces your nose. It's a beautiful thing! Trying to type with my left hand now is a little trickier due to the resin coated finger-tips *grabs lighter, takes first hit*. Goes down nice and smooth! After exhaling, a distinct taste of hash is left on your tastebuds! Nice! *takes second toke*. Same thing, except I just coughed up a lung! Went down a little too smooth and I took a little too much smoke for my lungs to handle. Still tastes pretty damn good! After waiting for 3 minutes,

I'm feeling pretty good. Not much of a creeper. I'm pretty damn high for 2 hits.

In conclusion to this strain report, I would say that this strain is a decent, good tasting, pretty potent, easy to grow, good undercover grower strain. Hermaphrodites are a pain in the rump, but can be controlled by snipping them off and carefully watching your plants and keeping stress down to a minimum, especially with light leaks during the dark portion of the 12/12 cycle. Be safe all! I'm out!

VERY easy strain to grow -ideal for a first timer.

Oasis starts off as a squat broad leaved indica with very tight nodes but grows big and bushy during flowering.

These oasis were vegged for 5 weeks and flowered for 8 weeks.

The result was 2 plants standing @ 5ft 10" (far too high for the grow space).

Unfortunately cold wintertime temps stunted the growth considerably but the 2 plants still managed to yield 11oz of lovely bud (dry). From the pics you can see how purple the bud ended up. I'm not sure if this is the result of a trait, or the cold temps.

One of the plants had super tight frosty buds while the other had larger, more airy buds. Both smoke great.

The high is quite devastating and quick. More for couchlock enthusiasts.

NO hermie problems were experienced, I got pure females from the feminised seeds.

RECOMMENDED!

February, 003

I started 5 beans out of a bag of Orange Bud "regular" (m/f) seeds.

Four of them where males and one died early so I had to start the remaining 5. One seed did not sprout but 4 did it. Vegged for 35 days, first week under 72 watt fluoro light, then under a 400 watt Grolux wich was used also for the flowering stage.Vegged until 14" (35 cm) then switched to 12/12, they stretched a lot, finishing to be (even tied down a bit...) over 1.2 meters tall each (50" and over...).

I was not very happy with those seeds: I also had a bag of "Skunk #1" with them who revealed fatal genetic problems,probably just an unlucky stock as all the Orange Bud females showed hermie bananas...

After 2 week the plants showed the sex: 3 females on 4 plants and all doin' good. I was very impressed about the growth vigour the plants shown till that moment, very fast growing, bushy and sane looking plants. At the 4th week of flowering I started to notice male bananas on all the 3 female left... 2 of them were chopped after 38 days of flowering due to too many bananas, the other one had bananas-cuttings every day till day 56 of flowering then was chopped. Anyway I found 8-10 seeds in the buds...

Two of the plants were grown in soil (Plagron mix), Canna ferts (Terra Vega + Flores + ph 13-14), pH of the solutions was 6.5.

One was grown in Canna Coco, with Canna a+b for ferts,Cannazym, pk 13-14 and a ph of 6.0 in vegetative stage and 5.75-5.80 during flowering from the 2nd week of 12/12.

I had only 1 "pheno": the hermie big stretcher pheno, but the plant that flowered for 56 days was good both in resin production and in potency, with a dry skunk/pine smell that revealed some citrus orange backgrounds when cured (15-20 days). Although I had only hermies I can tell you that the one I smoked was really potent. If you are lucky enough to find a good resiner pheno with no hermie traits you should keep it as a mother... I don't like hermies much so I think I won't grow those beans again, also because some friends of mine reported hermie problems.

The grow the plants were grown in also was used for a couple of batch of other seeds (Nirvana& Sensi), about 4 other strains and none of the females flowered (same medium/grow/ferts..everything...) has shown hermie traits... This makes me presume those traits were in the genetics (parents) of the seeds...

Got 1 female out of 3 seeds.

Was a very fast growing plant, needed little care, but if stressed will hermie.

In vegtative growth they grow very tall, I topped after 3 weeks and became a very tall bushy plant. Very easy to grow, this is a great strain if you want to grow SCROG. I did not SCROG but i trained and pruned her to have an even canopy without a screen.

After 3 weeks I topped and then the last week of veg,(veg time 6 weeks) I took string and tied it to the 4 biggest branches and pulled them down for a bit to allow the light to penstrate the inner canopy, thus allowing the middle to catch up for a even canopy.

I kept strings on till harvest which, Which I really did not want to do as the longer they are tied in place, the more the plant depends and will not hold its own weight up.

the result was a very nice even canopy.

I had to move while flowering so moving her around and retying her kinda stressed her out towards the end and the result was only 3 seeds.

If you want a great scrog strain with easy to grow and dont require a high amount of nutrients, this strain is definatly for you!

BUT, this strain will hermie if stressed to much, not a strain for new growers.

I got 3 1/2 oz from her under 400 watt HPS. Odor level was very skunky and mixed with skunk and citrus smell. You definatly need odor reducing if you are going to grow this strain, and I only had 1 growing.

The large, tight, spear-shaped buds are made up of small, densely packed purple calyxes. The plants are taller and like to branch out. Indoors the buds are fully mature by the end of their sixth week. "Flo" is ideal for greenhouse production. Feeding the Flo comes with a note of CAUTION, as it is very prone to over - fertilizing, be careful with the strength of your fertilizer, I only used half strength, and that was plenty, flushing at 34 days, and adding the PK 13-14 at day 40.

The stature of the Flo is quite tall and slender, but it doesn't take up a lot of room, this one ended up at 35" tall.

Curing took approx 3 weeks, hung it up for a week, then dried it out for a further 2 weeks, but I put some away and forgot about it and after another 3 weeks or so i smoked it, and let me tell you, there was a hell of a difference in potency, my south-African mate said it was very close to African Rooibart with a huge grin.

I've grown her inside and outside and love her either way.

Inside under 430 watts she is a little tall but with proper pruning can give a very good harvest. Lots of crystalline buds on long tops but no huge Yule logs. She is somewhat picky about watering and nutes. I grow organic in live soil inside and out.

Outside in good sun she gets huge and each branch turns into a separate Christmas tree shape and needs staking. Many, many long tops with rock hard but thin colas. I had a plant outside which required 13 stakes to hold the heavy branches up and it yielded over two pounds of quality colas.

Out of the ten seeds I received there was much variation in offspring.

One was all purple, so purple it looked black, but the smoke was terrible tasting and there was no high.

One was a totally thin leaved sativa looking plant but was male and sterile.

The one I love most was a green, mixed looking but more to the sativa side plant, very potent and tasty. That has been my main mother plant and is in all the pictures.

I just harvested a couple more potential mothers, one has purple calyxes and green leaves and is strong but not as flavorful as the main mother and another, a green plant with a powerful high and good taste.

I believe this variety has been underrated. I think there is a lot of variety in each pack of seeds and you need to search for a good mom. I have found real winners in a couple of seeds in this pack. It's taken some searching and a lot of time and space but with great reward. Everybody who smokes the Flo loves it and wants more. It's my favorite daytime smoke very soaring active high, but it can nail you down with its power too if you smoke too much at once. But still the mind flies along with vivid ideas and visions; music becomes more intense and easier to connect with. I love Floooooo

I germinated 3 seeds and all popped. Two of them were female. Something unique I noticed about Flo is that the main stem is trying to put out roots. I found a good mother out of the few plants I had. The buds from 1 of the phenos I got were nothing but resinous bracts. The other pheno was a little more dense and squat. The high is trippy clear, and up. Very nice smoke. Cloning was a joy with this strain. It practically throws roots out at you.

Vegetative growth was lush and green with a little sativa stretch. No need to tie this one down unless you veg for more than a week or two. Just a little skunk smell during vegging.

Flowering is just a little tricky. This is not a beginner strain. It is very sensitive to nutes and temps. I would recommend organic nutes. If you balance that right you're in for a treat. Flo smells like sweet grape honey during flowering. I would recommend odor control.

This is also a strain that begs for proper curing and storage. After a 3 month cure it really jumps out at you. The high is very up and trippy. The first time I smoked it I ended up slightly paranoid, and my heart pounding. After getting used it's complex high I realize it to be a very useful strain for everything from having great sex, to playing music. Very visual high that will last all day.

9 seeds were started directly in soil (moist and ph tested) in small pots. All germinated nicely in a week. Only 1 was a bit slow responding and appeared a few days later.

Seedling/Veg.

Some seedling were purple/pink colored. Plants were stabilized in a good week and veg stage has begun. One was growing big like a queen, she overgrew all, while 1 other was showing anomalies on the leaves and was working slowly. These 2 plants were moved on the balcony (it was late summer). The others were more or less similar in structure, lookin' like most sativa dominant varieties in their young stage.

3 plants were given to a trusted local grower and are not a part of my report from this point now.

Indoor plants were vegged 1 week, this means after good 2 weeks (seedling+veg) under 16/8, I turned the lights on 11/13.

Healthy leaves appeared on the mutant after a week of sunlight. The so called queen was bigger & bigger every day. This variety simply loves the sun.

Flowering

Indoors they were growing taller and had a tendence to branch out, some plants more than others. Almost green calyxes, only a few turned purple, starting at the beginning of flowering... Some colors also on the leaves. First buds were ready in 45 days, some were harvested after 50days, others a week later. A few buds were full matured (cloudy/amber trichomes) while many parts of the plant were making new, fresh nuggets with white hairs & clear trichs. This variety has a force for flowering and can be multi-harvested. The plants will not die if the conditions are fine. A relative constant ph and racional watering will care for a happy root system. Organic fertilizers are recommended and generally lower levels of nutrients for the Blue family, plant/pot/size dependent.

Outdoor (balcony) Flo flowering was an interesting process.

The bud density is overall higer than indoors. The "mutant" was small with a very thick, deep purpled stem. The first nuggs from the queen were harvested while this mutant was in the preflowers stage and smelling fresh in the tropical way. The stem from the queen' was green, also leaves, but she produced small, rock hard nuggs with deep purple/red colors and a hashy aroma, a little rough. Later were also leaves & stem purpling because of cold nights in the last weeks of flowering. The "mutant" was obviously a late flowering flo pheno. A nice colored beauty with fat calyxes, coated with a high concentration of small trichomes. Deep lovely fresh/floral aroma. This was by far the best smelling/tasting Flo.

A word about The Smoke

Phenos and environment are resulting with differend aromas and types-of-High.

The deep colored buds from the queen had a bit hashy taste but no so sweet and the high was not good in relation with indoor plants.

Indoor buds were tasty, some kind of a fruit mix. Soft smoke and delivered a productive up'high which is stimulative, comfortable and enjoyable, but rather more intensive than long lasting.

The best came out of the late flowering flo pheno. Excellent taste & great appeal. Smile-Up effects, ideal for doing any kind of stuff, for a happy nice day or active parties in the evening, but it can get complex if smoking much in a short time.

Overall a very strong plant. The quality is in the experience, not so much in the yield, which is average. Nice colored variety!

A fast growing mainly sativa with African origins. I'm on my fifth grow now with PP all from the same mother stock. I have found them to be very reliable in all stages of growth, but due to the vigour I would advise supplementing any nutes with Magnesium. I really notice the Mag def after the first couple of weeks in flower. A friend who just runs a 400w system has never had Mag problems with plants from the same mothers, so I'm guessing that they start to suffer when you push them with higher wattages.

From a two week vegging period (clone) and then allowing for flowering stretch the PP tops out at between 3.5ft and 5ft. The stretch is very much pheno dependent though, with the shorter pheno being a quicker finisher (six weeks) in my experience.

The stretch of the PP can be filled though to produce some large dense buds, also tying down helps to produce more top stems for bud production. A plant with numerous 12"+ colas is easily possible given the right conditions.

The resin production on PP is good, with all buds having a good thick coating of trichomes. Nice easy plant to harvest, and the shake contains copious amounts of crystal so it's a very good strain for hashmaking as well.

Overall I'm more than happy with PP, it took me a couple of grows to get them dialed in, but they're firing on all cylinders for me now.

Growth

Power Plant hasn't been the easiest to grow compared to other plants in my garden but the end results have been fantastic.

Veg growth is quite rapid, but nute lockout is easily done. I found it hard to keep the leaves a uniform colour, but even after quite a beating it still flowered fine.

The plant triples in height when switched to flower, and then it really laps up the nutes. It has a very high calyx to leaf ratio with only a few bud sites, the buds swell plenty though to make up for this. Pistils are yellow not white.

Smoke

My first try with PP was hydro with cheap chemmy nutes and no flush. As you can imagine it was like going to a crap coffeeshop in Amsterdam, metallic as hell. But after smoking my brothers cutting which he took before I flowered I was amazing by the smooth uplifting high. Easily the one of the best daytime smokes I've had -motivating, happy and funny.

In the evenings you can keep smoking this baby and you'll get higher and higher, no paras, and plenty of headroom for hardcore smokers.

Recommended highly.

I didn't have any problems with nutes at all, gave them both 2-2-4 and 0-13-14 during flowering and they liked it. Flushed for a week. Had some heatburn due to ventilation problems the last two weeks, it affected the yield.

When dry the buds tasted a bit woody but smooth with a very uplifting high perfect for a party.

It should have been easier growing this since it seemed like a good beginners choice, but we had some trouble not getting the yields we wanted, next time we hope it will go easier.

We also noticed that the strain is sensitive to mites, compared to other strains in our garden.

Happy growing!

So I just gave them a dose of Epson salts and that didn't half help them out, they took a lot of Bloom before I started seeing tip burn.

Smoking it was decent, kinda sweet and rough, and the smell was not too horrible. My overall thought on this strain is that it's fun to grow but not the best in the garden.

I germinated these in wet tissue (early May), which I let go bone dry once, yet they all but 2 made it! Planted germinated seeds in peat pots for a week or so (until the roots were showing), and then into a large wood pot on the back porch. Eight in total, 2 got destroyed by the biggest slug EVER, 3 were female, and one got some fucked up disease. Which? I have no idea! This left me with 2 females which started flowering somewhere around late June - early August. I harvested the last plant 25/09/2004.

The heads were a beautiful purple when taken, sticky ripe fruity smell. I think I probably underfed them a bit, and had too many plants in one pot, but it's my first grow, so I'm stoked. I smoked my first bong of an early little crop I took, and it was great. I can't wait to experience the main shit once it's fully cured.

Grower Report

August,

First off, I would say this plant was annoying to deal with. I dont know if I got a bad pack or something but out out 2 packs (20 seeds) only about 10 made it past seedling stage. So it kind of looks like one pouch may have been shitty... oh well.

Throughout the life of my babies there were 2 distinct varieties; healthy and unhealthy. The healthy plants were tall and lanky and the un's were shorter and had very leathery, cracked leaves that I still wonder the cause of. By the end of their lives though most leaves cleared up however.

Also with very flexible stems at the point of harvest, the branches of the healthy plants were bent horizontal with bud weight. However, unlike the DP description, my buds were not long and compact at all, in fact they were very fluffy and airy, and the dry yield was beyond shitty - about 7oz from 4 plants in the ground outside.

So, with all these apparent problems (health, yield, seedling death) why do I like it? The high is great, gets me so HIGH not stoned and I'm yet to find a ceiling to the smoke, the more I toke the higher I get, unlike some weed were you plateau,. That said this isn't "1 hit shit," its good and I enjoy it, but I won't grow it again due to my problems with it.

One upside I failed to mention is I had no issues with mold at all when some other strains gave me trouble the same season. also it finished early (some at end of aug., others beg. of sept.)

I was looking for a high THC outdoor strain that would not have a strong odor when flowering. I came across Passion # 1 and the plant was exactly what I was looking for.

All fifteen of the feminized seeds sprouted and when six inches tall they were transplanted outside into a mixture of potting soil and cow manure. The plants were attacked by bugs and slugs but soon the attacks were under control with neem oil and slug bait.

No hermies or males and they started to flower in July. I picked the plants on September 5th and I could have picked a few plants a week earlier! This plant flowers early, finishes early, and averaged 2oz per plant. Not bad for such a fast finisher! The buds have a lot of crystals and a piney smell. One plant has just a hint of Skunk smell. Smells great when burning and will turn a white rolling paper black.

I gave it to a bunch of people and asked them to rate the high on a scale of 1 to 10. Most people came back with 8's and 9's. They really enjoyed it! I would defiantly grow Passion #1 again because it finishes fast and has a great high.

After seeing shitty results, I managed to find a 60watt neon spotlight aquired by my hobo budget, in order to illuminate my closet.

I pruned it once it was in vegetative growth for a little while. Due to inabudent light source, the plant stayed small, but humble. It was very pretty with dark thin indica leaves matched with dark purple branches. Leaves grew only close to the light.

Once flowering time began, it began to produce alot of crystal white thc covering the purple and dark green. But began to get suprisingly big and very smelly. A very fresh and earthy aroma hung around in my room for quite a while.

I also fed it with advanced nutrients' Bud Blood to initiate it very nicely. Buds got a weekly feeding of CarboLoad and BigBud until fruitful ripening.

After drying I had a very enjoyable harvest of about 10grams. Enjoyable for my chillum.

Sacra Frasca from Dutch Passion

From: Dutch Passion

Source Description

dp-thum.jpg Sacra Frasca" or "Holy Joint" is a F1 - hybrid between Power Plant and Skunk Passion, both true-breeding varieties. Power Plant, is a renowned variety like White Widow or Orange Bud , which you will find in almost any coffeeshop in the Dutch cities.. a result we are very proud of. This variety is only available in its feminized form. For the creation of this hybrid we used feminized Skunk Passion "pollen" to fertilize a female Power Plant. Therefore the features of Power Plant are most pronounced in this hybrid. Very potent and energetic uphigh, caused by the hybrid vigor of combining two genetically very different Sativas. Sacra Frasca also gives very good yields in a greenhouse. Through the "open" Sativa growth pattern a very mold resistant variety. Respectable yield. Bracts and also fan leaves carry lots of resin.

Germinated 2 seeds with the minimal of fuss. Using both organic soil and ferts. Once again I held back on the ferts until the onset of flowering. I noticed the classic Sativa stretch after the transition from fluorescent lighting to HPS.

After 4-5 weeks of flowering the plant decided to stretch out even more, though filled out nice enough. I watered twice a week and used ferts every 3rd watering.

I have now just under 5 oz curing in glass jars. I would recommend this strain for back pain, slight tranquillizing effect. Enjoyable to smoke.

April, 2003

Shaman is a cross between Purple #1 and Skunk. The pack of 10 feminised seeds I bought gave me 5 healthy green Shamans and 5 healthy purple Shamans, so it's 50% purple and 50% green.

The purple ones grow out big and christmas tree shaped (check the plant on the left on the 4th picture), the green ones stay more compact and can be made very branchy if topped.

No real problems observed during veg period, except for the usual spider mite attack in the dry period of July, and the usual caterpillar attack starting in early August. But this wasn't a biggie, because I could see them everyday and it is outdoors after all.

Bud period: they produce and finish buds very fast. I had a purple Shaman last year which I could harvest on the 1st of September. The green one seems more resinous than the purple one and makes ball-like compact buds all over the plant with a couple of big balls at the end of the branches. The purple one seems to put all its energy in producing long, spear-like budsticks with a bit of popcorn buds left on the lower part of the plant.

Smoke report: it's the Sativa that is highest in THC from Dutch passion, so it's a very braincharging smoke. One half of a thin joint and you are able to concentrate in a deeper way on drawing, talking to people or watching movies. A whole joint and you find out you have mild visions with eyes closed, you can have loops in your thinking and you are able to understand more things out of the Bhagavad-Gita.

Any more than this is trippy.

In the vaporizer the most I have smoked from this stuff is a very thin joint worth and I had very vivid hallucinations. Sometimes it is like watching the channel on the tv where you see all the channels at once, because I had all kind of images, movies in my mind at the same time, so it got a bit racey for me.

But mostly I smoke a raisin like bud in the vaporizer which gets me very uplifted.

The purple one is more uplifting then the green one.

This is quite a strain. all 4 of the seeds I planted germinated within a day's time. their time in the veg stage was relatively short, 32 days and all four plants started to alternate nodes. they spent 70 days in flowering but probably could have gone longer. I prefer to harvest early in the window cause I prefer head highs more . Yield was ok, but I know it would have been better had I used more light.

Pheno: all four of my plants were quite different in appearance.

1. this one exhibits indica growth patterns. the nugs are large and fluffy. during flowering this plant smelled like a salad of tropical fruits. the taste isn't quite the same as the smell but it is just as good. it is a mix of the "skunky" taste and fruit.

2. this plant encountered some problems.... at first I thought it was an over watering problem, but then I soon learned it was a nutrient deficiency but at this point there wasn't much I could do because it would have been time to flush. this plant exhibited sativa character, it stretched almost twice its height. oddly, it did not smell in flowering. the smell of the nugs when dry is fresh and green smelling. the smoke has a taste of skunk

3. I nicknamed this plant, Frosty McGurkenson. Let me tell you, it was covered in resin. I chose this one to be my mother. it smelled just like FUNKY weed when it was flowering. the taste and smell of dry nugs is heavenly. it is smooth and skunky tasting. gets me stoned in 2 hits

4. the last one smelled like blueberries which I thought was odd. the dry buds even smell like blueberries but taste like berries mixed with the skunk taste.

I keep referring to the skunk taste.... this taste is unlike any other I have tasted. put simply, it exemplifies funk in my mind.

the high: since I harvested early in the window of when one can harvest, the highs off of each plant start in the head . Surprisingly, the high for all the plants are quite similar. They motivate you for a little while, then after a good hour and a half, you want to sit. Nice high for any time of the day and you can function quite well on it.

This isn't the most potent bud in the world, but the taste and high more than make up for it. A true masterpiece.

I will continue to grow this strain until I am sick of it, which I don't see happening anytime soon.

This is a wonderful plant. Very vigorous and quite frankly beautiful. The stems however can tend to be a bit weak and the buds can get a bit heavy for them. I had to heavily support them as they matured.

This plant was a true joy to grow. It's hardy and forgiving but maybe not necessarily for beginners.

The buds are very heavy for the size of the stems and have the major benefit of not producing too much leaf on the buds which means trimming is a synch. Previous grows took hours to complete but this bad little lady look an hour or so. A real plus! The buds are also nice and heavy.

I found the high to be as close to what I call perfect, as I've ever smoked. It really hits you but doesn't leave you dead on the couch. If you write music and like a little weed to inspire you, this is the one for you. It leaves you heavily stoned without making you a vegetable.

My fav plant so far

It takes 8 to 9 weeks to bloom, but your patience will be richly rewarded. Guarantees a beautiful quality harvest. The high is slowly rising, may take several hours, and diminishes slowly after that. *dp-thum.jpg*Blueberry (1st prize HTCC 2000, 3rd prize HTCC 2001) and Mazar (2nd prize HTCC 1999, 2nd price High Life Cup 2002) are the two unbeatable Indicas in our seed collection. Skywalker is a hybrid product of a Mazar female and a Blueberry male. The intention was to create one of the best Indicas in the world. The special Blueberry taste and aroma are combined in this hybrid with the vigor and yield of Mazar. Blueberry characteristics such as "curling leaves", slow initial growth, and bluish hues have disappeared in this hybrid, while taste, aroma (fruity and fresh), and the quality of the "high" are retained. Grown from clones at "Sea of Green", these seeds will yield about 400 gr./m2 under optimum conditions.

I grew Skywalker from seed in an organic soilless mix. Very uniform and vigorous growth from all plants. Very dense and bushy with many branches. Some leaf blades were as wide as my hand. Flowering brought some variations. I had an exact 50/50 ratio of males to females but one female grew one or two small pollen sacs. Nothing that couldn't be clipped off.

Buds grew very dense and tight with extreme amounts of resin. Lots of tall standing trichomes. These plants produced some outstanding bud. It tastes very fresh and fruity and smells great. Very stinky. The high comes on strong and fast with a mind-numbing and spacey effects. Not as couch-lock as others I have tried but very comfortable and relaxing. This hybrid is my favorite overall so far. Unbeatable by many!

Grower Report

June, 2003

Skywalker is a Dutch Passion strain derived from crossing one of the most potent Sativa/Indica hybrids I have ever smoked (Mazar), and the tastiest Indica I have ever smoked (Blueberry). The seeds came direct from the "Seeds of Passion" on the Utrechtstraat in A'dam.

First, and foremost: I would suggest that new growers do not attempt to start on these genetics.. The plant went "hermie," or hermaphroditic around 40 days of flowering. I was forced to pick pollen sacs out of the buds on a regular basis until I harvested it 26 days later. This created a small number of seeds, however I was shooting for sensimillia. My inexperience, combined with the misfortune of a hermaphrodite, led to a smaller yeild than this plant will produce under ideal circumstances. An experienced grower could easily double my yield of 83 grams/plant!

Due to Skywalker's mostly indica heritage, height won't be a problem for most growers. But this strain, with the proper topping/FIMing/Training, is an ideal one for microgrowers!

As you can see in the photos, I had trained the plant using LST. (Low Stress Training, or tying it down.) I had minimal vertical space, and didn't want a plant that grew too tall. To assist in this, I topped the plant around 20 days into the vegetative cycle at the 4th node, to allow for her "arms" to reach the same height as the main-stem cola. As you can see, it worked wonders.

Unlike most growers I used Compact Fluorescent (CF) lighting, as opposed to HID (MH/HPS). Many growers will tell you that CF's are far less effective than HID's, however this grower was concerned my about the stealth/security of the grow rather than the efficiency. Even so, the plant thickened up quite nicely, producing nice round buds. The largest was seven inches tall and 4 inches wide (about 21 grams).

As the plant matured, it produced white pistils that would change colors to variable pink and purplish hues. Even further along, they turned a dark red-orange. I must say, this is the "hairiest" cannabis I have ever seen! In addition to that, this plant carries a great potential for creating "bag-appeal" from cold temperatures. Near the cool-air intake, the leaves and stems turned purple. Cold nighttime temperatures late in flowering would definitely enhance the beauty of this already gorgeous strain!

The odor was almost non-existent, in the traditionally skunky-sense. No smell during the vegetative cycle unless you rubbed the leaves. In flowering, it had more of a pungent, earthy odor that was easily taken care of with proper carbon filtration of the exhaust.

I harvested this plant using a 100x loupe microscope to view the trichome colors. 10% amber, 70% cloudy, 20% almost clear. This harvest timing allows for a very heady high that settles into a solid couch-lock feeling over time. It works great for muscle pain and migraines, while allowing you to have a high thought count at the same time! I could sum it all up in one sentence: Perfect for the med-user that still wants the feeling of a high-quality sativa high. The taste of the smoke is just like the smell, earthy, but it finishes with a fruity/solventy aftertaste. A seasoned smoker could easily make a Friday night feel like a Saturday morning with a few tokes of these buds! (If you catch my drift.)

"My back pain feels better, I'm hungry, I wonder how many people have farted while I was talking to them?" - A sentence uttered by me about 15 minutes after toking my first sample.

All in all, a very beautiful, temper mental strain. A VERY potent and balanced high. I suggest this strain to anyone and everyone with a bit of experience growing under their belt!

Next the Coke Pheno this one takes 70 days at least, but well worth the wait its way frosty and 3 hits is enough to make you pass out this is definitely end of the day weed. I dont like this pheno as much because it makes you so hungry even if you just ate if you smoke a bowl of this you gotta eat again.

Let me just begin by saying that *nothing* this strain provided could justify the price tag. That isn't to say that the results weren't good, but anyone looking for 'the best bud' should look elsewhere.

I germinated four seeds (all popped after 48 hours or so under moist paper towels) and vegged for about 3.5 weeks. The idea was to keep the girls small because of environmental reasons. Initial growth was very disappointing.

Once they started flowering, they began sucking up the nutes and blossomed with vigor. By about day 30-ish, two of the plants began changing colors. The leaves looked like they were developing necrotic patches, but the leaves stayed soft and moist, and still exhibited healthy traits. By week six, I was welcomed with yellows, purples, and reds. The best way to describe it is like a tree changing colors during the fall season. It really was a treat to watch. I harvested the girls a tad early. Trichomes were mixed cloudy and clear about 50/50. Unfortunately, all the girls developed seeds at about week 5.

As far as the smoke goes, it lives up to its reputation as far as taste goes. The high is only slightly better than my last bag seed grow. I was looking for some wonder-pot that would knock my unsuspecting friends on their asses, but I just ended up with some good smoke. Surely not $150 dollar seed smoke though!

The high is very much a body-stone. Three or four hits will have you nicely high, and it'll last about an hour until you start coming back down from it. Also, plan on having munchies around as this stuff will get you eating.

The second did have a fruity smell but i dont know weather you would have called it strawberry,and it didnt look so hairy.

I grow organically and i can say first hand that these girls didnt like a lot of fertilization...so take care with the food!!!

Formerly this strain was called "Haze/Skunk". Still one of the best for the Dutch Passion team. Originally Haze is a pure Sativa strain. It is crossed with Skunk#1 to get a bigger yield, a softer taste and a shorter flowering period. Truly superior sweet taste. The high is in-credibly clear and up energy. A very favorite strain from our collection. Very high yield for an almost 100% Sativa variety.

I vegged Super Haze quite long, but I wish I'd have vegged it for longer, as it didn't stretch much during flower.

This strain has no problems sucking up the nutes; I used full strength with no hint of fert burn at all. The nodes are very bunched up, close together, and you can already smell that sweet, sweet smell of the Super haze.

Flower:

After I triggered it, Super Haze showed sex first out of the whole grow room, with hardly any stretch at all, and the nodes still very close together for a Sativa.

Because the plant is quite short, with the nodes too, it looks a very impressive yield quite early in flower, with the buds long and quite thin, but it is also very loose bud, not compact at all, therefore looking a very impressive yield.

As in veg, it drinks nutes like there's no tomorrow, I fed till 42 days, then added the booster at 50 days after flushing for a week.

I don't know if all of Super Haze are the same, as this is the only one I've grown, but after this grow, my advice is veg BIG.

This plant finished at 69 days, but could have gone longer, maybe 5 - 10 days or so.

The smell of this strain is absolutely delightful, I've never smelled a sweeter smelling bud than Super Haze, you just can't stop smelling it, you don't want to smoke it, it's so nice!

It really doesn't smell like bud, you'll want to eat it, honestly.

High:

The high of the Super Haze was really quite disappointing, I was expecting a LOT more from this strain, the high does not match the name.

It's very mild, comes on quite slow, but it's not very potent at all, probably the mildest bud I've ever smoked, but it is still quite pleasant, if it wasn't for the smell, and the creamy sweet taste of the Super Haze, then I'd be very disappointed.

Living in Sweden I had to grow this both indoors and outdoors. Indoors is tricky since Twilight is sensitive to temperatures over 30 (Celcius) and we had some problems with ventilation and heat. We had 3 different genotypes, one very tall, one a bit bushy and one inbetween.

Indoors we got the best results trimming it scrog or fim/top in veg and trimming the lower branches. We tried sog but it was useless, the plants were to lanky.

The Sweden summer suggested we flower for 2 weeks indoors before planting it outdoors. We had it grow for a couple of months inside (1m) and then flowered it for 2 weeks. We found a secluded spot where we put our Twilight one night in June. We used 10-15l potting soil with small leca.

When it didn't rain we watered it. It had a lot of sun but the weather could have been better.

The yield outdoors wasn't better than indoors this summer. The buds were denser indoors.

The taste is heavy and rich, very nice! And the high is more of a low, you get glued to the sofa but if you want to get something from the kitchen it's not impossible.

Grower Report

December, 2004

This report is my first but I just had to tell you about this one... A very nice find indeed!

5 seeds were planted from a regular (non feminised) breeder pack. The main goal with this genetics was to add some purple to the indoor garden WITHOUT doing anything to drop night temperatures during flowering. Some people told me this was a very rare feature but I thought I would try anyway. This plant is listed for outside but I decided to grow it under the HPS even if I had read bad reports about Twilight grows indoor. They are some of the cheapest seeds available from Dutch Passion so I did not care very much if it turned out bad. For the price I figure you just cant go wrong with Twilight. As space was an issue around here, I only had room for two 1,5L pots and thought I needed would have to carefully select the best individuals.

3 out of 5 seeds germinated and one happened to be a freaky mutant that I tossed out. That makes it 2 plants. They were vegged for 3 weeks and then, as flowering started, I was lucky enough to get 2 females... Those 2 plants showed different phenos, one was with green buds and the other, with purple buds. The 2 phenos grew in very similar ways, and happen to be easily the stretchiest variety I have grown to date. With such fat fan leaves, both phenos I had definitely show strong indica roots. They grew to about 3 foot high and tripled height during flowering so watch out for this! Both plants were what I call Single Cola phenotypes and had very few side branches, but the main cola really made up for this. The buds have a good density and I think they might be prone to rot because of this fact.

The plants were cut after 52-53 days of flowering (12/12). By then they were the best looking in the garden with very nice coloration and trichome production. They could have been left a little longer, maybe a week for maximum potency. I am glad I did not do that, as this bud is already a quick-hitter, one that makes me really sit back...

The final yield was almost 20 grams of prime bud per plant. Each one had about a third of a square foot to grow so that makes around 2 Oz per sq./ft. even with so much stretch.

The taste, after one week of curing in jars, is sweet and not harsh at all. I personally do not flush with the kind of fertilizer I use but it does not seem to affect the final product. The smell is like some unknown rotten fruit.

Bottom line: Try this strain. It looks awesome, yields great, has good potency and is on the cheap side for such nice genetics. The only possible drawback is if you have height restrictions. Then, you might want to look somewhere

Very easy plant to grow. I cut back the lights in 1 1/2 weeks because I knew I'd be moving soon. The result was still better than I expected. The plants are SKUNK and they act like any other skunk plant. High nutes & they can take some abuse like no other. Not PH sensitive...

I started 3 plants and only one was female. I cloned the plant and gave the clone to a friend who's a grower too. VERY EASY TO CLONE. roots popped out in 6 days from the cube. The method I used was: hydroton in a bowl, a little root stiimulador from Green Fuse, a dual air pump with 2 bubble stones and changed the water out every day.

The veg. cycle is very productive bringing forth Huge leaves. When I cut the lights back, within a week the plant was growing over 8 inches a day!

Flowers begin to show afetr about 2 weeks of turning back the lights. at about week 7 the plant has stopped growing upward almost all together, then it begins to swell and grow outward. Thgis is when you should use some strong blooming formula's. Resin forms so heavily on the buds, touching them is a "No no". just touch the resin coated leaves if you can't resist. The smell is awesome!

For taste, Harvest the plants AS SOON AS the pistols begin to shrink back at the top. You'll get a potent bud with VERY good taste. If you want more potency, Harvest when the pistols almost all shrink back & the clyaxes bust forth. You had better be a heavy duty smoker for this weed. I can't even smoke it myself and I'm 36 years old and have been smokin' since I was 13!

The finished product has awesome bag appeal, so if ur gonna sell this stuff, this is the one to grow! Like I said... VERY POTENT! Knock your ass out!

OUTDOOR GROW REPORT

Four plants were started directly outdoors in May and harvested by the end of September (all female). Flowering has started early, before mid-July. Slow maturation. Preflowers appeared during the 7th week from seed.

Very strong plants, with wide, thick fan leaves at first. Easy to grow. Can take high levels of nutrients and did well under harsh conditions (rain, heat, wind).

Good resistance to pests (mites and aphids), and mold (despite quite compact bud structure). Quite similar to Dutch Passion's Durban Poison, very leafy, but shorter plants with shorter internodes (5 to 6 ft tall at harvest).

No real stretching at the time flowering has started. Quite bushy plants.

Long, leafy slender buds. Surprisingly compact for a mostly Sativa variety. Takes some time to manicure properly. Trichome density was average, as expected for a Thai hybrid.

Very nice smell and taste, soft smoke. Spacey, heady high, definitely more on the Sativa side.

Weak point: yield (100 to 120 grams of dried and manicured buds per plant).

Conclusion: a nice strain producing quality buds, but only a bigger yield would make it a keeper for outdoors.

Not the easiest to grow by a long way. Huge stretch in flower, almost doubled in size in the first 2 weeks, and quite easy to burn with nutes. Probably not the best strain for a beginner. I noticed that the flowering time you often get told for WW is 70 days; this was much too long for mine. They only took 54 days, although this could be down to the phenotype.

Germination:

From a 10 feminized seeds pack (100 euros= approx. 100$), I got 7 ladies and the other 3 beans went to trash (this germination problem may come from too much moisture: it seems the 3 weakest seeds have rotten).

Phenotypes:

Phenotype from this pack was quite uniform: a sativa-indica mix, with a sativa predominance.

Vegetative stage:

The younger plants are, the larger are the leaves. They really look like indica during the 3 first weeks of vegetative growth. I was astonished when I remarked trichomes presence during early vegetative growth with quite strong smell.

Blooming stage:

Average stretching (1/3rd of total height before flowering). The whole plant gets heavy covered with white crystals and many white hairs.

Finished with good sized colas and buds with flashy red-orange hairs.

There were very few little buds and near-nodes buds.

Be careful when getting to the end of flowering: this strain has still MANY white pistils when matured. So you should make daily trichome examination with 30x microscope.

Cloning:

I took clones from the fastest developing plants: easy cloning with nearly 100% success. I used standard cloning method (+ Clonex) with scarification.

They rooted very easily into the growing medium (clay balls).

They looked strange (distorted leaves, irregular node spacing) at the beginning as I had to revert the mother plants from early flowering to vegetative growth. In fact, my cat had eaten the first clones I had taken; I was forced to switch the mothers back to vegetative growth and take a new batch of clones!

Pruning/Training:

I topped each plant twice in order to get approx. 4 colas/plant.

I tied down the plants 'till the end of stretching: all branches got approximately to same level.

Nutes:

I used Canna Aqua A+B for vegetative growth and then HESI blooming nutes: I never went over 2.0 EC (Total = 0.45 (water) +2 =2.45 EC).

In the middle of flowering the plants got darker: they passed from light green to deep dark green but without signs of nute burn.

I used PK13-14 from 5 weeks before harvest 'till week 7 and let 'em with only GH Ripen during the last 10 days.

Harvesting/Curing:

A very decent yield: I've been smokin' 5 joints/day (that's an average of course!) for 1.5 months yet and I think it could last another 2 months more.

I cut the plants, roughly manicured them and hanged 'em in the dark (without fan because then the buds would dry too fast IMO). It took about 2 weeks to dry. I sealed the buds into mason jars and kept one jar for daily smokin' till the others get cured enough.

Buds appearance:

Good sized buds, very hard/compact, VERY sticky

Taste:

The buds taste good but I was kind of disappointed: they had not the best taste I've ever seen. Taste is a little bit harsh (after 1 month curing) with soft acidic flavor like citrus.

Smell:

I think that's the greatest characteristic of this strain (together with heavy resin covering). The odor is VERY strong: be very careful when growing or transporting buds in your pocket/car. It's very hard to describe it: I just could say that it's very pleasant.

Potency:

Very strong weed but I think it can go from heavy mental high (with very low body effect) to serious couch-lock if you let them flower longer. I tried both flowering duration ("normal":55 days and "long":70 days): IMO you shouldn't let them flower too long or you'll get rapidly tired of those baseball bat hits on your head, eyes and legs when you smoke it. If you let them about 55 days, you'll get a very nice uplifting and strong high, without ANY paranoia/anxiety and you can still do things (with happiness!) after smoking a joint (work, drive etc.).

I'd also recommend to make hash with all those magnificent leaves covered with resin: the effect then is quite strong, taste & smell are great but far more couch-lock than smokin' buds.

Conclusion:

This is the best weed I have ever grown in terms of potency (I LOVE this high!) and yield. It's a very easy to grow strain and also easy to clone.

A very nice plant to grow for those who don't mind waiting. White Widow packs a real punch when it comes to the size and effect of this great medication. Total flowering time indoor was 75 days which was a lot more than I would have liked to have waited. End result from 2 female plants was 4 oz dry weight. Buds were all nice in size and full of THC.

I placed my plants in 48 hours of darkness prior to harvest. Drying time may take longer than expected due to sheer size of the buds. Definitely glad that I grew this strain, but I doubt that I will continue to do so because of how long they take to finish.

June, 2003

The Dutch passion feminised white widow was a massive smoke and an easy plant to grow. I do recommend it. Of 4 seeds, 3 sprouted and all were females. The plants were very bushy which caused problems in the confines of my waist-high grow room.

Because of the height restrictions the plants were grown under 375W of compact fluoro's (Envirolites & envirolite knock off's). Veg time was 5 weeks and the plants increased in size by 2-3 times during flower. Plants were grown in coco fibre (Envirolite) which contained 40% perlite. The bottom 2 inches of the pots was clay pebbles, and the plants sat in a tray which had a couple of inches of liquid feed in it. When the plants had sucked up the all the liquid the tray dried up and I re-filled it with a couple more litres. Not a high-tec growth method but suits me for a few reasons that I won't bore you with here.

Feeding was with canna nutrients and I also used hydrogen peroxide to ensure the roots were fully oxygenated. No noticeable issues with nute concentrations were seen but then again I stuck to a 'gradual increase' method before feeding at full strength. Every so often I would let the plants feed on plain water to minimise chances of salt build up. The plants were also all fed plain water for the last week of their life and I think it made for a smoother toke.

The widow plants need a lot of pruning, in my opinion, when grown in small areas. Specifically the issue is the leaves which form a bushy canopy making light penetration tricky – especially in my confined grow room. So I do recommend taking leaves off the widows, sorry if other gardeners disagree with me on that but I'm just telling it as it was for me.

Of the three plants one yielded 1.75 ounces, one was 1.5 ounces and one was just ¼ ounce. I think the low yielder just didn't get enough light. The 2 heavy yielders were successfully re-vegged. On re-vegging they didn't smell quite as pungent, and they seemed to take longer to reach maturity on the second harvest.

The plants were very smelly and would need odour control in a bigger grow. Because I grew in such a small space I can't really comment on the plants growth characteristics too well, but fortunately I can talk about 2 different phenotypes that I saw based on the colour of the calyx's. One plant grew the traditional green calyx's and one grew brown/red calyx's. Both are described in detail below.

I cropped at just over 9 weeks and gave the plants 48 hours of darkness before harvest – some say this helps potency.

This plant was a supreme smoke, a creeper stone that peaks about an after you smoke/vapourise it. The effect continues to give a typical total 3 hour stone – which is very good for me :) .and I have smoked daily for 20 years (with a gap of 8 years in the middle when I was straight and at college). Compared to Isis (a haze-related sativa from Dutch Passion), this stone was stabler and steady. There was less of a 'haze' / confusion at the start of the stone than with Isis. But this was a massive stone in it's own right, and really you can't function too well on it. You wander around the house wondering what the hell you were supposed to be doing but struggle to remember. Jeess, better just lay on the sofa and try to watch cable TV, but which damn channel man?

The smoke gave you a total loss of sensation of time. I bet one day they will discover a medical use for that :).

I also got a strong sense of peace, a removal from the anxieties of my usual day. Tingling in the limbs. Smoking this on a weekend spring morning with a good buddy was a great way I started one day in 2004, a euphoric and giggly high. My mate who grows under 1000w HPS reckons the pheno would give him 3-4 ounces a plant – perhaps he will get lucky enough to grow it one day.

This plant was also biggest yielder of my garden. Yielding 2-3 times the yield of blueberrys grown in the same grow and under the same conditions. One and three quarter ounces of prime bud came from a single 3 foot high plant that was grown in overcrowded conditions under 375 watts of envirolites – but man, what a beauty.

The stone last longer with joints than with vaporizing – but I think that means that higher vaporizing temperatures are needed. Branches grew all over this plant and the buds were growing all over the branches – it was really unusual to see such prolific growth. I knew when I decided to re-veg this that I had a special plant The grey haired smokers that don't like the trippy edge to their smokes may want to moderate the volumes they smoke as a little goes a long way.

Anyone foolish to even consider driving after toking this stuff would be a danger to themselves and anyone else on the road so never drive un- der the influence of this stuff. My mate, a 20 year toker veteran like myself, rates this as one of his favorite smokes, better even than Blueberry Æâ,¬â€œ a strain that many rate as one of the best ever.

Make no mistake, this is a top-drawer smoke of the highest order. Easy to grow with no noticeable issues at all other than a strong odor that requires active management in the flowering stages. I say it one more time Æâ,¬â€œ this is truly magnificent, one of my best smokes ever. Just don't hope to get much done under the influence.

Any young people or students out there?, then lay off this stuff until your studies are over, I had to lay off regular weed to get thru college, there is no way I could have made it thru college on this stuff. I don't mean to offend any young people out there but I'm just an old git telling you my views and experience Æâ,¬â€œ no offence intended at all. Get your studies done then get stoned, not the other way around.

Honest to God this is powerful, don't use this stuff if you have an active life. Ideal for pain management or those lucky enough to be cruising thru life. In my experience this is a true killer strain that you will enjoy unless you have had poor grow conditions/lighting.

I give it a 9/10. A very rare score for me, awarded only for truly devastating smokes.

The herb leaves you with a tired out feeling after toking it, so either plan a siesta 4 hours after a smoke, or smoke in the evening for best effect.

Ladies and Gentlemen, I grew these plants in a small growroom so this can't be considered a complete study since so much was sub-optimized. They were grown under 3x 125 watts of compact fluorescent rather than HPS, and the grow height was restricted to about 3 feet (1 metre). I can only define the phenotypes as red-calyx'd and green calyx'd. The yield was great from both phenotypes. I was really pleased with this strain and would say this was money well spent on great genetics that gave good yield and strength, and took all I could throw at them in terms of poor grow conditions. Congrats to Dutch Passion. In summary: Highly recommended to all. This is a killer strain and all growers ought to try this one. One more time, don't smoke too much in one go or you will be wiped by this stuff.

Grower Report

February, 003

-A 10 pack of Dutch Passion Feminised White Widow was started by me in 2003, 8/10 seeds popped within 24 hours. The 2 seeds that didn't pop lacked dark striping.

-Seeds were placed in 1" rockwool cubes, and given extremely dilute flowering fertilizer to promote rooting.

-When seedlings showed true leaves, as well as roots escaping the cubes, they were placed in 5 gallon continuous drip buckets filled with hydroton clay balls. Nutrient strength began at 600 ppm.

-All plants were nearly identical in growth characteristics, Dutch Passion has reduced variability in this strain to roughly nil. Very fast, and vigorous vegetative growth was observed. Very light green, profuse shoots, strong stem growth. Cloning speed is average, 5-10 days in rockwool, slightly longer in jiffy cubes. Stems are very sticky and extremely stinky when rubbed in veg.

-As the plants matured, nutrient strength was gradually raised to 12-1600 ppm, This plant can take stronger ppm during veg. It also has a fairly wide ph range in both hydro and soil, 5.8-7, will produce strong growth throughout.

-White Widow is sensitive to excess sodium+chlorides in tap water, if at all possible, use RO water. White Widow also needs extra calcium throughout the growth cycle. If using DNF nutrients, magnesium will also have to be added, as this formula doesn't contain enough for this variety. If you are positive you are supplying everything to your White Widows, and they still are showing light signs of deficiency of some sort, look to these problems to solve it.

-Several crops have been grown from these mothers since, eventually I settled on one mother, who was less susceptible to the nutrient problems described above. The pictures are all from my most recent crop harvested jan 7, 2005. Potency has roughly increased by about a third from the first crop, when the plant was 3 months old, to now at 2 years. This is by far the most potent, stinkiest crop yet, with the most dense trichrome production I have ever seen, I use a 60-100x microscope to examine the buds. I attribute some of this to using advanced new micro-organism products.

-White widow stretches to 2.5 times her veg size in flower, responds very well to 'super croppin' techniques/stem massage, increases flower size and weight markedly. There is not much difference in dry weight between topped and untopped. Topped plants produce 4 equal sized colas, versus one slightly larger cola and many smaller buds on untopped. These plants are not heavy yielders, first crop colas averaged 5-7gm, most current crop colas averaged 8-11gm. Expect probably slightly less than 1lb per light if you are inexperienced, or more experienced but your first time with finicky plants. I have most recently just harvested 1.5 Lbs per 1000 watt light, and I feel, after 2 years, I have pushed them to near their heaviest. (3gal growbags, 9/light) Expect 2 ozs or so out of a 3 gal bag.

-This plant also works well outdoors, further south than the 50th parallel or so. Will produce excellent looking outdoor nugs, when in the right spot, needs at least 6 hrs of sun a day to produce the densest (weight+trichromes) buds.

-White widow does not like heavy nutrient strength during flower at any time. Expect slower growth, less flavour, less resistance to stress if you choose to push their ppm. Keep flowering nutes to 1-1300 ppm in soil or hydro. She produces profuse trichomes very early, and will show sex within a week of 12/12. She will also turn yellow very quickly and drop most if not all leaves by the end of flower, do not be alarmed! The same plant can take anywhere from 8-10 weeks, depending on its conditions during growth. Leave it longer to achieve its maximum flavour and trichrome production (9-11 weeks).

-This bud produces buds of an excellent light green hue, this effect can be hastened by reducing nitrogen to a 1/3 of normal during last 2 weeks, also requires extra calcium last 2 weeks. Lots of spiky hairs, the bud structure is long, dense buds (not like an indica dense) visible stalked trichomes to the naked eye, will glitter like diamonds in the sun.

-A purely synthetic nutrient regimen will not produce the intense, multi-layered flavour that this strain can produce, you can also forget about maximum crystal. If pure synthetic is your preferred style, you would be wise to add a seaweed derived product to your mix in all your grows to achieve higher levels of kindness. With a proper regimen, crystallization and flavour is unbelievable, with many subtle levels to both the odour and high. Incredible quality hash can be made from the trim, i've beat out pure bud hash with my trim hash in several instances!

-Odour control is required if you don't want to be busted promptly, this plant has an extremely original scent and it is very powerful. Seems to leak from sealed mason jars!

-This smoke is of the highest grade pure and simple. It is not for beginners to grow by any means, its also not for beginners to smoke! The bud is extremely desirable, and will make any who smoke literally salivate. Cures to an exceptional golden green hue. After the first hit or two, you will feel pressure immediately behind your eyes, its a strange sensation but just realise you will be extremely baked soon! You may not get much farther either, I find myself putting out many joints 1/4 to 1/2 done before I even know what I'm doing. This will blast even the most jaded smokers, at first anyways. Due to the extremely high THC content, you will build a tolerance pretty quickly. Sometimes in a day or two of smoking. Don't worry! Give it a rest of a day or two as well and you will be back to blasted. When this bud hits the streets, it acquires many names due to its extreme effects. Think 'Crack weed' and 'Golden Jesus Weed'. Also expect many compliments of this is the best shit ever, or this is the best shit of the year, when well grown that is. Even if not well grown this will outshine most other bud.

Many people have downplayed white widow over the years because of its hype. Don't be fooled! These are absolutely exceptional genetics, Greenhouse may be the originators, but Dutch Passion has reduced variability and increased vigour, you will not be disappointed, but your pocket might hurt after purchasing the seeds!! If you are looking for something to cross into your home strain, or have a good yielder that lacks punch and flavour, white widow will not disappoint on the breeding front either. Its major THC content seems to be dominant when used as a mother, and will frost up near any strain.

I was eager to try the legend of the White Widow. This was only my fifth indoor grow, so I planted 3 along with an unknown sativa bagseed. All three popped quickly and really took off. Ended up with two females. During veg, the WW handled all the nutes I threw at it (Dyna Gro), but during flower, she was a little picky. First I burned her, then she locked out for a couple of weeks, then I got a new light right in the middle of flower and went from a 400w MH to a 1000w HPS. I took the girls at 2 days shy of eight weeks with triches milky to just turning as I was going on vacation and can say that next time I will go longer. She stretched a little more than I like, but the yield was good, and the smoke excellent. Big solid buds that cured nicely. Will definately keep these beans on hand.

Well, I've had this strain for almost 3 years. I've only grown it bout 3 runs. When I first bought the seeds from Emery, he sent me 16 seeds. Out of the 16, 13 popped. From the 13 I had 8 fems. Out of the 8 fems I got 4 Dutch Treat phenos, two 50/50 mix phenos, and 2 Purple Skunk phenos, one of wich autoflowered. As for the keepers I kept the one good Purple Skunk pheno, and the good 50/50. I found the PS pheno to be the most potent (very trippy buzz, and hashy-grapefruit flavor. No purple color in this one, just in the hairs). Too bad I killed it last year due to paranoia!...

The 50/50 I kept had lush fat leaves, grew very easy and produced the purple buds I was looking for! This pheno was the one that had the skunky-hashy-berry taste and smell. I vegged the plants till they where 18" then flowered. These plants took off into flowering and easily doubled in size. This plant is great for SCROG, or bush growing... It goes huge!...

Sorry I don't have any pics of flowering.

Growth report:

Quite easy to grow for a sativa. Be attentive to overwatering. This one likes dry soil like many sativas. It seems to like moderate fertilization. I had to prun the plants at three internodes. Not all plants develloped 6 branchs, some develloped only 4. The strain is quite vigourous but be attentive in the middle of the vegetative cycle: the stems tend to be a little weak. When flowering time arrives (after just more than one month in my case), they have a little boost in their growth. But after two weeks of flowering time, the main growth stops and I think that time is quite short compared with other sativas that continue to grow for weeks... The buds appears after two or three weeks of flowering. They will have an continuous grow until harvest. Resin production begins also rapidly. Some plants tend to be better resin producer than others. At the end (near to eight weeks for me, but I produced seeds), you have buds that are very resinous and that present a good size for a sativa. The drying process doesn't present any problems, but be careful with the odor which can be strong.

Smoking report:

I distinguish two parts in the high.

The first part is a electric high with a cardiac acceleration. You have a lot of ideas that disappear as quickly as they appeared. During the first 20 minutes, I would describe the high as a linear regression with a strong positive coefficient.

The second part is more quite, with a "planant" effect. While your brain seems ok, you know that you're completely stone. A strange impres- sion that I already had with Malawi gold, but in a weakier way.

The high is very longlasting, peaceful and after 2 hours 1/2, the celestial lets you return to a normal life as if nothing happened.

Compared with the Ethiopian Highland, it's a less trippy high, less aggressive but more quite, more longlasting and more relaxing.

Compared with the Jamaica from hemcy, it's a more "up high" and more consistent, without breaks. It's also more consistent than Skunk n"o 1 high.

To conclude, it's clearly a pure sativa high. No evidence of indica part in this stuff.

Conclusion:

I consider this strain as a "must have". Relatively short vegetative cycle, short flowering time for a sativa with a pure sativa high. A sativa lover will find his money with this strain. I'm waiting for the F2 to make my opinion about the genetic stability.

Grower Report

February, 2005

Grow report:

This strain grow in a regular and moderate way. You have to be careful to overfertilizing. The odor is like citrus in both vegetative and flowering parts. The stretching is not that bad for a pure sativa. At the end, you can expect a size of about twice the size at the beginning of flowering. The ratio calyx/leaf is good, and the buds are quite compact for a sativa. There is a lot of fine cristal on the calyxes, very dens at the end. You should do at least 2 months of vegetative in order to expect a reasonable yield.

Smoke report:

you have to cure the buds for a long time before they release their full potential. When it is done, you can expect some stuff that is able to blow your mind in few puffs. The odor and taste of this hawaiaan are very distinctive. Before smoke, the odor is fine. But when smoking, it has a strong smell and a strong incense taste. The high is very energetic and makes you laugh, at least at the beginning. Because if you jave too much smoked, the hawaiaan will ask you a lot of energy to keep all under control but it's not paranoic thus, rather tiring. When properly smoked (i.e. not too much), the high is very pleasant, makes you move and well adapted to reggae music or other activities.

My grow partner (Matty Bong) and I (That Guy) purchased a pack of ten seeds from a local head shop/porn shop and started them indoors on May 3rd, 2004.

Out of the ten seeds, nine germinated. Each was planted in some high quality tropical soil in some small 4-5 inch square plastic pots and put under a 125 Watt arc tube light (produces about 12,000 Lumens) in a closet.

Each day the pots were rotated, to allow each plant a fair share of light, and were watered as much as three times a week. After they had been established they were fed standard seedling fertilizer (4-12-4) mixed with about 10-15 ml's of Hydrogen Peroxide (3%) per litre. In less than three weeks they were already on their seventh internode and strong enough to be transplanted outdoors.

The spot we chose was on the top of some bluffs, with little to no soil, and the soil that was there was far too acidic to try and grow in. We ended up using four-gallon pots for our plants, loaded with the same high quality tropical soil as before, and a layer of hydro-clay rocks on the top about 3-4 inches deep. They were then given a dose of transplant nutrients, and fed every 2-3 weeks with standard vegging nutrients (12-12-12) and the H2O mixture described above.

A few plants died over the summer because of the extreme heat (a few record highs were set here more than once and caught us off guard) and we had three males which were moved to a separate location to continue growing, but out of the nine we had planted, three females were still growing strong.

We had bought and smoked some I.S.S. previously and fell in love with it, so our main goal this season was seed production, that's why we kept the males.

When flowering began we started feeding with standard flowering nutrients (15-30-15). Around mid flowering we collected the pollen from the males, chopped them down, pollinated our females, and made some decent oil (males have THC too!). We continued to feed the fems until about three weeks before harvest was to arrive (nobody wants to smoke chemicals). They were finished flowering and harvested Oct 15th.

This strain flowers quite early, and produces some very enticing, sweet buds that'll make anyone drool. Nice yield with a very high potency (20% and up). This strain is obviously being grown again next year and I recommend you pick up a batch yourself. It'll make quite the addition to your collection.

*Note; When I say standard nutrients, I mean general nutrients that you can pick up at any nursery or garden center, as opposed to those brand name ones you can find in Hydroponics stores for $100+ per bag/bucket.

Marc Emery sent me ten of these seeds, out of those I have popped three, and got one good female. I have nothing bad to say about this highly wanted sativa plant except, the smell when growing is strong!!! So keep the fresh carbon filters at hand.

I did not vegg very long as it does grow tall, around 2-3 weeks. I have tried pruning the top and it worked great if you like it bushy, however this is great for sog cause it grows one Central bud, so you could pack tons in a small space. I must stress that you grow with Ph balanced water, anything else is junk and you will see spots.

When flowering it shoots to the bulb, so watch that, do not vegg clones long, infact you can flower them as soon as they harden off. Like I said this stuff stinks when flowering, it has tons of resin and long white hairs that cure to a nice light orange, I would advise you to get this stuff, it is truely one of a KIND! Another thing that deserves mention is the price, these are some of the finest plants I have come across and cheap. When we smoke this stuff it makes the face sweat and it is strong, so get some soon, and thank you for peeping my Selection!

There were several with sativa characteristics and the others were very very tight and bushy. Lots of spots for flowers. My plants were also all showing signs of sex within a month and a half in the veg stage this made sorting a breeze.

In flowering these things just took off and they seemed to like the nutes. I was using all organics. I ended up taking them down some at 44 and the others at 52 days. During flower the room smelled very nice this strain does have a reputation for being a bit smelly and that it was.

I was very very happy with this strain and all of my friends have been very very appreciative of this smoke and I have only heard good things about this Mikado. The stuff looks great, smells really fruity and I will grow it again.

The breeders report above is very accurate for this strain. I agree with pretty much everything there. It does have a strong, hashy taste with a nice heavy stone. It's very dark green. Extremely dense and bushy - almost bonsai like. Yap Āçâ, -â€œ all true.

It took a really long time to flower - you'd probably want to let it go even longer than 65 days... I went 70 and could have gone more for sure. And that was in bubblers which are supposed to decrease flowering time.

They seem to clone pretty easy - 100% success rate after about 40 cuttings.

SMELL:

As far as odor goes - these girlies stink! I was venting into the attic of the building, using an ozone generator inline with the exhaust (and plenty of mixing baffles in the attic). There were many mornings from week 5 onwards where I could smell STINKY STINKY dank at the end of my driveway, laced with a hint of ozone. It was bad. At the time I hadn't yet heard of the cheap home-made carbon filters... Next time.

It had great bag appeal due to it's stinky stinky odor. Smoking it was not as awe inspiring, but still intense none-the-less. Danks says: 9 out of 10 for odor (with 10 being the stinkiest).

TASTE:

I had a couple different phenotypes in this batch. I got the seeds from Emery in mid 2002. As you can see at the end of the grow, I was down to two plants due to space restrictions.

There was a taller, lankier plant which had smaller greener buds. And there was a shorter bushier plant with heavier buds that had a purple tinge to them. Both tasted great, but the purple buds had a slight hint o berry once in a while which I really loved. It's pretty smooth smoke, not too harsh if cured properly.

Danks says: 7 out of 10 for taste.

YIELD:

I ended up getting nearly a pound of really good smoke off these two girls, along with about a half pound of decent stinky schwag.

Danks says: 7 out of 10 for yield.

APPEARANCE:

Bushy, dense, dark dark green, shiny, healthy leaves. Like I said above, one plant had some purply buds. Could have been attributed to my cold temperatures since it was pretty cool in there in the dark periods (it was freakin cold - 10C or 55F some days)

Trichome production was really nice. My digicam sux, but in real life they were sugar coated - trust me. Very nice. I've seen better, but it's right up there with the best of em.

Danks says: 7 out of 10 for trichome production.

8 out of 10 for overall appearance.

This is a strain that can be grown with 12/12 lighting from beginning to end. In fact, it's highly recommended if you want plants to finish less than 2.5 feet. if you veg them for more than 2 weeks you may regret it unless you have 600w or higher. Plants will not start flowering until they are a month old. If you do 18/6 or 24/0 for veg, you will get really tall indoor plants. 3-4 feet easy. 12/12 is recommended for stealth/low profile grows.

IMPORTANT:

REQUIRES some nitrogen at the beginning of flower. Bud mass forms up REALLY fast so the plants need N and exercise until plants show bud mass. Otherwise you might get really droopy branches. Susceptable to mildew (c99 trait) so spray them with 10% milk, 90% water once during first few weeks as a preventative measure. Repeat if mildew appears. Milk combats it well and the plant likes the milk.

This strain is very very tasty. A favorite.

You may get an occasional short plant that smells skunky. This happens about 1 of every 4 plants. These plants are a pheno on to themselves. ;) I don't clone but if I did, I would pick the biggest plant and the smallest plant to clone. 2 phenos from one strain!

Grapefruit is an amazing flavored strain that also happens to kick your ass. One of the most potent I have ever smoked much less grow. In fact mmmmmm very tasty. Just like the name. Flavor gets better and better with cure too. Still a nice smoke only two weeks after cutting. It's c99 roots will have you salivating and the increased yeilds will make you extra happy. This strain should replace c99! This strain is for anyone from new growers to commercial growers.

Sprouted one feminized seed (from a four pack) to toss in with other strains in closet space...was a female. I topped her hearing she'd stetched a bit...no training and veg'd for ~ 3 weeks. Max height was just over 3 ft. yielded 44 grams (again, no training). She would put out more if the was just pointed in the right direction. I had read that this strain really took the nutes and she does. Aggressive feeding was the approach... though ph run off was very steady and I rinsed the soil down once a month. I would think even fore new growers this would be a decent buy... the female reports and content smokers backing this strain are always high and I've heard little to no bad reports. The buds were rock hard nearing harvest but I was'nt ready for hard they'd dry out to be...very dense buds.

Smell during flower strongly resembles fresh grapefruit but is not on the dastic side to contain though odor control is recommended.

Chopped at 9 weeks...trichs - mostly cloudy with very few amber. Whole plant hung to dry with 65-68F temps and 45-50% humidity...after nearly a week buds were snipped from plant and placed in paper bags. Once they were dry, dry..off to the jars.

2 week cure offered a suprisingly soft smoke with light hints of fruit. After a month the citrus taste was stronger with nice aftertaste. This only continues with time but I did'nt make it much past that. ;)

I'm currently flowering a GF that was only veg'd for under 2 weeks and want to see what a SOG grow started from seed would offer...

For a mostly sativa strain I still think new growers would enjoy this plant. She can handle a bit of strong feeding which is a common mistake early on.

And if you look around the most experienced growers show this strain a lot of love. I'm looking forward to more strains from Female Seeds... probably Cinnamon from them sometime in the future.

I love this strain. I had no problems with this grow. I had 2 phenos out of 4 seeds. They all pretty much had the grapefruit smell, except for one that was pretty skunky. This was the first sativa I have grown, and will grow again.

The buzz from this strain is top notch. It is a warm fuzzy head high that is great for going on walks in the woods, and listening to music. Very motivational, I want to get up and do things when smoking.

This is the best weed I have tried, and I have smoked a lot of great weed in my time. Everyone that I shared with was blown away by the high and potency.

I got two phenos out of four popped. One was a fat-leaved squat indica. This was the best one. The other is a more sativish but still pronounced indica phenoe. About 65% indica/35% sativa. The high on this one was nothing spectacular. The indica pheno has a VERY nice high that sits right between the eyes for a minute then gives a smooth body stone. Not couchlocky (unless smoked very hard), but very very old-school mellow. If you want to get your freak on, smoke a little bit of this.

Both grew very easily, and are a great grow for a beginner. I grew these in 100% coco coir using Canna Coco nutes as I usually do. Hand watered as needed. They vegged under a 400W MH aircooled lamp for around 50 days I believe. Maybe a little longer but not much more. I put them through a rigorous amount of LST and they took it well. At flower they got a 360W HPS and 250W HPS for around 40 days when I blew out the conversion bulb and fried the 250W HPS. From that point on they finished out under the 400W MH. As additives they got Calmag, Liquid Karma, and Supernatural Bud Blaster, which they took well also. Never saw any signs of nute burn, though admittedly I took it easy on them since they were a test grow. Thanx F!

I've got 3 clones that were taken at 21 days flower going of the indica pheno in a SCROG. They cloned easily in a much shorter time than normal since I only take clones well into flower. The clones are exhibiting some great branching and should continue this along just as easily as the first time. This will be in my garden for as long as possible.

BTW YES, THEY WERE ALL FEMALE WITH NO HERMIES!!!!

This was my first definite knowledge of that strain grow. Last couple grows of mine where bag seed and didnt turn out. This plant was put threw hell (well a little part) and still survived. After germinating I got 2 seeds to pop out of two. And once planted they sprouted the next day. It was an amazing growth rate. Very bright green almost lime green tint in the fan leaves. I vegged it for a month under 135 watts of Compact flouros lights. Growth rate was amazing almost a cm of new growth a day, and it was on 18/6 for the time. I put too much worm castings in the mix when I transplanted them and plant number two couldnt deal with it, and perished.

After I flushed the soil a couples times. And after a couple days of drying plant number 1 was on a non stop growth rate. I transplanted it into a 3 gallon container. Wow she sure took up all the root space in that. After it matured in Veg. The leaves were a very dark dark green. The plant was short and incredibly bushy. I topped it as well forgot to mention that.

Flowering : this was an amazing time for me. The pistils that emerged about 8 days into flowering blew my mind. Big straight up pistils. The plant size doubled in half the time in veg. The buds were packing on their weight well into the 3rd week of flowering. They were nice and fat resinous buds. The trichrome production was amazing as well. It was sugared! The buds smelled like mangos up close and when the lights were off, it was straight coffee smell.

Buds finished in 6 weeks fat resinous buds, very dense as well. Covered in trichromes and hairs. Very up high, very uplifting is the word. And day time smoker high. Lasted for hours.

I got aprox a ounce and a half. smoked it all before any real pics. My big fault!

The smoke was very fresh and piney, tasted like a pine forest. Not gin but pine!. Very flavorfull. Didnt cure any, just did a normal dry for a week/untill the stem snapped.

This was my first grow so i expected it to be kinda poor....To be fair it couldn't have worked out much better. The yield was good at around 10/12 ounces for 2 plants. They were grew in a small 2' sq by around 6' tall. I vegged for 35 days and flowered for 60 *including 10 days water flush* i think i could have went another 10 days as the trics were about 50% milky 50% clear but i harvested it in 2 stages so will let the rest go amber and see if theirs much difference.

I grew White Widow(1 plant)among with 5 other plants under a 430w SON agro bulb. It was definetely the easiest one and a very beautifull fat dark leaf indica, short and bushy. Heavy trichrome production and a pretty good yield.

I planted the seeds directly into the soil. White Widow was the last, showed up after 4-5 days. I vegged the plants for 3 weeks, feeding small doses of biogrow, none have suffered a deficiency and especially White Widow was the healthiest looking plant at the garden (look at the pictures, it's the fat one at the middle). It was 30 cm when putted at 12/12 and ended up 60-70 cm. During flowering i fed only with biobloom, and she kept her nice dark green color until the 9th week when i chopped her.

The odor was strong. I think that her smell(sometimes really stinks)was dominant in the grow room.

The ended product dried was 40g which i think is pretty good for a plant vegged only for 21 days. Nice looking, very crystalized and potend as it seems.The effect is a really relaxing one, but not couchlock. A nice high with no paranoia or anxiety. The taste is soft but not something special.

A strain that it is perfect for new growers , other friends who tried this were very happy and we could notice a uniformity between our plants.

All the plants in the garden were from Female Seeds and all were 100% female.

I germinated in a damp paper towel and in an open zip-loc bag. I planted 3 Dutchmen's royal orange and 1 B52. Most opened up with 48 hours. I only got one female which happened to be the Dutchmen's royal orange. They all had very uniform growth with one phenotype only which indicates to me that these are high quality seeds. I vegged these under a 250 watt hps light for a little less than a month before I switched them to 12/12

Because this strain takes a little longer to mature, initial bud growth was pretty slow, but around the 40th day, these babies really began to fill in with thick crystals and many calyxes that just oozed out resin. This strain looks pretty tight when they are growing even the fan leaves get covered with crystals.

The smoke was also awesome with a lot of heady high but also that indica mix of the body high. This will set u gazing for a good while before you need to smoke another bowl of this. After dried it smells really sweet with dense nugs that are covered with trichome. The hairs on this plant turn from white to a sort of neon orange it's pretty tight.

I have finished up a grow of 22 TFD Skunk #1 X Original Haze seed plants, picked my most vigourus at 50 days veg and popped them into Hydro bubbler buckets. The others went outside and got eaten by deer. I ended up with 3 huge females and a couple males that I later dismissed.

The potency of these 3 femmes were all very uniform, very uplifting high grade nederweit. I had a hard time choosing a favorite, what they produced varied by a large margin; typical of seedplants, esp. haze dominant.

*** Seedplant/Motherplant Yield *****

Pheno #1 - 'Big Fuma' Con Diablo (topped at 3.5 feet): Yield 80 gr.

Pheno #2 - 'Resin Monster' Hazey, Spindle bud Pheno): Yield 20 gr.

Pheno #3 - This fem couldn't seem to produce, but it was just as strong and better smelling than them all: Yield: 10 gr.

*** Seedplant/Motherplant Yield *****

(For Future Use)

"Big Fuma" Bubbler Clone - Canna Aqua Flores 5ml-10 + 15ml Liquid Karma + 30ml GH Fulvic Acid + 2ml SM-90 + 5ml GH Floralicious

"Resin Monster" Soil Clones; These do not like lots of ferters by the looks of it, so I am using just water for a couple weeks, they seem to be the most finicky of the bunch for nutes.

Each plant looked as if it was a different phenotype within the haze sector and all but the 'Resin Monster' showed signs of compact, spear-shaped Indica flowers... the bud shape (swivels!) and pod (stomata?) size on the "Resin Monster" phenotype as I have named it, are bigger and the most visually resinous of the 3; I would say this is as hazy I'm gonna get in this batch, my most Sativa. Everyone loves sticky buds, this plant gets 50% more points for cosmetics; pleasure of having in my presence the yield wasn't nearly as good as Pheno 2, Big Fuma!

The Big Fuma is the best producer and most vigorous of the bunch. It outgrows everything in my garden to date. The buds are skunkier looking, tighter, spear-shaped and not so resinous. The smell of this gear is very unique, full of a sweet aroma, when you leave the room and come back to it, the smell is pleasing to welcoming to you; not skunky at all!

I fed these guys with 5ml Canna Aqua @ Gallon and worked my way up to 10ml. With some burning starting to set in, I feel Canna's stuff is strong and 5ml should be enough during the whole process. I am doing a small test with the Big Fuma clone this month at which I am mixing, 10ml Canna Aqua Flores/Gallon.

The smell of all these plants was minimal, my DP Skywalker is the stinkiest.

I am just starting to use Liquid Karma on the clones to see what the result will be, so far in veg they are bigger and healthier looking.

The high is defiantly electric. This is a real treat and will run you about 90 days wait. It lasts a long time and keeps you up those late nights!

I have had a few good reports from friends tasting the Haze x Skunk, Mr. b says: "it's good energy weed..." & Mr. j says: "I loved my bike ride home".

It's probably the best stuff I have grown to date (4th year) so I'm going to finish a round of select clones and go from there. These plants grow very fast and uniform. I made several posts on OG, stating I was very impressed with the vigor and metabolism of these genetics.

Thank you Doc Chronic, Genefinder and Sam Skunkman for supplying this strain to me.

Veg Stage:

They germed 5/5. The male and female ratio were 2/5. They spent 7 weeks in veg. Also they grew nice in veg with average vigour. I had a sativa/indica pheno and an indica. The sativa/indica was grown indoors. Grew a little slower than other plants that were in at the same time.

Bloom Stage:

The mix of sativa/indica kept the plant shorter, but it took very long in bud (being a lover of indica my judgement may be biased toward indica traits). The long wait in bud (78 days) was not what I was expecting. It yielded above average, 3-4 ounces (no CO2) for a 3-4 foot plant on the indica/sativa pheno. The other pheno was grown outside so the yield varied. Side branches did not get big (they stayed very small in comparison to other strains I was growing). Seems mold resistant, but grows a little airy compared to the other strain I am growing.

Final Assessment:

Very pineapple/piney smell. Smells, but not overly pungent. Kinda of a perfumy smell somewhat fragrant. A little airy but still good form of nugs. Great crystalization gives the bud somewhat of a gold tint with pinkish orange hairs. The taste is also fruity and piney. A very smooth smoke. I enjoy the taste very much. Unique and soothing. Nice head inducing sativa high. This was a great up high. Clear to the head. Lasted a while too. Overall a good strain that would be much better with a great hybrid. Very impressed with my first TFD grow. Much respect to their company.

I started 3 seeds and got 2 females and 1 male, all 3 seeds germed within 12 hours of being in the damp paper towels.

The pog grew fairly vigorously, and was tolerant of ferts. I grew it in a DWC setup under 1000w lights. It was vegged to about 18 inches and topped several times. The buds were nice and tight and fairly easy to manicure, and one of the best things about them is even the small buds that got very little light were nice little golf balls. Absolutely no scraggly little scruffle bud, and the resin on this plant is amazing, just tons of sticky resin. I will definitely be growing the rest of those seeds to see if perhaps this strain has a mother even better than the one I have selected. The yield was around 4 oz per plant on plants that finished around 3 ft. and were very bushy. I do think I will try this strain untopped next time as I have a feeling it will do better as a natural growth pattern plant.

I started with 4 seeds, all cracked within 48 hours, fast germ rate, the seedlings grew pretty fast too.

In veg I had no problems at all with feeding and training, quite bendy/flexible stems, because of my low grow height I topped them twice at the third node, so they had 4 main stems and another 4 main branches from the 1st and 2nd nodes, a couple of branches i got rid of later so 1 had 8 stems, the other 3 had 6-7.

These plants can take a lot of feed, it just sucks it all up, i fed at full strength through most of veg, and they showed no signs of burn what so ever.

Once i triggered them they showed sex pretty quickly, in around 7 days, 1 turned out to be male, 3 were female.

At first they all looked the same, but there were variations showing later on in flower, 1 was quite tall with the nodes consistently in line with each other all the way up each stem instead of being staggered like the other 2, they were shorter but with a lot more bud and pistils on them.

One of the plants smelled sweet, the other very skunky, and the third was both, and also oozing with trichs, a lot more than the other 2, and this is the one which I'm sure The Flying Dutchman intended to be THE P.O.G, so there are slight pheno's in this strain.

When in flower I continued to feed full strength nutes after a week flush from veg, and they handled it well, only showing a slight bit of burn at around day 25, then at day 36 I flushed for a week before adding the PK 13-14 booster at day 44 and flushing the rest of the way.

These plants don't stretch much apart from the 2nd pheno, they stay quite short, but I put aveage size on the description because of the pheno, but they do stink quite a bit, it's not bad until around 40 days then they start to catch your nose a bit when you walk in the room.

all 3 got chopped together at 68 days, and they could have gone longer too, but I wanted some bud for Xmas, so i hacked them, hung them up for 12 days, then chopped off all the bud and cured for a further 10 days and they were just right.

The high wasn't what I was expecting, it is strong, but not in an overpowering way.

At first you get a body buzz, nice all round, pleasant, not so much as a couchlock stone, it's quite mellow and spacey, but strong if you get me, lasts for a couple of hours, then you snap out of a daydream, good for social occasions aswell I found, quite happy weed, with this stuff, I found that some people liked to interact after smoking, and some just wanted to sit in a corner and drift away.

POG has been a strain that I have wanted to try for quite some time. I started out with 11 seeds, had a bad germ rate and only 7 made it. Five were male and 2 were female.

Both plants did well in veg with one being a little more branchy than the other but both still looking pretty similar in appearance. They both grew well with no problems at all, once transplanted at 12' they really took off in their new pots.

I vegged until they were about 24' tall and then flipped them to 12/12. For the first couple of weeks they exploded in outward and upward growth and just about doubled in size.

Pheno A: Once flowering started it was evident this was going to be the faster flowering pheno, it had flowers starting to grow lots of white hairs at about two weeks. After it really started flowering I was really impressed with the general structure of the plant it was very branchy with a couple of branches rivaling the main cola for size and height. Resin started after 2 1/2 weeks and fully coated the buds. The smell of the flowers was a skunky sweet and improved in complexity late in flowering. The buds were super solid and didn't shrink a bit once dried. It flowered for 8 weeks and I yielded 5oz off of this plant.

Pheno B: This pheno took a little longer to start flowering and seemed to be about a week or so behind pheno A. Once flowering started the plant stayed very sturdy and didn't need any support at all. The flowers had a ton of white hairs with resin that was much sweeter than the other pheno. It's smell was more of sweet mint bubblegum is the only way to describe it. Really quite a unique and enjoyable smell. This pheno was longer flowering and went 10 weeks. I harvested 4 1/2 oz.

Smoke: Pheno A: Was the skunky sweet pheno, on a potency scale I would give it a 6 1/2, not the most potent ever but had a nice kick that wasn't too couchy. Mild but there taste, that was sweet but not pungent. Pheno B: The sweet mint bubblegum smell really stuck once it was dried, and came through as a pungent smell and more intense taste that was more complex than pheno A. Its effect was also superior to A, on a potency scale I would give it a solid 7. The effect was couchy but still workable, not a sleeper.

Both plants met the description of TFD to a T, and were totally worth every bit of effort to grow them. One of the best strains I have grown.

May, 2004

I found Thai-tanic to be a pleasant strain to grow.

The plants were all very consistent in appearance and fairly compact. The leaves were dark green and indica-like during veg, with defined ridging and edges. The bud leaves were more sativa-like. The branches were long, straight, strong and laden with dense, sticky buds.

The plants yielded well for the conditions, averaging 4 oz each. I thought that good considering that I had some overcrowding going on during much of their flowering period.

The buds were chunky, with a good leaf to bud ratio and good resin production.

I vegged the plants until they were 20-24 inches and limited them to 3 gal pots. They were left un-topped and finished between 3 and 4 feet.

Out of 6 seeds started, all sprouted and three were females.

Unbeknownst to me one of the girls decided to take a walk on the wild side later in flower and got herself pretty well seeded, although she didn't mess with the rest of the room. Apparently this is not an unknown characteristic with this strain so keep a vigilant eye out, even later on in flower.

I like the Thai-tanic stone. I find the high to be cerebral and uplifting, without the tightness of chest and anxiety I get from some other sativa-heavy crosses.

My girlfriend notes an additional effect on my libido & associated equipment. "They should have called it Thai-agra" she says, wagging her eyebrows.

The taste is very different from the skunky/fruity buds I typically grow/smoke. It's very spicy and earthy, with woody undertones.

I look forward to growing it again in the future.

I lost most of my grow data when my old PC died but here my Strain Guide grow report for Thaitanic from The Flying Dutchmen.

I germinated 5 seeds by giving them a 24hr soak then planting into a sowing compost mix. All sprouted in a few days and looked healthy. At the 3-4 week mark they had skunky phenos, wider leaves, short node space. I started feeding around week 3-4 using Bio-bizz Grow & Algamic (seaweed).

I put them into 12/12hr around 4-5 weeks, along with 5 indicas that were just cola on a stem and staked down (Indicas are the sweeping curved stems seen in the Thai & Indicas pic.)

The Thaitanics soon started stretching out and showing sex around 10days. 3 fem. and 2 males. Males were removed.

I staked and tied down the lanky branches on the girls but didn't top them.

Over the first 6 weeks they flowered but didn't gain much bud size but the plants gained in size overall and were very thirsty for Nitrogen with yellow leaves starting at the bottom of the plants. Of the three phenotypes, pheno's 1 & 3 were particularly N thirsty during flowering. I used Bio-bloom, algamic, Topmax as well as Bio-grow during bloom with nearly every watering except for the last week or so...

And LiquidGoldFulvic (DryFlowerProducts) at 1ml/Litre water 4 times over 11 weeks.. Not strictly organic, made from pine trees.

All the plants were chopped within 9 days of each other, around 11 weeks 12/12. Pheno 2 was first then pheno 1 and then pheno 3. I should have let all of them bloom a bit longer really but I had other plants that desperately needed the space.

1st pheno was sativa looking with quite bulky big airy buds, smells fruity & woody/pine with slight aniseed. Not really spicy. Quite a strong up buzz, slightly anxious feeling at times though not over-powering. Covered in orange/red hairs

2nd pheno also was quite sativa looking but quite bulky, skunky buds, smells very fruity, a bit bubblegum like. Skunky up type high, strong fruity taste.

3rd phenotype is similar to the first but took longer to mature in bloom. Hairs have more of a copper tinge on this one. Not as fruity smelling but a subtle aniseed with a touch of chocolate. This one has a more up, racy buzz, and speedy but not a heavy paranoia type, slight anxiety if smoked all day long but generally a happy feeling.

The yield is a bit lower on this pheno but I like it the most.

It could have done with another 2 weeks I recon. I didn't check the trichs until after harvest and they were virtually all clear. I went by the colour of the pistils. Oh well, I have the mother plant so next time I will let her go for 13 weeks or more. :)

Large looking yields from all phenos, largest buds I have had in my grow cabinet. I didn't weigh the complete harvests but the buds were much heavier than I thought.

The main colas on phenos 1&2 being around the 20g mark, pheno3 15g once cured.

I'm not sure but all phenos may have hermied a bit. Found a few seeds here and there and on phenos 1 and 3 found a male flower or two! I didn't find this affected the sensi quality too much though. From a good few ounces iv only found about 8 seeds.

The 3rd pheno, my favourite to keep, is more like Thai. The smell of the 2nd pheno is gorgeous and the buzz nice, quite skunky so im keeping her for now too.

The pics of the cured bud are after smoking most of it and do not represent the total harvest.

Overall its a nice strain to try, it is an up active type buzz and quite strong too, though not as strong as I was expecting. Maybe by leaving the buds in bloom longer the strength will increase more by giving more "body" to the buzz?

I used Bio-Bizz all-mix soil that had been used one already and not really composted after. Was still ok with added liquid ferts.

Lighting at the time was two 150w HPS and 125w Envirolite* (Blue 6100K) in-between the 2 HPS bulbs. I've now replaced the blue Envirolite for a red 2700K.

*Giant sized compact fluorescent lamp.

I will grow clones from this strain again at some point, as it is a good smoke, not as powerful a Haze type sativa but an enjoyable experience. I'm trying to build up a good selection of mother plants and Thaitanic is welcome addition to the collection.

Grower Report

October, 2004

I decided to give this strain report after giving the plant a real long cure time. I noticed when testing it right after harvest that I felt it had not reached it's full potential. The high was pretty quick, and the taste was harsh, and so was the smoke. But after a few monthes cure, Tha-Tanic turned into my fav headstash as of yet.

Grow: This plant was slow in the vegetative stage, it was the last of my seedlings to pop the surface. the plants were small and seemed to grow much slower thena my Sweet Cindys. The didn't seem sensitive to nutes, they just ddin't seem to do much with them. I didn't notice much side braching wiht this plant/

Thaitanic really took off when I switched over to flowering, it easily tripled in height. This plant does not like to be overwatered, in fact it grows faster when allowed to dry out more than seems right (at least to a new grower). In flowering, make sure you are tying down this plant. Mine weren't tied down, but I ended up having to lay the branches down horizonally. I had about four branches that were essentially covered in buds from top to bottom. Unless you have 8ft of vertical space you won't be able to gorw it otherwise. These plants when hermie VERY late in flowere maybe the last week. I pulled off bananas when I saw them, and ended up with may 10 seeds in all of the buds I harvested.

Yeild: Since thaitanic responded really well to being "tied down" I ended up with about 12 ounces off of three plants. The nugs looked great when they were on the plant, but when they dried they were really light and "flat" looking. So not so much for bag appeal.

High: Like I said, this plant benefits from a long cure. I have been smoked thaitanic pretty exculively for a month or so and you do build a toler- ance to it, but not too bad. Whne you first take a hit, you feel your head kind of tingle and then a slow burining near the back, like someone has turned on "the backburner" in your brain. As you pull a few more hits, you can feel yourself sailing away, not so much a "flying" feeling, but the feeling you get when you are on a boat and you are watching the water rush past the stern and you realize you are goign really fast, but feel it in your gut. The thing about thaitanic is that it will allow you to have your ultimate experience within any moment. It is a very emotional high, not at forceful, but can allow you to feel pwerful emotions depending on the situation you're in. Llke say you smoke a big joint and then head out to your fav restaurant, as you are walking to the restaurant you can suddenly feel the best moment you ever had walking down a street on a chilly night. I remembered walking down broadway in NYC on the way to a sushi place i loved, and you can smell the smell of that night, the diesel NYC smell, everything. It also allows you to hear things really deeply, and colors become more vibrant and liquid. After getting "used" to the high, its not as racey, and I tend to come down after about 2-3 hours and want to sleep desperately. The next day you can still feel a little high.

I put 4 beans in towels, all germinated, but 1 did not sprout when I put it in soil. All 3 left were females.

As they were planted outdoors I can't say the flowering time, but from seed to harvest it took 3 months. The comments on high, taste and smell won't be very precise, because the buds are not well cured yet.

Basically I got 2 phenos, I call it the Skunk and Fruit phenos. Both grew light green leaves, with some good resin production on the buds, but little on trim leaves. The leaves are somewhat thin, resembles to the Sativa side, but the plant has an Indica shape when growing, with tight buds.

The high was pretty uniform on both phenos. Slightly more on the head than body, but no couch lock. It's a pleasant high that lasts for like an hour. Great for sharing with friends, leads to many laughs, I liked this weed. After the first hour or so the high lows but you still fell very good and warm, but still active, and ready for another joint.

I believe that it could get even better if vegged a little longer, the yield would also very good. I recommend this strain.

Golden skush (POG) is a very easy plant to grow, very good beginner plant. short compact, heavy dense buds, trichomes clear out to the fans. These plants produced very heavy resin.

Seen two different phenos (4 plants) Ed green, shorter/stockier plant, and a dark glossy leaf, a bit taller plant. Both plants were trained and extensively pruned so pics are not typical of the growth pattern.

Med. green: heavy bush, lots of branches, very squat. loads of resin. Sweet fruity after a week of hang dry, fruity/haspy after a week in the jar. Even stone, little more to the head than body. Doesn't smack ya down. Good all day smoke. Grew to 18 inches tall, harvest at 56 days, 22 grams dried.

Dark glossy: only had one out of the four plants grown, deep dark green glossy leaf, Indica dom. Grew a few inches taller than the med. green pheno, had the same heavy resins, but the smell and taste definitely had more Skunk to it. Slight fruit smell, heavy skunkyness. Lot more to the head, you can feel it in your legs, but toke a bit too much and jaw lock is immediate. Of course I favored this pheno. Grew to 22 inches tall, harvest at 61 days, 31 grams dry.

Great all around smoke, nice taste and smell. Most all who have tried it describe it as skunky sweet, go figure.

The best strain I've had the opportunity to grow so far.

I started 2 seeds and both had root tip in 24hrs. Also seedlings were very healthy and nice looking, they were in a 24/0 light schedule since then. I use dixie cups for the seedlings for the 2 first weeks of life.

Veg stage started at the 2nd week of 24/0 and switched to 18/6, also transplanted into 1 gal pots until they showed sex. Meanwhile I didn't have to do anything but water and pay attention to the plant; she was growing like magic, seriously, even better than my four Widows and my two K2 (Nirvana), during the veg stage. Once I noticed that she was doing very well I started feeding with Fox Farm Grow Big every weekend with no problems. I did follow the Fox Farm "Guide to success" chart and I was amazed at the result. Also I was supplementing additives (mycor agent, growth and bloom stimulators) and they were loving it! Both plants showed sex early in 18/6 just as I was hoping. I gave one lady to a good friend so he can perpetuate the strain, also both plants were growing very similar. I only got to grow one, it was a indica/sativa mix of an average size, not too tall, not too small and it did bush out nicely; lots of leaves and on the veg stage she definitely likes to branch out a lot. Flowering stage started a month and a half after vegging.

In the flowering stage I was supplementing Fox Farm Big Bloom and Tiger Bloom together with amazing results. I transplanted then into a 6 gal pots. Smell increased quite a bit. She didn't get as tall I thought she would... She did stretch but at a normal rate and I'm glad she did stretched 'cause that gave space for the big buds! Preflowers were all over way before 12/12 started, so by the 2nd week of flowering I saw the enormous potential of this beauty. Buds were getting fatter and fatter every week and by the 5th week of flowering I proceeded to administrate the fabulous PK 13-14 from CANNA and damn everything about that thing it's true. The stems started to bend over from the weight of the buds at the 1st week of the PK-13-14. Pistils were ready way before the trichs so I waited a week more to give more amber trichs. Smell in flowering was the same as the "papaya" fruit mixed with some skunky. Smell very well camouflaged by the papaya smell in the same plant.

This plant was a breeze to grow. I started off with 10 seeds in paper towels. All popped within 48 hours. Out of those I got six fems. to play with.

I let them veg for about 2 weeks under flouros till they were around 12 inches. I used Pure Blend Pro Veg, Silica Blast, Liquid Karma, and of course some SuperThrive. I pruned them to be pole plants since that's what they seemed to want to be. This plant loves to eat, They just ate up the nutes. During veg I kept the ppms around 1000.

When it came to flower I had 4 strong plants and two runts (I managed to pull at least an ounce out of the runts). When I threw them into the flower room they just took off. No shock from the HPS. I kept upping the ppms throughout the flower cycle. I used Pure Blend Pro Flower, with Silica Blast, Liquid Karma, Superthrive, and on the 5th week I hit it with Pure Blend Pro Flower Soil. Before the flush, the ppms were up to 1800-1900. Just lovely. They all came out great. Large colas Except the runts. They got to be as round as soda cans. Some almost as long as 2 feet.

The buds on there were tight and compact going up the stem. Not a bit of mold at all. The smell wasn't too strong at all during the grow, but light up a fatty of that stuff and you better make sure nobody is down wind. The taste is very hashy on the intake, but exhaling you can taste the skunky fruitiness. The high is immediate and intense right to the dome and then it works its way down your body till the time comes where you raid the kitchen and just destroy it leaving behind carnage.

I would give this strain a shot especially if I was a noob. Easy to grow, respectable yields, very sturdy and low odor. I don't have a scale since it's of no use to me (I don't sell), so I'm not sure how much I pulled from the harvest, but if I were to estimate I would say around 7-8 ounces.

Started outside from day 1, brought inside and placed under a 400watt HPS at day 55. Only stretched about a foot in flower. Grew tight dense buds on top. Golden Skush is a forgiving strain, that loves to be fed. I was able to apply a heavy feeding schedule onto the Golden Skush's without any bad effects.

Taste: The taste is a hard one. Has a very nice pleasant taste. Extremely fruity/piney aftertaste.

Smell: Wow, this is where the Golden Skush takes all my points. The smell is incredible. Only thing that will hold back the smell is a glass jar. DO not expect to carry this around in a plastic bag and have no one know you have it. The smell reminds you of nothing on this world, just extremely strong, but yet smooth and pleasant. The reactions of friends smelling this stuff is priceless.

High: Couchlock high, this will make you relaxed after only a few hits. This weed hits your senses on the first hit and becomes a slight buzz, you continue smoking it thinking not much besides this buzz will happen. You arrive at the 10 minute mark and your eyes get almost closed and your body goes limp. Great for just wanting to relax and listen to music. Also the high will have you cleaning your kitchen out within minutes, coco puffs seem to best fix this.

The pheno I keep strongly resembles Skunk#1 but you can tell it has a little kush in it. They start out at a slow growth rate but really make up for it later. Skush is just loaded with trichomes, even on the bigger fan leaves. It finished in about 60 days with cloudy trichomes. Everyone who has smoked it really liked it alot and always has something to say about the taste and smell. If your lookin for a good creeper, This aint it. It hits you almost right away and mostly to the head. After an hour the high really mellows out though. I would recommend this strain to any grower, all around good weed.

Got the seeds from Legends, excellent service and communication. Germinated 20 tiny seeds at the beginning of April indoors under fluorescents. 16/20 germed. Put youngsters outdoors at the beginning of May, 50N West coast NA.

Very sativa-looking plants with Thai type leaves very thin lamina coarsely toothed. 9 females out of 16, began preflowering mid-June.

I should have probably prefaced this report with the caveat that these plants were not treated to the best of growing conditions as they were planted amongst some very vigorous plants acclimated to the local growing conditions and were more or less buried under their larger neighbours as a result. Nevertheless, they did pretty well considering the circumstances and wound up as small 3-4 foot Christmas tree shaped plants. Flowering in earnest began at the end of June (!!) and they were pretty much fully mature by the end of August, though I let a couple go longer to see what the result would be.

This strain is insanely early for what appears to be a pure sativa and although not given the best of cultural conditions still performed adequately. The potency of my examples was not that high, whether because of the conditions or genetics, nevertheless I got about an ounce per small plant of very nice, very sativa bud per plant with a wonderful fruity, sweet odour and a very uplifting high. No hint of couchlock.

I bred a couple of the girls to the best male and got a fair quantity of (oddly much larger than the original) seeds. I'll be trying this strain again under more suitable conditions next summer- not among the giants.

This strain has enormous potential I think, not so much as it exists but moreso as breeding stock for an early sativa project- this strain is damn near autoflowering and as such could prove of considerable use in trying to breed a more potent very early sativa.

I germed 8 seeds and all 8 popped. I got 7/8 female to male ratio. There was no phenotype variation all plants grew very uniform to one another. It grows very strong during the veg. phase. 6 weeks (42 days) in veg will make a very strong plant. They look very lush and vigorous during veg stage. Clones are easy to make and root quick.

Bloom:

The yield on a 4 foot plant is between 4-5 ounces (No CO2). The buds grow quick and dense. Grows great indoors and outdoors. The trichome production on the plant is incredible, keeping almost a glazing look to the nugs. The plant grows very nice bushes with uniform nugs. Perfect height not to tall not to short. Yields very good for the size it takes up.

Smoke Report:

It makes excellent bubble hash. The nugs look thick and are covered with frosty trichomes. The smell is not all that pungent. Just a fruity/pine-apple smell to the herb. The taste is excellent. With a fruity/Skunk taste that hits very smooth. The slight sour undertones stay in the mouth for a few seconds. The high is very strong. It reminds me of the White Widow. The Skunk just makes the high a little more balanced. The White Widow was more head then body.

Overall assessment:

What you would expect from a great breeder like Green House (Shantibaba). I love the taste and the high. It grows very uniform which I like. One of the reasons I choose to breed with it. There was almost no variation of phenotypes. All plants grew the same. Many props to them for having very stable genetics.

Just finished harvesting some of the "Nevilles Haze" from Greenhouse Seed Co and here is the update and grow report. The location for the grow was tropical Australia just north of Cairns. "Nevilles Haze" seed from Greenhouse was purchased from SeedsDirect in unopened Greenhouse seed packets, 13 beans in total. 10 out of 13 seeds germinated in mid of May in tissue paper and were transplanted into grow tubes in a 50/50 sterilised peat/sand mix. 3 seedlings died through neglect. Leaving a total of 7 healthy plants. During the 6 weeks of vegging the plants reached a height of around 5 feet. I was quite impressed at the plant vigour during this period never had a plant reach such a large size in such a short period.

At 5 feet the plants were taken outside to flower in the tropical winter sunlight. In about 10 days all plants were beginning to flower. From the 7 plants taken outside after sexing we had a great ratio 5 females and 2 males. The 5 females were then transplanted into the soil which was a red volcanic kraznosome. The 2 males were transferred to a new location away from the girls to hang out with some G13 x Hashplant males. All plants had been mainly fed with Dynamic Lifter and Osmocote slow release 9 months and where mulched with decomposed compost. Dur- ing flowering though the only nutrients used were pot ash for the flowering phase.

During flowering the females had heaps of stretch I mean they more then doubled their height to 12 feet (1.5 x the original vegging height).

The bud is extremely sticky and has a very strong smell of pine or pine cones. It's a very beautiful strong smell. This shot show a gum leaf stuck to the sticky bud. There is a cockroach on the bud as well it's not its either odeed or extremely stoned it eventually died. The plants were very easy to grow under tropical conditions and were very disease and stress resistant.

I wasn't expecting the yield to be so good as what we got and I was very impressed with the outcome. The total grow time from veg to flowering to harvest was 4 months and 2 weeks (1 month veg and 3.5 months flowering (110 days in tropical winter sunlight). The average yield for the 5 plants was 660 g (or 1 lb and 6 oz) dry. Now the first test of the bud was from a split branch that had so much heavy bud on it the branches broke under the strain. We rolled a really skinny spliff about the size of skinny pencil. The taste of the smoke was beautiful. The best I have ever tasted. Very mild and smooth like pine, even tasted like you were not even smoking anything at all. Had just a third of a joint and MMMMMMM Waaaayyy tooo much. The stone was very deceptive. At first I didn't think I was stoned at all. Its one of those creepers. Except it kept on creeping getting stronger and stronger becoming really intense and very trippy and hallucinogenic. Definitely the strongest sativa stone I have ever experienced. It's has a really up high gave us one of those laughing attacks combined with a real trippiness to it. I'm sure this stuff has LSD in the genes somewhere. Its definitely not for the inexperienced smoker. In my experience it must be close to being one of the best sativa varieties out there!

On the down side if anyone grows this plant, it would be better to tie up the branches as they get too heavy with bud and can't cope with the weight under windy wet conditions. Also if it is being grown inside and space is a consideration you will have to start flowering extra early to cope with the excessive stretch during flowering. A good rule of thumb is that the flowering stage will produce about 1.5 x the vegging height.

Ok, finally even though the flowering period is very long 3.5 months the vegging period for these large plants was not (1 month). In my view, for the quality of the plant (yeild and bud) 4.5 months for 12 foot plants with an average yield of 660 g is not long at all!

Finally if you want the best of the best Æçâ, -Å"Nevelles Haze" is highly recommended for yield and potency 5 out of 5 Stars ***** (if grown properly). Believe me this stuff will take you higher then the stars its pure rocket fuel.

Peace to all Ozbud

SSH is a must have in any garden. Beautiful crystal covered buds starting a light green at harvest turning into a dark golden brown/green color. These buds look wet from all the crystals.

SSH is great for SCROG. She is branchy and stretchy so be prepared. 6" clones on 12/12 can easily reach 2'-3' so keep that in mind.

2"-3" between nodes is not uncommon with some being even longer. The buds do not get huge but they do grow plenty of tops. I've found that topping a 6" clone a week before switching to 12/12 really helps to get a lot of branching.

When scrogging SSH be prepared to bend and tie for the 1st 2 weeks of 12/12; by week 3 the stretching should stop.

The high is very confusing and somewhat hard to predict but I find it great for wake-n-bake. The high starts out pretty intense; you know smoked good bud the 1st hit you take it grabs you by the balls and makes you cough and you feel the buzz coming on. People unfamiliar with extremely good bud can only take 1 hit and often find themselves high for hours. When smoked in a joint you find out you've smoked too much about 30 seconds after a big choking hit.

All in all SSH from GreenHouse is top shelf smoke and definitely a 9 over all.

I got a pack of 13 seeds and out of that i got 7 females. The phenotypes varried quite a lot. 2 finnished in 10 weeks, they were similar in taste/smell, spicey/piney. they were not that stretchy and grew as four main tops with lille branching after i had topped them once. One was a better yeilder with a more indica high, the other had a much nicer high but was not a great yeilder.

I had one super stretchy bitch. she ended up at like 2m tall. loads of side branches and a very poor yeilder. finnished in 12 weeks. very nice high, all in the head no body stone. super racey, u can feel your heart pumping, it also made me very paranoid. quite a headfuck really. it had a really nice smell/taste after drying and curing like sherbert and spice. i would of kept this one if it wasnt for the poor yeild and super stretchy-ness.

I had one trifolite which i had to harvest at 12 weeks but would have gone to 14+ weeks this pheno stretched the least and grew nice top buds with little branching. it had the most amazing clear sativa high. tasted like sweet spices and it yeilded ok.

The other 3 were all quite similar in looks and taste and smell . they all stretch for about 3 weeks but are not that branchy and grow nice long dagger like top buds. the taste and smell of these 3 were out of this world. super fruit spice with a mountain air freshness to it. one had a bit of a body stone coming hrough in the high after about 2 hours of smoking but before that was all in the head. very clear and up.

The other 2 were pretty similar in high. all in the head no body stone at all. very motivational. gets me hyped up and i cant sit still, after smoking it i just have to get up and do something.

Out of all of the my keeper was one from the last 3 it had the best high/taste /smell of the lot.

I only found out sex of plants following 5 days of 12/12. I used two 150watt HPS lights for lighting during flowering. She was flowered for 70 days, 2 of the days where placed in darkness. She was then dried for 7 days and now the buds are in my jar curing.

The smoke is fruity, but nothing sweet like Bubblegum, or anything close. There is almost no aftertaste, but if you do take 1 toke too many she will make you cough a lung. After smoking I found myself watching T.V. for the next 2 hours with no will to do nothing besides relax. I also noticed it numbed the pain in my back as well. This is the 1st type of weed I've smoked like this, and I'm enjoying it!

I received this plant as a clone from a friend. It clones very easy. When moved to soil it grows very fast. 6 weeks total veg for a fat 6-7 ounce yielder. This plant needs space even in veg. It grows exactly like what you would expect from a hardcore sativa.

Bloom Stage:

If you want to grow this plant give it a lot of space. It is a light and space hog. Grows like a friggin vine. Late in bloom it needs to be staked up (supported). The stems do not support the weight of the fully mature buds. It is extremely crystalized. From week 2 the trichomes are everywhere. The plant seems to lag in the later stage and I cut the light cycle to 8/16 the last week. 65-70 days in bloom is normal.

Smoke report:

Makes excellent bubble hash. The bag appeal is awesome. Nugs are dense, but not rock hard (mostly from the immense crystal coverage). The nugs are completely frosted with trichomes. Very distinct hash smell. The flavor is nice and crisp. The high is very strong to the head. After a few loads starts to seem a little harsh. slight musky undertones can be tasted as well.

Overall evaluation:

Very strong genetics. It's obvious why everyone uses the White Widow in their crosses. Trichome production is out of hand. Nugs are covered in frost. Taste is very hashy and musky. Sometimes it seems harsh from it being so hashy tasting. The high is very head inducing. White Widow is also very mold resistant and bug resistant.

Ok this WW was grown from clones, i have been getting the same very stable WW for years now, this particular pheno type is one fussy so and so to grow to a good yield. that fantastic WW taste you can't destroy, as long as you get them through to harvest you'll have some very potent nice tasting smoke. if you over feed her she will yield very low. but if you get to know her fickle needs you can achieve a good yield, as well as some of the best smoke your likely to find.

basically shes nute shy, she like a normal begining with some rhizotonic and cannazym, for the roots and some coco A+B for food, took the ec to about 1.2 in the veg phase of 4 days. but they had a rooting phase before that of 9 days (in the rooting phase all 120 clones were under one lamp, with ec from 0.8 to 1.1). after the veg phase in the first 2 weeks of 12/12 i went up slowly all the way to ec 1.45 after all bud sites were grown i reduced back to 1.1 and left it there until 2 weeks after that when they started uesting again finished up with 1.4 i went up to 1.5 with the pk but that was the max and only for a few days, then i diluted it down again.

this is tried and tested if you have the nute shy pheno of WW its the only way to get a good yield. by the end of the grow after a few days of flush with phed water the leaves are quite yellow, but the buds are what matters and as you'll see they more then make up for the autum leaves imo.

i gave her a low score for ease of growing, because of the funny nute regime she likes. but otherwise a top smoke which you'll be happy with for ages, great bag apeal as she tends to be big and fluffy, covered in trichomes, looks like more then it is, weight wise. you just got to watch those nutes lol.

The seeds were germinated in cotton with rainwater. They all germinated (15/15) in less than 3 days. The fastest 5 were selected to find a great female to be used for a photo-documentary on the strain.

The 5 selected seedlings were given 18hrs for 14 days. The light period was then lowered to 12 hrs in 3 days time (2 hours less per day).

Of the 5 plants 3 were female and the fastest flowering one was selected as subject for the photo-documentary. The only pruning done was the removal of the lowest 2 sets of opposite branches (b1-b2-b3-b4) at the beginning of the flowering. For the rest the plant was left free to develop in her own structure. After 64 days of flowering the plant was harvested (branch by branch, freshly manicured with scissors, no machine-trimming!!) and dried over 14 days at 18 degrees Celsius and 60% relative humidity, in total darkness and with low air circulation. After the drying the buds were cured in a box for 4 weeks before being tested. Wonderful smoke, very balanced between strong indica and high sativa. The taste is very spicy, with notes of pepper and lemongrass.

I bought twelve seeds and got twelve free. I germed 11 out of twelve seeds for this grow. The young plants grew irregularly for about three weeks until starting to grow more normal. These plants took off. They had great hybrid vigor. I took 7 clones and all made it. They were very quick to root in the rockwool.

After about 35 days in veg (1000 watt MH), I switched them to 12/12 (1000 watt HPS). Of the original 11 plants from seed, I got 7 females. It's good I have a tall growroom. These are stretchers. The needed nutes after the initial stretch. I fed them strong doses of Age Old Bloom and some guano. They really eat up the N after the stretch. One of the originals from seed had an indica phenotype, but all others had a sativa character. The indica phenotype finished in 55 days -the others all finished from 63 to 67 days. One of the clones from a sativa that finished in 63 days finished in 56 days. I still don't get that, but it made it easier. They finally stopped stretching after four weeks! After that the buds filled in nicely giving me a nice yield and good supply.

Harvesting confused me as the trichomes went milky before 50 percent of the pistils turned red. I ended up harvesting all the plants at 100 percent milky trichomes and 50 percent amber pistils.

Dried by hanging for 8 days and than cured long in Mason Jars.

It has a strong orange smell and taste. I usually vaporize, so the taste rating may be different for me.

There are a lot of California Orange strains out there. This one has a very strong potency that leans on the couchlock side. It has enough head in it to function for about three hours and than you fall asleep. It also makes you laugh at anything. Other Cali-O strains are described as more up. I have cooked with this strain and it is pretty powerful. It is easy to overdose on the cooking...be careful!

I was very pleased with the grow and clone ease of this strain. I also really like the potency. I usually grow strains that have more of a indica/sative balance, but this was well worth the effort. It also yielded very nice and it is stable.

I'll grow it again because I have a lot of extra seeds from Hemcy. Thanks for this strain, Hemcy!

I remember my first time smoking this strain with my girlfriend. We rolled one up, got about 3/4 of the way through our joint, and set it down for a bit.

NOT a strain for beginners as it is very picky. She likes it dry and somewhat acidic I have noticed. An experienced grower would have little difficulty in cultivation. A beginner would better look elsewhere. Due to long maturation period and picky nature, best suited for those with patience.

I have flowered under both 1k MH and 1k HPS with this strain and it does remarkably well once in flower with either lamp choice. Veg's well under flores too. Short compact plant, I usually prune into bushes to increase the busdites on this girl. Not really a brancher otherwise.

I had both sativa and indica dominant phenos from my order. I kept the sativa as it really puts you up there more so than it makes you stick to the couch. The indica dominant if left to mature the full 10 weeks is downright lethal and is in my "day killer" category.

I planted 5 seeds of which two were female. They were then put into into 15 liter pots, filled with self-mixed organic soil. (peat moss, perlite, worm castings, BioBizz' Pre-Mix)

Soon after flowering started I noticed that they had several diverse traits. One phaeno had dark green but thin leaves, the other one was lighter with broader leaves.

Bud sites on the darker phaeno were smaller but a lot more resinous. It also finished quicker. The aroma is more distinctive than on the 'fatter' phaeno.

Hashish from this strain is extremely recommendable.

The weed is just lovely. Not a typical day time smoke, but will not get you sleepy right away. It's a very unique but overall mainly relaxing high.

Both phaenos resemble in aroma/taste and potency.

The sad part is that after they mature/are fully ripe, they start to pop out them bananas... It does obviously not decrease glandular resin production, and if harvested on time there are no semillas in the flowers.

I am truly satisfied with this IBL and will soon give Herbaria's genetics another try.

These seeds looked well developed and came in original packaging with protective plastic bubble from local headshop. Seeds germinated easily and produced vigorous easy growing plants. Out of 3 seed germinated I got 1 male and 2 females.

Both plants were explosive during flowering stretching quite fast and filling out with incredibly resinous buds. However, one plant stretched more than any other plant I've grown, and would have produced enormous top buds in the right conditions. The other plant was bushier and shorter, but had similar buds/resin/smell and high. In spite of the difference in growth traits these were good quality plants that produced large resinous buds. I would be happy to try other HQS varieties.

Smoke report: A friend who is an occasional smoker said that this was his favorite herb by far. Personally I prefer something a bit stronger like Bubblegum, but have found this a nice easy going smoke to share with friends: very social, and the smell fills the room with a powerful, rich, sweet hash aroma that is very pleasant. The bubble hash made from the trim was a treat, quality sticky black.

A very easy to grow plant that budded up nice and quick, and not at all stretchy. I was using 400w MH all the way on this one which was supplemented with LED's and one 15w T4 fluoro. What I really liked about this strain is that it was nice after a couple of days drying, although the rest of the plant that had dried for 10 more days and got about the same cure was a lot nicer. It was still good to smoke that first sample after a few days. At this stage in other strains they usually tasted very green and not much of a whack. As for the odor, up until this plant I did not need extraction in my grow space, but the smell of this one went right throughout the house

It cloned easy during the summer when the photoperiod suited, the one I tried most recently didn't make it. That may have been because at-tics are too cold this time of year for clones (?). It took 2 weeks, using organic or chemical rooting gel in a propagator, to root the clones during the summer.

good for beginners, very easy to grow, this plants are resistant to any bad weather influence like cold, humidity and drought

I germinated 2 seeds and 1 of them was male.The female one grows very quick and started flo in first week of august (I started 3 of june because the weather earlier was horrible) The plant stoped grow up when she was about 180cm. I cut my girl in first week of november

Smell and taste

The smell was excellent like sensi seeds says hashy and taste is the same good for bong works because the smoke is very very heavy.My suggestion - cure this weed 2 month then smell and taste clear like like ball of high grade afghani hash ;)

High

This weed gives you high between head and body. There's no cauchlock but you feel it in your body great for TV watching, listening music and generally chill out. If you'll smoke too much it kick your ass to bed ;) I like it ;)

This is a 4 way hybrid (Sativa/Indica/Ruderalis/Skunk). The appearance is certainly Sativa and Ruderalis ; tall with long thin leaves and branches that I had to tie up in flowering. Almost odourless until the last two weeks in which you can smell a sweet odour. Long flowering time (maybe because it didn't receive so many hours of direct sun every day). It took almost 11-12 weeks.

The resin production is not comparable to other strains I grew (for example W.W.- S.STAR - Power Plant - AK 48 - Durban Poison and others). Respectable yield. I also found it very sensitive to mites (I used neem oil). The taste is very sweet and skunky ; the smoke is soft and delicate. The effect is well balanced ; mainly heady but also physical without couchlock with a moderate potency.

This was the first plant I ever grew properly.

This strain was very forgiving to the newbie grower.

Vegged for 6 weeks to a height of 18". I seriously abused the plant on my first attempt with temps of 90-110. Also the PH was about 7.5 - 8.5 most of the time, which I found was not good especially when using rockwool (now I use clones and veg until 12" then fin or top).

I adjusted the PH down to 5.5 - 6.0 got the temps down to 80 max.

This one was not topped at all. I then bloomed for 8 weeks. She had grown to 5 ft tall and was quite stretchy, but the buds were good quality and covered in resin. The resin was emptied at week 6 and PH 5.5 water was added with no nutes for the last 2 weeks.

Cut down and left to dry for 2 weeks, then cured and stored in mason jars for their duration. It smokes like a dream, quite spicy taste but a mellow smoke all the same...

On average I am getting about 7oz on 1 plant.

This plant is definitely 1 I will keep growing again and again.

I also find it helps with anxiety and arthritis pain relief.

February, 002

I was given this strain in clone form from a friend who thought it would do well in a Tree grow. I have also grown it out in an NFT setup as well and it performs really well in both the Krusty Buket system and the NFT system.

The particular pheno I have will grow rather tall and wide in the K/Buckets when given enough veg time and vertical lighting and there's not really one dominant cola, instead you have lots and lots of main colas that are all similar in size.

In the NFT setup with less veg time it becomes more of a single cola dominant plant, with the lower colas still being really fat they're just not as long as the main bud.

In both setups the flowers take their sweet time in filling out but once you hit week 5 of 12/12 they really pack it on. Come week 8 they're looking pretty much ready and it's just a case of picking your moment depending on how you like your high. These buds can get really dense and are susceptible to mold given the right conditions so make sure your humidity levels are in check and you have good air circulation.

As for the actual smoke, this is definately one of the more sociable strains I have smoked. You can actually function pretty well whilst high on this and you definately feel up for pretty much anything as long as you don't overdo it. But, smoke too much and your in for a bit of a journey, your mind will soon be doing laps of your forehead and you will be destined to an evening on the couch.

June,

I saw these on seedsdirect when I was ordering some other stuff and needed to spend a little more to get the freebies so I bought a pack to get over the hump. I germinated just 2 seeds for the hell of it and to see what was up with it and if I should bother using up my time/space/power on this strain. I was extremely pleasantly surprised as I got 2 girls and they both smelled like haze but with a hint of like a sour black cherry.... anyway, the smell is incredible. I rolled up a joint of it to try after it just had been dried and I could not believe 2 things...1 the headrush I got instantly and 2 It tasted exactly like it smelled and it was like it had been already curing for 3 months. I have never grown and had a bud not taste at all greeny/fresh if smoked within 2 or 3 weeks after drying. This strain is very Sativa in appearance and growth. It took about a 100 days to finish and was worth the long wait. It really stretched alot when put into flower and I wouldn't recommend it for anyone with height issues. I had one problem with a overwatering while I was on vacation because my friend decided to water when the top was a little dry instead of following my instructions. I also noticed it still needed alot of nitrogen to keep it going thru the long flowering period. I also had hermie problems with both plants and had to cull one of them at 5 1/2 weeks due to it being overwhelmed with nanners. The other one just popped a few around 7 weeks and I had to keep a eagle eye on it so nothing would make it past me and spread its love dust. I do think that if I could of switched to 11/13 instead of 12/12 that it might of helped with the hermie problem. As far as smoking this strain is very smooth and very tasty. It really makes you savor the smoke as the aftertaste it leaves is extremely pleasant on the palette. The high is sudden and powerful with intense headrushes. I find myself very ambitious and useful after smoking and you can even think clear while being wasted. Ive been strickly smoking this strain in the morning and it never seems to make me tired or lazy which I love. I would recommend this strain for $30 to anyone who wants to try something unique and exotic with paying out the you know what...lol

Grower Report

OK, this plant was my first attempt at growing, so there were many errors made with this cultivation. This grower never had much room to cultivate, so had to cut and kill many of the plants that remained after vegetation as there was simply not enough room for them all to grow. This left only one female from the three remaining plants. There were also White Widows, in the grow room, which took priority over these Purple Tops. There was a lot of bending to be had from this plant in order to maintain it under the light in the grow room. This plant produced much vegetation and likes to grow up, high. It seems to fall victim of stress quite easily, this I found out when I needed to take the plant out of the grow room to do some modifications. All the fan leaves turned yellow and fell off, though flowering was maintained with the remaining single stemmed leaves remaining for a number of weeks. The buds on this plant never seem to want to fluff up to a fuller size, could this be due to the lighting only being two 400w (HPS + MH). This grower had major problems with the heat being too high, with temperatures raising to as high as 100 degrees. Although there was a source of CO2, which was from a quantity of alcohol fermentation going on in the grow room, it still was too hot. This resulted in low relative humidity. The plants were left in flowering for approximately 10 weeks. The smoke is fine, cool with a creeping effect. The THC content is not too high and leaves quite a mild effect.

I tried a second crop of this, as there was a certain amount of seeding. This could have been from an outside source, i.e. a 'mate' coming round and fertilizing or it could simply be the fact that these plants have hermaphroditic properties. In the second crop, there were 3 females 1 male and 1 hermaphrodite. The hermaphrodite had many buds. It seemed also a shame to cut it down as it would have weighed in an awful lot of bud, though there were tiny small male buds, underneath the female buds. Upon first noticing, the plant was cut down and disposed of. Of the three good plants remaining one has started out as a really small squat plant, though with a snip to allow for branching of the tops, it turned out to be quite a good plant. It managed to grow full of bud, no taller than 1 meter and it never branched out. This plant would be ideal for bunching up many plants in smaller spaces. It tended to be stronger against heat trouble and varying degrees of humidity.

I grew it outside, fertilized and watered. Overall the plants grew very quickly and matured in average time. They were planted in the ground with some Miracle grow potting mix and compost. The plants do smell quite a bit, so if you are picking a strain with low odor you might not want this, but the quality outweighs everything. Very powerful energetic high. You may feel it through your whole body. Truly a great smoke. One hitter. I have had many trips off this weed.

This lady went on autogrow at week three when she went under 12/12. She was all bud! A rare leaf. Only problem was she was top heavy (is that a problem?) so I strung her up for about half of her budding. She is very pretty, a great look to her as Thai dominates this plant in taste as well. A bargain in my book! Very similar to "classic" Thai weed from 1980-1985 or so. YUMMMMMMM, leammmmmme vap some up now.

I sowed five seeds and got 3 females of three different phenotypes.

1. Skunk dominant

2. 50/50 Mix

3. Thai dominant

1. The Skunk dominant was the second most potent of the weed, and probably would have been the heaviest producing of all the plants. It shared its side of the garden with the thai dominant pheno but still yielded incredibly well. Now after curing for awhile it smells like over ripe bananas and tastes like a mixture of chocolate and necco wafers. The smell during flowering was skunky. I think this plant is what made it smell. The high is very psychedelic with a slight body buzz. It doesn't induce paranoia, but the shadows are constantly moving. If you're anxiety prone or don't like to hallucinate I wouldn't smoke this because it would be pretty easy to work yourself up into an unhappy situation. I have had friends flip out in bars before after smoking this thinking that something or someone was being hostile towards them and wanted to fight.

2. The 50/50 plant was the mediocre one of the bunch. It did have the most hybrid vigor, was the first to sprout, was the biggest plant, and the first to show flower. It smelled really nicely while flowering but unfortunately it went away after curing and became a grassy herbal smell with lemon undertones when touched. The taste wasn't anything special and neither was the high. Unfortunately this plant really took up nearly half the space of my tiny garden, and therefore was the largest yielding. It wasn't bad pot, but it just paled in comparison to the others.

3. The Thai Dominant pheno. This plant was the most crystalline plant of the three. The trichome coverage was just insane from the moment it began flowering. Even before buds began to form, the leaves already had a coating of trichomes. It stretched like a beast, was the last to start flowering, yet finished right on time with the other plants. During flowering it smelled like Juicy Fruit gum. Now after curing for for 90 days or so it smells like sweet delicious mangos. The taste is really just creamy and chocolately, but I think it needs more curing because it can be harsh at times. Its very expansive smoke. Two hits is more than enough to get you ripped. Its almost a pure head buzz, I can feel my heart pounding in my temples, and it gives me a rush of energy while taking away my ability to coherently think about anything. Its fun weed to walk around with, but you really can't do any that is productive. Sometimes even maintaining a conversation becomes hard because your mind just doesn't stay focused. I guess it definitely also provokes tachycardia. A friend of mine smoke a joint of this between 4 people in a bar once, and he began to pass out on the floor and turn pale white. I guess his bloodpressure just really dropped, it scared the crap out of me.

December, 2004

This strain was chossen purely on the fact they were the only feminsed seeds available at my local Hydro shop, I went feminised due to an ear-lier grow only producing males and I did not have the time or space to effectivly find a mother.

Before I go on, based on the fact I was limited in choice whilst choosing my strain, the resulting smoke was dynamite and with the benefit of hind sight I would definatly recomend this strain to anyone, it is a perfectly sweet smooth smoke.

Anyway back to the grow... (I used DWC)

Copyright 2012 weGrow LLC.

I germinated 2 seeds in tissue (2 days) transferred to rockwool cubes soaked in a low strength mix of Formulex (ec 1.2 ph 5.5) It then took 2 to 3 days for them to show their starter leaves.. At this point I transferred straight to the grow room and put them in the oxy pots and then under a 400W Metal halide, I switched to a mix of Canna Vega A&B @ EC 1.2 PH 6) steadily upped over a 2 week period to EC 1.4

Over the next two weeks they flourished, I vegged em for only 2 weeks due to this, then switched over to a 12/12 under a 400W hps, (1 week later I switched to Canna Flores @ EC 1.4 Ph 6, 3 weeks into 12/12 one looked like it was showing male ("£80 feminised seeds!!!!!!) at this point it was looking like I only had room for one plant anyway so I ditched the potential male and left the defo female to fill the room..

@ 5 weeks 12/12 I added PK13/14 (I did this to early) and at this point I also trimmed back a lot of the dense vegetation, probably removing 70% of the leaves.....

6 weeks into 12/12 I removed all nutrients (started flushing) I since found out that this was a bad idea, on the 8th week when I was planing on cutting I added some more nutes and planned on leaving it another 3 to 4 weeks, it went a further week and a half and I decided to chop (this was mainly based on the smell..... it was the biggest smell in the world :) lol....

I trimmed all the main leaves back and then just chopped at the base, hung the plant upside down, set the thermostat to 18 degrees and left for 3 weeks... @ 3 weeks I meticulously trimmed each cola back to the bud and was left with some of the best damn bud I have ever smoked (and I may add I have spent many a weekend in Amsterdam)

I got 4.5oz of prime bud and 3oz of good green trim which is also a nice smoke and gives you a good high (not in the same league as the bud though :)

All in all superb, was my first successful grow and even though I screwed up with the flushing and the PK13/14 it didnt have a serious negative effect on the final product, I wonder what the yeild would have been like if I hadn't have screwed up :)

All that said due to the smell it was also my last grow :( far to smelly, I could get a Carbon filter but the main smell was created on harvest and I dont have the space to create a CF'ed trim room.....

Great strain though, highly recomend.....

Grower Report

October, 2002

I grew Armageddon 47 last year. This was the first of my grows. I had no idea which seeds to buy, and stuck with two seed banks for my 3 strains. I got these seeds from Heaven's Stairway. Most of the "first choice" strains were sold out. Just as well, this is a good one.

Out of ten seeds, six sprouted and three turned out to be female. It is an easy plant to grow, but will react to too much or little nutrients. I had them in veg for about six weeks. Two were two feet tall when I was ready to flower them. One grew so short and bushy; it was only one foot tall when ready for 12/12. After a nute lockout problem, (too much chicken manure added to the soil) I recovered them with a repotting and a treatment with chelated iron. I put them in five-gallon pots, but two of them probably would have done OK in three-gallon pots.

In 12/12, they really did not stretch a lot. The short one stayed short and bushy throughout its entire life. They all seemed to have the Indica phenotype.

The three were harvested at day 53, 55 and 59. This is how long it took the trichomes to go MILKY.

I hung them out to dry in a closet with 30 to 40 percent humidity. In about a week, I put them in glass jars -opening them once a day for 4 weeks or so.

It tastes piney and minty.

The high is up, but has a little relaxing "couchlock" added. I use cannabis for depression and Armageddon 47 is great for that. This strain (and others) have allowed me to dump all prescription meds.

I contacted homegrown Fantaseeds to ask the genetic story. They said it is a hybrid of AK/47 and four Sativas from India and other parts of Asia.

Real nice-try it.

I bought these seeds 2003 from seeds direct (10 seeds in pack, breeders pack was a reseal able plastic baggie with a homegrown fantaseeds card inside it). The first time i grew the strain was in a microgrow (100 watt HPS) about 2 years ago. At that time 4/5 seeds germed, 2/4 were female, harvested an ounce and a half, flowered for 55 days.

GROW REPORT:

This grow was under a 400 watt HPS in a C22 cab. They were in a bubble bucket system based off the "Marijuana Bubble Garden" article on this website. 4 plants, 1 control bucket.

Of the 5 seeds i had left 4/5 germed and were put in soil. One died from mold before it got out of the soil. 2 of the remaining 3 were female. The mothers were grown in soil under flouros and clones were taken of each (2 of each ended up in the cab). The mothers were flowered at this point, and yielded a little less than 2 ounces after being moved under a 150 watt HPS.

The clones in the cab were vegged for 20 days (ended up being too long, stretched to close to the light). When switched to 12/12 they stretched about 3 times there height. Stretch was probably aggravated by the large difference between day and night temps (night about 15+ degrees colder), as well as a bit of overcrowding, despite selective pruning.

They flowered nicely until about week 6, when i went out of town and we had a snap of cold weather. Because my cab is in my basement it was affected by the cold and the water temp in the hydro system dropped to 11 degrees for a couple days. The cold weather turned many of the leaves purple, as this strain will do, but also severally stunted growth when they would have otherwise packed on weight (as the mothers had done when they were flowered). This is the reason i did not fill out the SI rating; it would have been inaccurate for the strain because of this problem. Final yield was a measly 5 ounces of NICE frosty buds.

Hydro-organic botanicare nutes were used.

SMOKE REPORT:

1.5 month cure, vaporized- nice sweet taste. Cough inducing even with a vape. Nice smooth high, heady yet enough of an indica touch to remain completely mellow with no paranoia. Good for depression; functional for insomnia; not the most munchie inducing out there but does increase appetite.

This is a really grower friendly plant, quite easy to grow, and low maintenance. It has a big calyx to leaf ratio, I'm actually quite impressed as the plant has very few leaves.

Since seedlings the plants seemed very strong and hardy. The plants really liked being topped, menorah-like growth after being topped. It's not a tall plant, thus making it very suitable for SCROG technique.

As flowering continues, the short stems get really fat and packed with buds, giving the impression of getting a good yield, but I found that once dry, the buds shrunk way too much, leading to a lesser than expected yield.

Not a very stinky plant, the smell is really nice though. The smoke is superb, great quality in taste, smell, and high. Mostly a head high, closer to Sativa than Indica.

It grows smoothly, but does not yield as much as i'd like (thats why i'm growing 4 now:) The nugs are solid and covered in crystals. mine didnt turn purple with red hairs like the pic in the big book of buds, but it still grew to be very shiny with crystals colorful with hairs.

Still working it out but has been quite a journey so far. About 7-8 months in and I think I've found a true Haze plant, at least what I am used to smoking as Haze, and I'm not talking about that chem crack-nug.

Got 10 sprouts, 5 male 5 female. I could have sworn before flowering that the males were females and the females males, but that was not the case.

Plants were vegged for 3.5 months or so, to about 2 feet or so, then chopped back and cloned and flowered at about 14"

First few weeks of flowering the plants stretch about 2-2.5x, and bud development is pretty slow until about 25-30 days.

So like I said there were 5 females, and prob 3-4 different phenos.

The first 2 are done in about 80-85 days, these plants also have the characteristic of the leaves dying, about 4 weeks into flower, all the fans start yellowing and dying up. These are not a keeper. Yielded about 20 grams off one 3 foot plant, nice long colas, but dried up to only 5 grams or so, but it's a sativa so I knew it wasn't going to be an indica yield.

There's another pheno done in about 90 days, don't have too much to comment right now as I'm still trying to figure out if there's anything good in it, but most likely getting the axe.

The last 2 phenos have very similar plant structure and flowering time except one produces much fatter buds. Pheno's #8 and 10 I'm letting them go about 100 days. Has the Haze look and the Haze smell, so far a keeper, will definitely know after a few more harvest.

I got 30 of these seeds. Germination rate was 100%! Plants grow very uniformly, like clones, almost with no visible differences.

Most of them went outdoors but couldn't survive rough conditions in past few years. I harvested only two of them. Other ones were victims to flood, deers and weeds. The lucky ones became dark purple, almost black. All the time they were growing straight up, almost without branching.

I was growing other two indoors, under low-budget fluoro lighting. Both of them showed out as females. Under fluoros they branched as hell, I didn't prune them at all.

The yield wasn't great but with this setup and my lack of experience (my first indoor) I can call it satisfactory. I dried it quickly so I'm not describing taste here, as I couldn't feel it's full potential.

High was one of best I ever had. Very energetic, uplifting, creative, and... total absence of any paranoia! That surprised me a lot 'cause I was very paranoid and somehow depressed then. This weed is the best choice either for first-timers or for regular smokers for daily use. Definitely, Skunk#1 is a MUST-TRY for every grower.

Whilst in Amsterdam I stopped by "HomeGrown Fantaseeds" :) .. Great smoke available there in their cafe, and also their seed shop around the corner from which I bought a pack of their MANGO strain.

"Mango" is said to be a Stabilized Hybrid (100% Indica crossbreed x H#1 KC33 x Afghani), a 55-60 day mature. I really liked the look of this strain. I hadn't, as of yet, grown a pure Indica cross. Also this is said to be HomeGrown's fruitiest strain available and was priced very reasonably for what I'm expecting from the plant.

They have fantastic form, its definitely living up to the beautiful plant hype I read about in the Strain Guide. I LOVE this plant. Pinkie hues on stems and stalks with Downey white hairs. Gorgeous fruity smell under the lamps is a great welcome to the grow room even before flowering.

Whilst in the vegetation cycle this strain grew hard and fast. The growth was dark green and very healthy, with a subtle fruity aroma. It also responded well to the regular nutrient dose I gave to them with every watering.

The first pheno was trained for a SOG grow, as the heavy indica characteristics were just screaming out for a 6 branch equal height technique. I was expecting 6 tight colas from this plant, and that's exactly what I got. The second pheno had its 4 lower branches tied down low to the rim of the container and its top was left in tacked to see the effect of the single cola with lower side branches.

The other report for Mango in the strain guide gave a really bad overview of this strain and I've got to say I totally disagree with him. I've found this plant and its breeder to give a quality strain with great potential for crossing with another strain, and it also stands well alone.

The plants are the most beautiful I've ever grown, there superb. The amount of trichome cover was amazing. The entire plant was covered in sparkle within a few weeks of subjecting the plants to a 12/12 light cycle. By the end of flowering the trichome concentrations were the best I've ever seen. Even the large fan leaves were covered in trichomes half way up and on both sides of the leaf. A great plant for fruity hash making. And the aroma as the plant developed became more and more sweet and fruity as time past.

As for the smoke :) . Hmmmmmm sweeeeeeeet.

Grinding up the dense bud produces a thick and potent smell of that sharp fruit trait. With a moist texture it's great to roll with. Lighting up with this gear for the first time was an experience to say the least. Very smooth smoke, one of the easiest to take that I've come across in a long time. It tastes exactly like it smells, sharp on the pallet and lung expanding on the inhale. Breathing out gives a mouthful of spice and fruit, this lingers on the tongue for a nice aftertaste. As for the high, wow, it's really something. It hits within a few minutes from sparking the joint giving an instant full body tingle. Feels like an intense adrenalin buzz. Then comes the head hit. That's what knocks you off your feet and sends you into a head high buzz. Its very strong, im writing this whilst commenting on the smoke effect and im having real trouble finishing this report. A top class smoke and a fine high very well balanced between body and mind. Excellent to meditate to and for sleeping, definitely an evening smoke.

Mango is unquestionably a keeper in my opinion.

Peace

And now. ...after a 10month cure and maturation period the smoke is AMAZING. I been away for 6 months and have had the chance to leave it be. The smoke is think sweet and super smooth. Whilst the smoke hits your lungs and raises that inner vibration the sticky mango favour swirls around your palet. Ummm, its a good feeling. .. time really does heal. This sample is superb.

Sad to report that I was disappointed with this race... Being a great fan of fruit flavors I was excited to read that Mango was renowned for its quick growth and fruity flavor... Well it was one out of two...

I started 4 seeds from sacred original packaging and 3 germinated. 2 out of 3 were females, but they were different phenos: one lanky plant and one stocky... Vegetation went quickly: 35 days or so at the end of which I had one 4 ft. and one almost 6ft. tall plant...

The taller plant did not finish well at all despite its growth characteristics. It flowered very quickly (both plants finished flowering in 40-45 days!) and yielded barely 75 grams of trimmed, but slightly hermaphrodite buds. Her sister however fared much better. She was stout and her buds filled in thickly with some of the tightest colas I've seen in a while (excluding perhaps some Blue Heaven I am currently working on).

The buds before drying and curing had a fruity and spicy odor (although it should also be added she was sharing her space with 2 monster Ravens Bubble Berry plants), which provoked me to salivate in anticipation, as I harvested a good 200 grams dried...

The flavor of the smoke however left me somewhat disappointed: very spicy, reminding me of certain Gray or Silver Hazes. Not unpleasant but definitely not fruity.

The effects are strong and physical. A heavy indica effect tiring and relaxing. Very good for menstrual cramps or muscular tension. Not very heady and has a tendency to make me tired, which considering that I smoke a lot (5-6 mixed j's a day), is not always what I seek. So definitely a nighttime smokeable. I apologize for format as this my first report, and I have just bought my first digital camera. So this is only the second harvest I could document.

I hope to be able to share more interesting reports in seasons to come.

Has a 56 day flowering time, shows preflowers at around 6 weeks. Good germination rates, though the original F1 seeds were quite tiny.

Aroma is very fruity, like juicy fruit gum. The smell is about a 2 while in the veg stage, and about 5 when in flowering. Most of the smell picks up while drying after harvest.

The high is mainly couchlock, a 7 to 8 on potency. It takes a few minutes to really kick in, but once it does, it's there to stay for hours, a very long lasting stone. It has some good euphoric qualities to it, and it's a great stone to watch movies on. But it is a creeper sort of stone. A great smoke for evenings to unwind with.

The flavor is very sweet, with a little hash taste to it, that kind where you have to keep licking your lips, cause it's that good. It also has a good amount of frosty buds, that just glisten all over. Some pistils turn a purple color, some phenos the pistils turned a brownish red. Bulk picks up in the last 2 weeks, so be patient and she'll reward you greatly. If the temps are cool while flowering, the fan leaves will turn different shades, very beautiful.

It had an average stretch when flowering was induced, about half its size. It is a bushy plant, with good side branching, but flower early if you like a more columnar plant, it does great both ways. Cloning is also easy, most show roots within 1 week. One of the best all around plants I have. I would give it a higher overall rating, but the hermaphrodite tendency when there is any kind of light leak, kept it at 7. I just had one plant from the original seeds that had a few bananas, but also had the best stone of them all, go figure.

Ah my friends... Misty was a blessing 'round here. I have been searching for a GREAT all around plant in terms of yield and potency and ease of growth for more years than I care to remember. The beans were acquired through CIA from Homegrown Fantaseeds and I have been working with them for a year and a half. She's a beauty! Easy grow, easy clone, no variations with typical x-mas tree growth (that can be pruned and/or manipulated to your advantage), a hardy grower that's also quite mite resistant. Best of all she yields excellent, frosty, aromatic buds that will even please your local expert.

These girls were organically grown.

Grow Method: All flowering plants are from clone. They are rooted in flats utilizing Rapid Rooter plugs. They are then transplanted to 20 oz styrofoam cups (10-14 days). They stay under flores until they reach 6-10 inches. They are then transplanted to 2 gallon nursery containers and vegged in the show room under 2200 watts of Metal Halide for another 7-10 days. The girls are roughly 15-18 inches when flipped to flower.

Tips: Prune this girl throughout the first three weeks of flower. I generally leave the meristem and 5-6 branches. If not, she will get branchy and bud size will suffer... (not to mention the pain in the arse it is to trim all that little sh#t). She won't let ya down! Her energies will blow up the cola and remaining branches. She loves nutes and can tolerate high doses.

Plant size: Using the method above the plants finish at around 30 inches and yield (ave) 40 grams. I run forty girls at a time in flower and have gotten identical results all three grows.

YIELD total dry weight 1500-1600grams

Being a "cropper", Misty has it all! Nice firm, frosty buds. A smell that leaves no one guessing. A flavor that the discerning will appreciate. A yield to die for and she's easy...

Homegrown sent me 10 Misty seeds which all 10 sprouted. I put them in 10 liter pots. I vegged them for 4 weeks and then I put the clock at 12/12 and 6 of them turned out to be female and only one was a bit male-female but not that much (like 85% female and 15% male), so I decided to let her finish!! Already after 4 weeks of flowering I could see that this is going to be a BIG harvest as I had very HUGE cola's. So after 9 weeks I chopped them and came out with 1000 grams (2.2 pounds) of perfect quality weed, and the hermi type turned out to be the biggest yielder with 140 grams(5 ounces) and the smallest yielder was around 80(3 ounces) grams.

The plant that is shown the most on the pics yielded 135 grams (4.750 ounces)

For all of those who want to have a strain that has the highest possible yield and buds fully covered with crystals , well then this is it! Over the years I've have grown so many strains and Misty is one of my favorites.

I started her up indoors for the first few weeks, then put her outside late August in Hawaii. I was concerned that this 100% Indica wouldn't be able to take too much direct sunlight, but boy was I wrong! This Indica can take the heat!

She was flowered at the commencement of 12/12 out here, which is Sept. 21. She was the strongest plant I grew that fall, took the heat, the wind, and most importantly, the pests. Other plants around her were stricken with mite problems, but she was not bothered by them in the least! This is a sturdy, well branching plant, that will yield quite well for its size. Out here in Hawaii she was done in 45 days, indoors she will quite likely go another week or so.

I loved growing and smoking this strain, very easy to grow, and the results are excellent. A nice flavor for a full on Indica, and excellent medicine for pain relief, in my case back pain from degenerative discs... Did the trick!

I started six seeds from hygro and all six germed.

From those 6, three were female, i kept one as a mom.

Plant growth was vigorous and sex showed within a week of 12/12. Plants produced fairly dense very crystallly buds. Strain seems to require slightly more ferters than the other strains i grow. Mighty Mite x 1947 has autoflower capabilities for sure. To keep a mom, i find it necessary to replace the mom with a new clone every two months, as the old mom goes into flower even under a 24/0 light regime. I grow in a mini SOG. I take clones, root them for two weeks, then veg for another two and then they are packed into my flower chamber. In my mini method the plants yield a very respectable half to a zee a plant which is pretty consistant with my other strains.

Bag appeal is pretty good, nice buds with the hairs not quite purple but maybe scarlet, definately not the usual red hair color. Fairly dense nugs with a smell and taste that is hard to describe. Taste is kinda earthy with a metallic undertaste but pleasant on the palatte. Not overwhelmingly potent, but has a very nice creeper type buzz. Way better than the commercial that floats around here (which isn't all that bad by the way). I had ordered these seeds as a personal test of getting seeds by mail, i did not want to risk alot of money and these seeds fit the bill for price and description. I have to say i was pleasantly surprised by these seeds, very nice plants for the money.

The early bud was potent but lacked flavor that the mature bud did. I think I would take these to 60 days next time. I was also quite happy with the trichome development of this girl. It cloned very quickly (roots in under 10 days) and developed very quickly as well. Germ was 100% and Clones were 100% as well.

I started 6 of my 10 seeds 4 of which turned out female. 3 females were grown in bubbling buckets and 1 in coco coir. 3 of the females were sent to friends although I kept a close watch on them and they all turned out very uniform in result.

My lone female was grown to 2.5 feet in veg during which it grew straight up for the first 3 weeks and then branched out during the last 2 weeks. While flowering the branches continued to reach up and they created a very nice canopy. Growth stopped about 3 weeks into flowering and the plant started to focus on bud production, while slowly allowing the top bud to rise.

Buds seemed to develop rather quickly with minimal leaf and tons of white hairs (red upon maturity) which made manicuring very easy. The top bud grew to about twice the width of my forearm and was about 1.5 feet long when harvested

The buds produce a couchlock effect which knocks you down and picks you up all at the same time leaving you wondering if it's sativa or indica dominant.

Overall some excellent smoke which finishes early and is perfect for someone needing a low odor plant with a commercial yield

March, 2004

This is the first time I have grown this strain. I picked the seeds up from Emery and had really not heard too much about them other than the SAGE strain line and their recommendation.

The seeds all germed and popped quickly. I started them directly into 4.5gallon containers after sprouting in damp paper towels.

I started 6 beans and they all sprouted and ended up with 3 females.

I vegged them for quite a long time - 12 weeks from seed but they grew into some nice little bushes. I also took some clones at about 9 weeks. For some reason not all of the plants showed sex during veg but after taking some clones of the nicest bushes, I found out that one of the mothers was actually a father. I nipped all of the males including the cloned fathers.

Of the 3 females, one was a nice shaped Christmas tree shaped tree while the other two were more bud-stick style - I called them congo buds. No kidding, the colas on the top of these were 20" long and 3 " across !

The two clones of the Christmas tree mother I took turned into mini Christmas trees with a big budstick on top.

I flowered them for 73 days - to perfection with the right combination of clear, cloudy and amber trichs.

My plan was to reveg the Christmas tree after clipping most of the buds off. Unfortunately I killed the mother due to a fan problem when trying to restart it into veg. Oh well, no more of that mother !

I harvested and hung all of the branches and kept each type separate for genetic, taste and potency profiling. In the end, I ended up with 11.2oz of dried and cured bud. This excluded the popcorn bud which was about another 1oz as I put this aside with the bud trimmings for some nice ice hash in the near future (in the freezer for 5 months now and I have not made it !).

The buds are super crystally ! There is so much resin and trichs on the buds that is glues your scissors or your budbuster together. I have given this to a few friends and they cannot believe how sticky this stuff is.

Once you roll a joint you have a hard time letting it go because it sticks to the resin on your fingers!

The taste of this is very smooth and has a nice sweet flavor. This is probably the best tasting smoke I have ever had.

The high is also quite unbelievable. I have smoked a lot of pot before and have somewhat of a tolerance for it - same with a number of my friends who I invited over for the taste testing party. We smoked a reasonable size joint and got real screwed up!

I thought I was fucked up because my legs were going tingly but I was not the only one feeling this. As a matter of fact we had a bit of trouble walking smooth and stable too! The high is quite high cause shortly afterwards we hopped in our cars to go out for dinner and realized how screwed up we all were.

With this high it is not too hard to daydream off looking at things on the side of the road and then realize oh shit I am driving and have to get back onto your side of the road. This is defiantly not something I would smoke then hop in my car and work through busy city traffic.

The high is also very energetic. It is a real lets getup and do something kind of smoke.

I really do not like stuff that burns you out and makes you want to have a nap. I much rather energy stuff.

Overall this is probably one of the top 3 smoke I have every had and I am very cautiously guarding my supply from my friends who keep wanting to dip into it. It has really become a treasure smoke that I keep aside and dip into here and there while my regular diet right now is with White Rhino from Nirvana.

I have 4 more beans left and I would defiantly grow it again. So much so I have thought of picking up another 10 beans for safe keeping.

I can't believe this is the first report for this cross with J.W. seedstock. The potential here is amazing. Ak47 yields with C99 highs, who would pass that up?

I hastily chose a clone from 5 seeds that I picked up via Heaven's Stairway. I know my clone doesn't reflect that best that this cross can be. Yield can be improved. Had I taken my time and found a better clone out of 20 seeds I know the genetics are there to produce some real monsters in the garden. I feel my clone is an average producer for this cross.

Potency is grade A. Better than most weed. However I normally harvested a week before full maturity (harvested at day 50 instead of 56-58). One harvest I ran until it was ready. Trichomes full. It blew everybody by surprise. That last week really adds the punch. So although I rate it as an A, if done right it could get an A+ (A++ is tops).

Flowers are dense and tight and bulbous in nature. Looks amazing in a bag. True nuggets. Yield is significantly improved over C99 F2 (Nirvana). Smell is tamer than AK47. The grow space is not overwhelmed with odor as a true AK grow has the potential to do. Sturdy plant that really an ease to grow. Hardy and resilient to stress. Defiantly performs better than many sativas out there as far as stress is concerned. I manipulated the flowering light cycle on a recent grow as an experiment (out 5 grows with this clone) and the plant did not hermie on 14/10 flowering after day 20 of flowering (It was an experiment, not the normal routine).

I plan on sticking w/ this cross as my commercial plant due to the low key odor. However I will be selecting a better mother plant after this next harvest from 20 to 30 seeds this time. I expect to find a mother that yields 25-35% more than what my garden is currently producing.

It is low in odor having a faint citrus like smell. The mother is Blueberry I obtained from DJ Short via Dutch Passion. The Blueberry mother is a high yielder with the soaring blueberry high and delicious blueberry smell. It gives large buds that are rock solid. Blueberry has been a favorite of many growers for years now and has won many awards. Your mouth will be watering every time you tend your plants. Try to wait until they finish before you sample some, I know it will be hard to wait. The females have blue/purple stems particularly in the seedlings and the leaves or buds also tend to turn a bluish shade at the finish. All and all this stuff turned out really nice. The smoke is good, yield was descent, smell and taste were up to par and it was really crystallly.

I grew only ended up with one female outta two but she was increadibly easy to grow and maintain. Temps varied from low 40's at night (in a grage at night) and up to high 80's during the day with no signs of stress or retained growth.

OVERALL: Grown orcanically with PBP nutrients in 2.5 gallon soil pots under 300 Watts of CFL lighting and vented by a couple of cheap 50cfm bathroom fans. The box was 24"wide 14" thick and 4' tall

VEGGING

I vegged for 40 days from seedling till plant was roughly 9"-10" tall. No problems, slow for the first two weeks, like most seedlings, and then it took off. No training this time around.

FLOWERING: Flowering started on Christmas day and then i had to return to school and they were left in the hands of my G/F. While i was away her house was broken into and the main 18" cola was jacked from me. Luckily we found a new house to move the plants to and were able to finish them up, despite the tradgedy. (And no worries because i found the guy who did it and took care of things)

Anyway, despite its magnificent look and its huge amount of thricomes the taste was a little bland and the high was not very indica dominant at all. In fact it doesnt leave me tired at all when i come down. Its great for the day, or if your doing something important because it doesn't leave you feeling retarded. I would recomend it to someone who wants great results easily, or who is trying to get the hang of growing. Its

C-99 is very well known for being super potent, having a mild citrus aroma and never giving hermies. Apollo 11 has an up happy high with a high calyx to leaf ratio. It, like C99 has a faint lemoney smell. The cross is easy to clone and combines the sativa high from cinderella99 with the happy stone from apollo11. The buds are tight and dense.

This strain is not the easiest to grow, but rewards one's patients greatly. She was grown in soil, and reacted greatly to any changes. She doesn't take a lot of nutrients, and is easy to burn. The plant was nothing special in vegetation. A little leggy. However, about 30 days into flower I could tell she was going to be Nice. The buds came in dense and crystal coated. With very pretty colors late in flower.

The Stone is really nice, comes on strong with the first hit, and fifteen minutes after the session ends you still feel it coming. Very heady, it is very joyful and stimulating, expect to laugh at a lot of things. Great daytime smoke. The taste and aroma say from the beginning 'This is going to get me HIGH!... Spicy on the inhale and Hashy upon exhale, a pleasure to smoke.

I'll keep a mum in my garden for a long time, Quality Weed, indeed.

00nobreederthum.png These are seeds made from Brothers Grimm stock. One of the nice things about this line is it's quite true breeding. You will get 99.9% of what you get from the original.

Cindy is a very easy variety to grow. You will never get a hermy even if you mistreat her. She is cooperative and will show you the gender in the preflowers even in the veg stage. Cindy is easy to clone and will root readily. I've successfully cloned her even from cuttings taken after two weeks of flowering. Cloning is the way to go and after you pick out your favorite female plant use the clone from her to be the clone mother.

Another great thing about this variety is its exceptionally low odor. It has very little smell while it's growing and it smells kind of citrus like or a faint lemon lime scent. If you were worried about stinking up your house or apartment, this will help keep you safe. The high produced is out of this world! I would call it a super up high, the type that makes you want to do things and laugh like a loon. It's spacey and very cerebral. If you want something that will impress your friends this is it.

Grew out one female and was not impressed. She had low resin production and flowered way longer than advertised. Very low odor during flower. She stretched to 3x her height at onset of 12/12. Smoke is smooth without much taste. For those choosing between C99 and A11 I would strongly recommend A11. Granted 1 plant is not enough to judge a strain by. One day when I looked at them, they were totally covered with spider mites, it was so bad that my skin started to crawl from looking at them. So I decided to cut them down.

These were very easy to grow, and they did not stink up my place. It smelled like rotten fruit, not skunky at all.

I discovered 2 phenotypes, one was taller (bigger yeilder), stronger smell (pine apple) and the other one was shorter (less yield) and it didnt smell very much at all. I ended up curing them for over a month the jar method and the taste of the final product is totally amazing, it tasted so sweet. This was my 1st grow and this plant grew very well for me. She was vigorous and branchy which made for an excellent scrog.

started 3 seeds 100% germ rate

one died after a week when a light fell - started another seed

vegged 21 days in 6" RW cubes with top feed - then after 2 weeks of 12/12 sex was determined two girls were left one was a week behind - the seedling and she got tossed - so one female left was fitted with DWC bucket and super simple scrog.

Clones were taken with just tap water at week 2 of flower with 100% rooting after 14 days.. so I'd say she clones easily.

she grew kind of branchy and in flower definitely had a sativa dominant appearance - the c99 really shines through on this pheno.

she was not a heavy feeder - I tried 1050 ppm in flower and she didn't do well - 700-800ppm seemed to produce optimal growth.

On the advice of Joey Weed and some other helpful folks I waited until 80% of the hairs were red and the crystals had started to show amber, and flowering lasted for 63 days total 12/12

From what I've heard this strain should finish quicker but I think my lack of veg time extended flower time a little - I plan on growing out a clone of the same strain to see if she finishes earlier.

But I was glad I let her go the extra time as she really packed on the weight in the last two weeks - it was like she stretched just a little more between the bud leaves and then just filled in. In late flower she produced little bud spikes off of the colas that are really sweet.

This is very good stealth strain as it doesn't really smell at all even in the late weeks of flower.

Since she had lots of little bud leaves there was quite a bit of trimming to be done.

Final yield was around 44 grams + some excellent kief/hash

I grew 2 plants under a 150 HPS and they both yielded around the same for a total of 3 oz.

The buds after one week of drying and one week of cure don't have a very strong taste - light and kind of peppery some tropical fruit flavors (pineapple) on the exhale - Hopefully she'll be more flavorful after a good cure.

After 4 weeks of curing the citrus aromas are stronger and the flavor is getting better. I just got a vaporizer and this weed is really tasty when vaporized - lemon and lime with a hashy herbal undertone.

Appearance wise she's a beauty with glistening glittering crystals just like c99 - Lots of red hairs and small bud leaves give a fluffy sativa like appearance but the buds are still very dense inside. It's these inner bracts and bud spikes that are just completely glistening and silver/white with crystals.

Unfortunately she appears to have hermied a little and produced a very few tiny immature seeds in the lower older buds

The high is very strong, but kind of creeper - you really don't realize how high you are for the first ten minutes and then it's like "damn I'm high" and it keeps building - it will be a half hour after you smoke and you still feel like your getting high - easy to overdo it - after the first 1/2 hour it's pretty stable and long lasting... very visual - in a clear way - juxtapositions of things at different depths in the long light of late afternoon produce strange effects... trippy, for weed - very speedy too - hard to stay seated - definitely not a couch lock strain

The keif got pressed into a nice tan hash - it has a devastating buzz, not a day ender but a day bender.

I saw these on Doc Chronic's webiste and I just had to try them.

5 of 5 germed, although one of the plants had some whorled phyllotaxy and never really got going right. Two of the plants had individual pots, and three were grown in a window planter. The main lighting was a 70 watt HPS, and there was also about 40 watts of compact fluorescents.

They grew to about 12" and stopped. It was really interesting. I grew them under 24/0 and they began showing flowers around week 3. The buds gradually got larger, and packed on mass at an even rate until about week 7. I chopped at the beginning of week 8 (from seed) after inspecting the trichomes and finding all cloudly with some amber.

This round was strictly for producing seed, so I kept the best male and only female. I collected pollen in a film canister and dropped it onto the female with a Q-tip. I got about 125 seeds. I also got somewhere between 10 and 14 grams of bud; however, I don't know the exact amount because I don't keep a scale.

The smoke wasn't terribly potent, but I found the high to be quite enjoyable. It had some body effects, but the highlight was the trippy, dreamy state it induced. I had to smoke a little more than other strains to get there, but smoking is fun and it was well worth the (cough) effort.

I enjoyed the experience of growing Lowryder. Don't go in expecting ultra-danky nuggets and you won't be disappointed. I feel that Lowryder would probably maximize the result for people forced to grow in extremely small spaces. It has advantages, like not needing separate veg and flower areas. It also has disadvantages, like having to go from seed everytime. I probably will be giving my seeds to friends with less space than I have and concentrating on other plants. I don't feel disappointed, it was something really unique. However, now that I have seen it, well... unless I get stuck growing in a computer case or something, Lowryder won't be in my rotation.

I was taken by the initial hype so I acquired 120 seeds from 3 sources all originating from the joint doctor. The only things I like about this strain is that it was consistent in stature and bud structure and that there was 100% autoflowering. Other than that I was disappointed, it was low potency and has a huge mold susceptibility. Some had a pleasant fruity aroma but most were dry like a typical rudy. We made hash from it which I did not really like the taste of it nor did it get me high. I think we'll see some better results from Lowryder hybrids.

Grower Report

June, 2004

Grown outdoors/greenhouse June 2004 south UK. No supplemental lighting. Plants can be started at almost any time of year and will be ready to harvest from 60 days after. Some do seem to take longer than others but you can expect more uniformity in finishing times when grown indoors. Of course an outdoor date is pointless as you could feasibly grow many harvests every year of Lowryder.

Germination was totally normal, but as soon as the seedlings pop the surface, you can tell they are miniature marijuana plants.

Indeed (as it says on the tin) they start to flower almost immediately, they are incredibly easy to grow (hence the ease rating of 10) but when harvested, they yield very little (yield rating 1) but this is no bad thing because MANY plants can be grown in a very small space and so an intelligent grower could probably yield more bud per sq ft using Lowryder than they could using a regular strain. (seed quantity permitting) They yield approximately a quarter oz per plant but with the correct ferts, higher wattage lights etc, you could increase this.

The appearance is also very pleasing! Seeing a group of very small flowering marijuana plants brings great gasps of "ooohs" and "aaahs" from friendly onlookers. The small size also makes it very easy to trim.

The smoke although not overly potent was still of acceptable quality...it does smell very nice also whilst being burnt.

I will continue to grow lowryder and to make Lowryder crosses (crosses tend to be larger and yield more and of better smoke quality depending on the other parent used) I can recommend Lowryder to anyone who either doesn't have much room, wants to grow a lot in a small space or anyone who wants to make an autoflowering cross!

I grew these babies out this summer and have to say, they were very easy to grow. I germed five of them and had three resulting females in the following phenotypes: average indica (squat with broad leaves), a mutant (undescribable leaf pattern/shape/size) and a sativa/indica hybrid. I mixed up the germination process for a few and all worked in the same time period (showed 1" tap roots within 36hrs); heated germination dome, paper towel and direct planting into soil.

Autoflowering plants are not for everyone but do offer something for those in need of medical marijuana in a short time period and/or those who do not have a large grow space.

Since you do not know whether a plant will autoflower or not before flowering, you treat it just like a normal MJ plant. I used about 200W of tubular and compact fluoros for "veggig." All three showed pre-flowers by the third node (week three) and were transferred into the flowering room; consisting of 400W HPS. They flowered for another 5 weeks and were cut between days 59-63 (total time, not flower time).

Total yield was about 1oz of cured bud. Obviously, this is not a very "efficient" plant, but optimal yield is not reason to choose this strain, now is it?

Overall, it was an average grow with great results. I was impressed.

Well I grew out two pure Lowryders, both seemed to be of the small pheno group, the taller one was no more than 9 inches tall, and the other was about 6 inches tall. I also had one LR/Master Kush x LR that was also very small, about 5 inches tall.

All three plants had decent amount of triches, the LR/MK x LR had noticeably more than the pure LRs. All plants branched out rather than one main cola. Plants finished at 46 days from sprouting, so they do grow very fast.

I liked the plants, they looked nice, and the manicured buds looked very tasty. After drying and curing the buds they proved to be a decent smoke, not the best that I have grown/smoked, but not the worst either. The high seemed to be primarily a head high.

Overall the yield was slightly lower then I had thought I would have had. I used CFs for the entire grow I had 344 true watts, 8 bulbs at 2700 (x6) & 2900 (x2) lumens a piece. The dry weight of all three plants was no more then 5 grams, actually it was about 4.5 when I weighed them out. I used a very little amount of plant food as they were grown mostly natural.

I think the strain will only get better in the future, yet I still think it needs more work at this time. 12/2004

This variety is a lot of fun to grow. I started with 10 seeds and had 9/10 germinate. Seven survived to grow into 5 females and 2 males. The males started showing preflowers at day 17 and the females were evident by 21 days from seed. I had some difficulties with waterlogged soil and cool temps at the start. Growth was rather slow at first but always vigorous. At 4 weeks pollination was starting to happen. I selected one male as the best and let those babys breed.

Having a healthy supply of seed to grow Lowryder is a must. The plants did not grow any taller after about week 4. Heights ranged from 3-10 inches. Flowering came full on quickly and my females divided into two phenos. One was the tallest with longer internodes and well spaced bud clusters. The other 4 females were shorter with very short internodes and the entire stem covered in developing buds with a few leaves poking out between. By 50 days the buds had swollen nicely and the entire buds and many of the leaves were glazed with a nice coating of trichomes. A beautiful but not overpowering fruity odour came from the plants.

The seeds matured nicely in the last two weeks and by 63 days brown seeds were seen peeking out of swollen calyxes. Fan leaves were lightening and turning yellowish. Trichomes were abundant and milky. I harvested and after manicuring and drying, I ended up with 36 grams of nice bud. An average of 1/4 oz. per plant. I think my yields will get better with the next crop and for the size the plants were I am very happy.

I really enjoy smoking Lowryder. The high has a nice up effect that is quite easy to enjoy during the day, despite being an indica dominant strain. It comes on just as quickly as any other strain I smoke. I also smoke NL # 5 at the moment, and Lowryder is just as good in it own right, I think. As far as Lowryder being a bunkweed strain, forget it. With all the autoflowering and size advantages Lowryder is a plant I will continue to grow and breed over and over.

This strain was extremely easy to grow out. It was my first run in my cabinet.

I germed all 10 seeds, all 10 popped. In the end I ended up with five males/five females.

I threw out three of the males and kept two for pollen collection.

Of the females I had three that grew out as single cola dominant plants and two that grew out to be around 7 inches tall.

They were all very easy to grow. No special requirements at all.

I pollinated some lower portions of all three single cola dom females.

They went for a total of 63 days from seed to harvest. I will be running some of these outdoors this year for sure.

The plants ended up giving me a ton of seed, so look out for an outdoor report at the end of the 2005 season.

Overall I was very pleased with this plant. It was a great plant to learn from, and showed no other deficiencies other than Mg after flowering and slight K in late flowering.

I started with seven beans - 100% germination and 5/7 females. Great ratio from the doc!

Things went well pretty much the whole time - I switched from a 95w enviro light to 150w hps about 20 days into flowering, which really made a big difference. I was able to get the tops of the plants within 4 inches of the bulb with no negative effects.

I tried FIMing one of the plants, and it worked fairly well. The trimmed plant still in the soil (pic to left) is the FIMmed female. She is drying, and I will come back with a final weight report once everything is dried and cured.

Smoke is very dankish and earthy, perhaps because I fertilized with Neptune's Organic Fish Fertilizer (2-4-1) throughout. Seemed to work well except next time I will use a kelp solution in conjunction with that since K was at a shortage.

I didn't know what to expect coming into this grow, I was sceptical about an auto flowering midget, but I have to say that I'm impressed now. I got a pack of Joint Doctors Lowryder and germinated three of them. All three sprouted within three days, and were placed into starter plugs and put under a humidity dome with 70 watts of compact flouro over them.

Within a week they were rooted in the plugs and showed there first set of true leaves. After that, they were placed into net cups and into a 10-gallon hydro bubbler and High Grades 3-part GH nute recipe under a 150 watt HPS. Growth was fast and immediate! Within the first two weeks in the bubbler I could tell the sex, only one female but that ok for me.

That one female grew up to over 1 1/2 feet by the time it was starting to show buds. By the end it had massive buds and was at just about 2 1/2 feet! I changed the hydro water twice and flushed it with plain water for the last week of growth. Easiest grow I've ever had, very quickly, no problems at all. Dried weight of trimmed bud was 2.3 ounces from that one plant! The taste is very unique; I've never tried anything like it before. All my friends loved it and can't wait to I grow it again.

Bahia Black Head, a KC Brains Strain which contains Thai, Brazilian and KC606 mix. I was wondering where they got the name, but now have a complete understanding.

First, Bahia - In my research I found that there is a state in Brazil called Bahia. There are also wildflowers and grass named Bahia from this same region. These plants are strong and plentiful in Florida.

Black Head - Upon completion of flowering the buds of this plant begin to form what could only be described as little "black heads".

The Thai and Brazilian mix make Bahia Black Head a great indoor and outdoor plant. Producing over 150 grams per plant after topping at the 5th node. The average main cola was 14" long and 10" around. What I like to call my mini base ball bats!

My research on the KC606 didn't come up with much. I heard that KC Brains mixed a power plant and some superstrain of their own design to make KC606. I guess it's there little secret, but let me tell ya that they make these plants taste GOOD!

I used BOG soil mix which includes 1/3 perlite, self fert soil, 1 cup of bone and blood meal per cubic ft. of soil. Then FoxFarms organic ferts throughout flowering.

The flowering time was the hardest thing to deal with, taking 113 days to complete. Let me just say, well worth the wait!

Overall a great strain if you have the time, BIG Producer and great medical benefits. My back pain is non existent, and my ensomnia problems are problems no more!

This is defiantly a 1 hit wonder. Even for the most experienced smokers will find this smoke to hit the spot. Defiantly a physical/body buzz. The high leaves you stoney, but the taste keeps you going back for more.

June, 2003

The Brazil X KC was very easy to grow. I had to play with the height of the light in order to keep it from becoming too tall, it seems to want to be a tall lanky plant. I germinated 4 seeds straight in the soil under the light and had sprouts within 18-29hrs.

Vegged for about 20 days. I use common Miracle Grow nutes in potting soil, 2-3 apps of 30-10-10 in veg, and silicone was used each time. I had three females and one male, killed off one female for space as I grow other strains in the same room, and kept the male out under a skylight to breed with, then killed him later for butter with the first girl.

Flowering took about 52 days for one and 60 days for the other, though I probably could have let the last go another week or so. I fed them a much diluted MG of 15-30-15 twice, and gave silicone those times as well as 3 more times with just water (and hydrogen peroxide was used on occasion for system hygiene/ further health etc.).

Out of the two girls I got two completely different plants with different smells and flavors. You could just barely tell they were related. One grew very orange/red buds, the other had mostly white hairs until the very end where they all went orange quickly with the development of the trichomes, I harvested by 25% amber, 50% cloudy, the rest clear.

Though all this sounds well enough, the one that was finished early went quite hermie. I've only ever had 3 hermies in my grow career and never as bad as this one wanted to go, bananas all over. I took that as a sign she was done early, the trichs looked okay so I cut her down. The other had a few bananas as well by her chop. Now this can happen on plants when they hint they are close to being finished and haven't been pollinated as a last ditch effort... but according to KC Brains these ladies have a 9-12 week photoperiod which certainly was not the case. The other 4 plants in the room were quite unaffected by this and had seeds only in the two spots per plant I'd bred them

Growers Preference: I will not be growing this strain again. The flavor was not appealing to me, very rustic something more age-old tokers appreciate but I'm not quite in that era. And I have much more potent and better tasting strains that could have been filling those spaces. I will be handing off many of the seeds to MS patients and others who have chronic pain (here's to you ma) as this seemed to help 3 of the 5 who tried it greatly, the other two noticed some helpful numbing as well as slightly renewed appetite.

The high was a little over average I'd say, quite a bit of body stone with a mild head numbing buzz, makes you sort of racy for a moment or two then relaxes. Lasts for maybe 2-4 hours, depending on your tolerance. I was coming down a little speedy at about 1.5hrs into it, but most of my street smoker friends had a good time for a full 3-4, and came down slowly for about an hour or two after.

The first picture shows two plants, the lighter is the Haze; the dark more sativa looking is the Brazil. The next is a group shot of about half the grow space; the males are way in the back. They are probably 27-30 days from seed at this point. The rest are bud shots from one or both of the phenos, mostly the early chopped.

I'd judge this not by my taste, but the other info I gave, I tried to be as... politically correct if you will about everything so that those who may be looking for this kind of smoke can decide on their own. Worst thing I can say about it is the mild hermie tendency as my experience with hermies near doubled just by the appearance of those two girls.

Good luck and happy growing! ~WK~

The Crystal Paradise was a nice surprise, it very much out did any expectations I had for it. She's a very strong smelling and spicy, hashy potent girl. This is one of two plants I started only as filler for my room if I needed any extra fems, they both were fem but turned out I only needed one so I took the smelliest one with the most vigor. She was only vegged for 2 weeks (also I did not bother to top), I planted the two about 1.5 weeks after I started the rest of my room and I flowered them all together when the others were almost 4wks, avg. height being 20", the saved Crystal at 14" (set upon a 5" stand to equal out the height dif.) They were fed 30-10-10 Miracle Gro Azalea Rhododendron food during veg supplemented with 18-16-21 (I believe) tomato food, also fed silicone at every other feeding.

The Crystal branches surprisingly well I expected a single cola harvest but ended up with 7, one huge. The 6 were (dry) 5-8grams each and the larger was about 12g and about 11g worth of little buds. During flower they were fed a 15-30-15 during early flower supplemented with a 2-45-28 and then at mid flower I stopped the 15-30-15 due to it's high N content and started feeding only the 2-45-28. Silicone was given every feeding during flower, feeds occurring every other or every three days. She got only water the last 3 weeks and two proper flushings a few days prior to harvest. She took about 49 days of 12/12, roughly 63 days from seed. Expect much higher yeilds with more time and attention during veg, she yeild roughly 61g.

She's a very beautiful plant, light lime green with faded orange haqirs, covered in resin glands. I wish I had more and better pics of her, I might add more photos when I grow it again to do the CP more justice.

The smell defiantly goes to her Cali skunk heritage, most of her qualities do I'd say, not too much Brazil that I can sense. Mostly she's just about everything you'd want in a sticky, stinky dank skunk strain with a few trace musky fruity hints of Brazil. She smells like a skunk ate some dil-garlic and smoked a few OZ's of Afghani hash then died under a house porch.

The taste is so spicy and pungent, fuelish dank skunk with hints of pine. It expands in your lungs almost immediately and exhales in a smooth, spicy, delicate cloud that leaves the flavor of herby skunk all over your mouth. With the smell and that knowledge you crave that first hit, then the experience of that first makes you crave the next even more.

The potency is there, somewhat creeper you think you get slammed in the first few puffs, you can tell it's strong stuff right off, but by the time the bong pack (or the first few packs) are just about smoked you begin to feel it rolling in like a fast, strong and heavy oncoming tide and it hits you in the head then down your whole body and you're down for the count. Not the kind of weed you smoke when you want to accomplish something that's for sure, it's to kick back and completely relax and comfort your body and muscles after a long days work or play, while still giving a bit of a trippy quality to the heady end of the high.

All in all it's great stuff, I plan on growing it again in my next garden and I recommend it to any grower, new or old alike for it's ease and complexity of taste, smoke and potency.

KC did a really good job with this plant. My ratings are very critical.

It is a Neville's Haze crossed with a KC-606. I have grown Greenhouse Neville's Haze and they were resin bombs, slim, long buds that resembled pine cones and covered in silver resin... The Neville's Haze is reputed to be one of the trippiest sativas around... KC crossed the Neville's Haze with a 606 for increased bud size, yield and shorter flowering time, they are quick to finish!

I grew Haze Special last year and had a plant that produced more resin than this one and bigger buds... I was not overly impressed with the resin production on this one. I cloned it and they seem to do better under Metal Halide than HPS, as the plants under the MH lamp have more trichomes and healthier looking foilage.

I used General Hydroponics Flora series for most of the grow... I used 1/4 strength nutes in the last 3 weeks. This made the plant take on light green buds... which I like.

I grew this plant to 5'! Tt branches like crazy but the buds were pretty small, lots of them but small "quarter sized" nuggets. I call them popcorn buds. Nevertheless, they still pack a punch.

I had no problems with smell or growing these plants. They grow very well with low nutrients. The only problem I see with the seedline is the germination rates, the seeds don't tend to germinate very fast and the germ rates were pretty low; out of 10 seeds I got 3 plants, 2 of which were male and 1 was female. I recommend you start at least 30 seeds of this strain to get some good individuals to select from.

The smoke is high class, it's very heady and thought-provoking; alert and smiley/happy. The duration of the high is very impressive.

[Update: Oct. 14th 03] Taste Of Haze Special Revealed!

I grew this stuff last year as mentioned above, I had a different pheno. I took it to some parties and people told me they thought it tasted like peanut butter... Personally I thought some of last years crop tasted like chinese chicken balls at times, but this year we smoked it again in a joint with a bunch of people and they said it smelled just like peanut butter! I was like, "hell, it kinda does" but here's the kicker... I purchased a Vapir vaporizer as a health investment (www.air-2.com) these things are crazy... It totally eliminates all the bad smoke taste (there is no smoke!) and only vaporizes the active ingredients and plant aromas... Well low and behold! These buds taste like peanut butter! It's very apparent in the vape.

I prefer to vaporize now, I smoked a J last night and coughed up a lung, lol... You don't cough with this guys, the high is more of a creeper but it is real heady and alot clearer.

Grower Report

December, 2001

Seeds were a bit of a slow starter, they all did pop, lost one between the diaper and the soil. Some of these babies started moving right along and some of them acted like a failure to thrive! One was like a microscopic but perfectly formed plant. I thought I was going to have to trash it. So, minorly disgusted, I moved them all to the greenhouse and they took off like a shot, all of them, very quick. All the plants looked just like one another, no major differences. Tall and skinny and delicate slender leaves/fingers. They all had to be tied down, they all showed sex fast, but were a little slow in early flower.

Three males, one shorter guy in full bloom before I caught him, but no seeds. I took one clone and let her flower with the rest. The clone took, just stuck it in some soil. So I had seven girls. The failure to thrive plant grew to be very tall, but she did not produce as much. This strain is not a big producer.

I had the big main colas and many smaller flowers on the side branches. A tiny popcorn bud does pack a punch, even the leaves around the bud are very nice, and they taste good too. The flowers themselves have that Sativa, not so great, turpentine/pine/sharp - pinch your nose! Well, I like it, because I know it's all good, but it's not the most delicious pot. Three or four hits from a glass pipe and you are good for four hours or so. More than that, you get nothing much done, and you may need a nap. Just a little bit and you can get more accomplished, including that which you may find intolerable otherwise. It took me a while to get used to this smoke. I am used to it now, and it's a good Sativa, hits you in the head, never boring, and no paranoia. I went slow to start to get used to it.

If I did not need a giant yield, I would be growing this again.

Grower Report

August, 2003

This was a great strain to grow. I'd ordered my seeds before seeing the reports from fellow growers here so I was a little nervous at first what with the descriptions of peanut butter taste and all, but I must have got a completely different batch of seeds.

I germinated the seeds directly in the soil, plain old MG potting soil, and had sprouts within 18-30hrs of planting. At a week or two I began a light feeding schedule of 30-10-10 Miracle Grow nutes, fed them 3-4 times in veg, soluble silica was used each time. Switched to 12/12 at approx. 30 days, after separating the 1 male from 3 seeds leaving me with two nice bushy, but tall, ladies.

I fed them a mixture of 15-30-15, and 18-18-21 MG nutes at varying times throughout flowering, perhaps 4-5 feeds, still using the silica. The flowering cycle lasted approx. 58 days though they could have safely been left on the plant for another week or more. Currently re-vegged the lot and am 2+ weeks into flowering again. I harvest by trichome color, 40% milky, 30% amber, the rest clear-to-lightly milky. Before harvest I gave them a few days in the dark and cold, turned some of the buds and leaves a nice purple color and increased the final resin production. Had no real problems whatsoever the whole grow.

I was not impressed with the growth during the veg stage, seemed sluggish and I didn't really approve of the growth pattern. I thought I got what I paid for, cheap beans. But it's the flowers that count, for me at least, and I was in for a surprise at the great flowering stage. Each plant had at least 5 large buds that turned into half oz buds after drying, with many more medium and small buds. They look spectacular in flower I can tell you. I wish I had more and better pics to show, but am lucky to have the ones I do, bought a better camera in the middle of the flowering so you can tell I was getting used to using it.

I waited until about day 20 of flower to screen them, it was a do it before it's too late thing at that point, the buds were just big enough to make squeezing them through the screen a pain in the butt. The yield was very good for the amount of time I'd taken with them.

Med users do enjoy the Haze Special, seems good for both body and head pain but can cause some emotional discomfort (paranoia, nervousness) when too much is smoked by the low to average smoker. Is a bit of a creeper so these accidental over-smokes happen.

Stone: you can tell it's Haze for sure, it's a creeper and takes about a half hour after smoking to fully kick in, longer sometimes. But you know it when it does. Keeps you stuck to the ground, great body and head feeling. The taste is extremely pleasant, making you continuously want to come back for more (think the breeders description may even say the same! if so I agree fully). Curing makes it that much better, after a month cure I was in heaven.

Overall I have to say that this was a pleasant surprise to grow and I am keeping this strain and breeding it with my ultra potent mother Widow as we speak.

The photos sometimes get rearranged or reversed when they put it up, found that out the last time I reported so I'll just tell you the youngest pic you see is 25days of 12/12 (should be able to see the pic title). Hope you enjoy, happy growing! ~WK~

This variety carries the name of the Hindu Goddess Kali, a tantric partner of the ganja smoking God Shiva. With Kalichakra we offer a hardy, potent sativa hybrid with a good yield. 5/5 germinated - 1 female.

I vegged for a month and tried LST (first attempt so could've been better).

I took clones and kept a motherplant - it wasn't hard to clone.

One of the Kalichakras that was a motherplant in veg for 2 months - autoflowered (probably because it was rootbound) so I had to take a flowering clone - this worked out really nice, this is the new motherplant - it hasn't flowered yet and it's on 24/0 just as it's mother was.

I had a mite infestation but Kalichakra was very resistant, not until mid-flowering did the mites get a grip. The flowering period was long and the plant sort of started to die when the thrives were 30% amber so I chopped it then.

I had some N-def early in bloom, could be I was a bit to careful with the nutes.

The buds were big and fluffy looks great when dried.

Taste is a bit woody and you get a dry mouth, munchies are not to bad - mostly for candy and icecream not food. High is mostly in the head and very nice especially in the summer :)

This strain is a keeper as a sativa dominant strain.

Sadhu from Mandala Seeds

From: Mandala Seeds

Source Description

mandala.jpgSadhu is a combination of a specially adapted landrace male from the himalayan heights and one of our short flowering indica-sativa hybrids. This variety is a homage to the legendary ganja from the Indian high altitude valleys and to the wandering ascetics or sadhus, who keep the tradition of cannabis cultivation and ganja alive. The robust and compact Sadhu is especially suited for indoor gardens where her medium height and shorter flowering period are an important asset. Incognito outdoor cultivation sites benefit from her shorter stature of about 1.6 meters . An area with low humidity levels during the last two weeks of flowering enables highest yields. Some plants are more leafy and, therefore, a bonus for hash enthusiasts. Her aromatic properties lend to a tasty yet mild smoke and the high is exceptionally pleasant.

Sadhu is a perfect strain for SOG situations, grows an impressive main cola and some side branches which all produces respectable flowers. If peeled in the inferior nodes this strain can give superior yields of a nicely resinous and good smelling and tasting weed.

It has dark red pistils which makes it appreciable to the eye, and the cost of the seeds (15 bucks, I had the seed for free to test from a local friend who has a shop..) I had a pack of premium, you can have them also in the deluxe version, which should be better seeds, anyway, the premium pack I got had inside 10 regular and mature seeds.

The plants were uniform enough, and sure there are many interesting phenos to look for a SOG with this strain.

I inherited some KC-36 seeds from a friend, knowing very little about the strain. I knew it was very hybridized, extremely unstable, but plants that made it to maturity tended to be very vigorous, with high quality buds.

Six seeds were planted, all germinated rather quickly. In vegging, all looked quite similar... Pretty generic indica/sativa hybrid in all ways. None of the plants were especially finicky as far as feeding went, and growth was fairly rapid and vigorous. Cloning, however, was quite difficult.

As plants reached maturity, their appearance started to diverge. Half looked very sativa, while others looked more like indicas. As things progressed more, five of them started to look fairly sickly. The remaining one, an indica-dominant, didn't change. I kept them all until they showed signs of sex, the healthy indica-dominant was female, as was one sativa-dominant. The sativa-dominant one died before flowering was initiated.

So I was left with one indica-dominant female, which was repotted into a 5-gal bucket. And then, for some reason, the number of fingers on the leaves started to decrease as vegging continued, from seven, to five, to four, three, two, and finally, all of the fan leaves were single-lobed, very deep green, and huge. Probably about 25-30 cm in length, and around 4 cm wide. Additionally, on 20 hours of light a day, it started shooting out stigmae, and covering leaves in trichomes. Definitely freaky looking, but also very promising.

When I flipped it over to 12/12, it seemed to trigger one last growth spurt, which resulted in a good amount of stretching, but also heavy branching throughout. Tons of new budsites, but it also started flowering quite rapidly.

Feeding in flowering required nothing special, just Schultz flowering formula, with some Epsom salts supplemented. Buds were quite dense, but not especially chunky. Sativa-like buds. But, as the budsites were innumerable, the yeild was surprisingly good. By 45 days, it was pretty much ripe, and I gave it the chop. Buds were quite dense, good calyx-to-leaf ratio, and covered in trichomes.

Additional note: the smell during flowering was fairly noticeable, but not very "herby". It's best described as "pine-sol".

Taste was like smell, piney, but fairly sweet. The high was simply delightful, however. A very "up" high, productive and fun. It certainly stuck a smile on my face. Not overwhelmingly potent, but definitely excellent smoke, and quite smooth to boot.

I certainly thought it was a good plant, and if you get one plant like mine in a pack of ten seeds, you'll certainly like it, too. It'll be in my mum collection for quite some time.

I germed 10/10 and got six females, three distinct phenotypes:

1. Extremely fast flowering sativa 40 days max. Columnar, hardly any branching. Yield not the best, grown SOG, 20 plants/m2, 600w, about 250g. Taste is fruity, although not very strong, a pleasant day weed, went down with friends the best of the three, the others were too strong.

2. The Blue Phenotype. This plant looked very much like Flo at the end of flowering. The underside of the fan leaves purpled slightly and the calyx developed hues of blue. Citrus in smell and taste, very strong, probably 60/40 head/body. Creeper effect and long lasting.

3. The Black Phenotype. Definitely my favourite. This was the first seed to germinate and the most vigorous during both growth and flowering. An exceptionally neat grower, not much branching, but thick juicy buds. The plant's leaves turned almost black toward the end of flowering, definitely the most beautiful plant I've ever seen. The smell was sublime, a pine/cedar odour, very subtle. The cured bud was fantastic, sandalwood pepper. It blew the top of my head off. I had a couple of friends over, after one joint between three, both of them were too paranoid to get behind the wheel, it took them about three hours to leave. Very much a head stone, almost no after effect (about five hours later). This was by far and away the best plant I've ever grown and comes very close to the best I've ever smoked.

Three pics of the black pheno, one of the blue and one mixed.

Grower Report
January, 2003

Veg Stage:

Germ rate was 3/5. The female to male ratio was 2/3. The Mango was not all that vigorous in veg...

Pheno 1

It was tall and very lanky. Looked nothing like the other pheno. I have no idea how it was classified as a indica. It grew like a friggin jungle sativa. The genetic variation of this strain was unreal. The 2 phenos looked nothing a like. This strain is far from being stabilized. This is what you can expect for the price I suppose. (Killed at day 70 of bloom was not what I was looking for what so ever. No way was this a indica)

Pheno 2

This pheno was much more uniform in growth. Looked and resembled a deep indica. I honestly have to question whether the phenos were both the same strain. They look absolutely nothing a like.

Bloom stage:

Pheno 1

This one was killed early because it was nothing I wanted to grow. It was a monster 8 feet tall with the bend tech. I cut it early because it took up way to much room and was a horrible lagger. Smoke was much worse then pheno 2. This pheno was horrible.

Pheno 2

This one grew more uniform than the other pheno. The maturation time was also much faster. The yield was horrible though. It was 1 - 1.5 ounces (no CO2).

Final evaluation:

The smoke was better then the first phenotype, but nothing mango about it. There was NO fruit flavor. The high was almost seemed existent. The body high does last awhile though. It just has no power to it. The appearance is the best part of the weed. The calyxes are real fat and the buds are very crystallized. The phenotype (phenotype 2) I grew out a couple times was a little better than average. It did not deserve a 3rd place at CC.

5 for 5 germ, all five sprouted, 2 males, 1 hermie (my fault), 2 females.

Out of all five I observed three phenos, Indica dominant, Indica/Sativa, Sativa dominant.

Sativa dominant: light green leaf, skinny leaf. Hermied at 2 weeks flower, culled. Only one I had in DWC. Massive stretch.

Indica/sat: both males and one female displayed these traits. Dark green medium width leaf, branchy, thick stalks, somewhat lanky with nice even distance between nodes. Good resin production, short trichomes. This pheno displayed good conformity/even growth. Light airy buds.

The taste and smell are top notch, very pleasurable smoke. Tropical/fruity. The stone is medium in potency, even buzz. I can smoke it through out the day, but by early eve it's lights out. Good weed for part time smokers/chicks.

I harvested this pheno at 56 days, clear trichomes, very few cloudy. I could have taken her another week as I did with the Indica pheno.

Indica pheno: I say Indica, because during veg this plant looked exactly like the Golden Skush I had growing with it. Tight compact plant, lighter green wide leaf. When she went to flowering, the center of the plant just shot up, ended up the tallest plant in the grow. When the bud started packing on, she displayed some skinny sativa leaf for a week, then back to a wider leaf... Never was a lanky plant, just the center/colas shot up. Nice thick stalk. The bud on this girl was denser, and very pine cone shaped. Good even growth with a very nice center cola.

Again the taste and smell just some of the best smelling bud I've ever come across. This pheno's smell was so good it was almost orange like with a breeze blowing through it, no shit very nice. The buzz was pretty much similar to the other girl, little more head, and did last 30 minutes longer. This girl is a nose tingler, the aroma gets me sneezing like a motherfucker.

Harvested this girl at 61 days, all cloudy trichomes with some clear still there.

I grew these plants using training and extensive pruning. These photos are not typical of the strain's growth pattern.

KC Brains has always been a fav breeder of mine. These mango seeds germinated in Black gold germinating mix no problem. I vegged them for 24 days under 24 hours of compact fluro lighting. then transplanted them into 5 gallon pots during flowering.

I cannot beleive how much these plants explode in just a matter of 40 days. They went from plants to solid thick pole straight nuggets in a month and 10 days!

HELLO that's amazing. I must admit i'm not a fan of pure indica strains but this one is quite nice. It's good for a nighttime smoke. Me and my girlfriend like to wind down with a bowl of Super Haze, followed by a nice nugget of Mango. She's absolutley a day ender NOT a day starter. DO NOT smoke this shit before work and expect to keep your job long. (unless you work at a headshop or are a full time medical grower) It's very dreamy and lazy, that's the best i can describe it's high as.

There are several ideas that are formed in your head but because of the thumping indica heritage you never quite get motivated enough to do anything about them. Very tasteey though, not tasting as much like "mango" as i would of expected, and i was surprised, i pride myself in bringing out the FULL flavor or buds through organic chemistry and temp control. tastes a little acrid, hints of fruit peels like dry orange,mango a little berry but not much. Undertones of grape definitely. A great producer in a very short time, and if you're looking for some lazy sunday afternoon pot, this is it. Props to KC on this one, the yeild is seriously something that has to be experienced to be beleived, i average 3-4 ounces per 3 foot plant. often times more. Gorgeous.

The two Mind Benders we grew were very short, the tallest of them reaching only about 90 cm. They can take some serious abuse, ranging from over / under watering, over fertilization, extreme heat and humidity, and snails.

For small plants they have quite a large yield, and are densely packed and bushy. Trimming them is a bitch.

The smoke is smooth and not unpleasant. It acts rather quickly with a couch-lock body stone type high. Paranoia isn't really an issue as you're so wasted you don't care. Have plenty of munchies within arms reach, as you really don't feel like moving to get them.

Sometime after harvest, the dried result still contains a sweet, unpleasant aroma.

Grower Report

May, 2003

KC Brains Northern Lights Special was a very easy plant to grow, not picky about fertilizers, fast stretchy growth. Although I was expecting an Indica type plant, all 5 of the NLS I grew were Sativa in appearance - tall, with narrow long fingered leaves.

The NLS were flowered for 9 weeks. They did not produce noticeable trichomes, and were not very sticky during manicure. The buds were long and fluffy, and so the dried yeild was low/moderate at 2.4 oz for 2 female plants. The Skunks grown next to the NLS produced 3.7 oz.

Unfortunately, the smoke of the NLS was weak as expected. It's difficult to smoke enough to get a nice high, so I don't smoke the NLS. Consequently, I've been using the buds to make hash oil for cannabrownies, which have turned out nicely.

I would not grow this strain, it's not worth the effort or the space in your garden.

Northern Lights Special was my first name-brand grow. I planted just two seeds, and one turned out male. Topped at the fourth node and started tying down branches to nails in the wall. Plant ended up about 2 feet high and 4 feet wide, taking up the entire closet. It really started stinking up the house the last weeks before harvest. Buds were dark green and literally glistening with crystals. Everyone definitely knows when you open up a jar of these nugs. With a yield of 5.5 ounces I think I came out pretty good, considering the quality. I'll have a lot to smoke for a long time. There is an issue of High Times that gave this strain "Strain of the month" and I can definitely see why.

Grower Report

September, 2003

As my first grow with decent genetics, I was very impressed with this strain. I know that KC Brains' seeds get a lot of flak on these boards - but these seeds all sprouted and popped out the soil (planted directly into soil) within 36hrs, but the last two to sprout got chucked.

Of the remaining 8 plants, they were as close to identical as you can get, all were leaning towards the Indica side and grew to be short, squat little bushes with loads of sidebranches.

When the plants were around 10" tall, I fitted them with Scrog screens and took cuttings - the cuttings were put aside to root and I flowered the mums (& dads) to determine sex and to get some samples so as I could choose a mother.

Most of the way through, there were few, if any problems. Most of the time it was a case of overwatering - and this caught up with me later in flower as I had pH issues and nute lockout, causing excessive yellowing and 'crispy' leaves.

From the 8 plants, I got 5 females (all the males were axed immediately) which I continued to flower until harvesting at 62 days (the plants were slightly immature when put under 12/12, so this would affect the flowering time)

After drying, I had just under 8.5 Oz from the 5 ladies - the most from one plant was 49g (most were over 40g), and the least was 17g (due to it being finished in a 500ml pot - I called it 'lanky')

These buds are totally covered in trichs (nice fat ones that look like sugar) and are sticky as hell. When you open the jar, you get a heady, pungent fruity aroma which reminds me of some Neville's haze I tried a while back. The buds are a little loose on occasion, but most are quite firm - obviously, this would improve with more light.

The high does vary *slightly* from one plant to the next - but as yet, I'm still trying to decide which mother to keep (I like 'em all too much!). Overall, it's a more heady stone with a bit of couchlock - so it'll leave you still capable of demolishing the contents of the fridge (and trust me, you will with this stuff - talk about munchies madness) and quite a few visuals - this is one of the 'trippiest' strains I've tried (I didn't even find the Neville's that trippy). The high also lasts for hours - so don't smoke this stuff if you've got things to do.

I would recommend this strain to anyone - experienced or not as it's easy to grow, is very tolerant and yields well with a good level of potency.

I lost some seedlings. Vegged four plants. One was male. All plants were the same, no variations. After seedling stage, this plant just takes off, and is easy to grow. I must grow it again. My only issue was the size. I had a tie down wrestling match more than once a day for sometime. I wish I could grow this outside the greenhouse. I bet it would be fantastic. At the end of the season, I had mold in every plant, except the TNRs. One year later, pulling a jar from the freezer, this cannabis gets us high every time, it's never boring. This is a flying soaring high, lasting about two hours, and then I may need a nap. Or I can go about my business and function well. It's not soaring, but the stone goes maybe another four hours, depending on the day.

For my 'patient', this is strong solid medicine. The yield made it worth the growing. I will be so sorry when we run out.

I grew 3 strains for my first grow. I got these WG seeds because of the good price from Hemp Depot and I had room for 5 more plants. I was growing in soil using 5 gallon buckets vegging under a 1000 watt MH-18/6 and flowering under a 1000 watt HPS-12/12.

Out of 10 seeds, 9 sprouted and 5 turned out to be female. They started showing gender a week before the 12/12. This is a hardy strain which is described as 40 % to mostly sativa by some and mostly indica by others. It grows pretty fast and was way ahead of my 2 other strains by the time I put them all into 12/12. I only have one grow room. They have the sativa phenotype: tall with thin leaves and buds. It did not need many nutrients and could take a lot of them when needed. I had a problem with nute lockup by making my soil too hot with chicken manure. The plants had yellowed on the new growth. This was easily corrected with a transplant and chelated iron. After about five weeks in veg the plants were 2 1/2 feet tall! I had to wait because my other stains were only 18 inches.

These babies really stretch in the 12/12. By the time they were finished, they were over four feet tall. I had to raise the light and tie some of them down to keep them far enough from the light. I used a good, locally made 4-8-12 fert for the bloom. They had a great orange smell to them. The buds on two plants were pretty thick, so-so on two others and pretty thin on one. One got so heavy, it could not hold itself up.

For me, the hardest part of this is knowing when to harvest and White Grizzly confused the Hell outa me! One plant had 80-90 percent red pistils and milky trichomes at day 50 even though the seedbanks say 8-9 weeks. That plant did autoflower one week before 12/12. I decided to take that one down as an experiment. It turned out to be pretty good. It had some seeds in just three lower buds. No others had seeds.

I harvested the others at day 55 to 60. They all seemed to finish on different days. I let them dry in 40 percent humidity for a week and placed them in Mason jars opened an hour each day for the slower cure.

All in all, I would say thumbs up. Not a real large yield, but enough for me. It has an orange taste and the high is up and cerebral as described in the seedbanks. It builds up and lasts a while. I'm sure they could be flowered for another week to get the couchlock if so desired.

I would grow WG again, but I would flower it at 15 to 18 inches to deal with the big stretch. I can see why they describe it as a good outdoor strain. A pleasant surprise!

Biddy Early from Magus Genetics

Source Description

*magnus-thum.jpg*The Biddy Early is our first outdoor variety, but in our opinion already one of the best ever. It will grow out to a classical Sativa X-Mas tree with a height of approximately 1.8 to 2 meters. Because of its early flowering and maturation, it's very well suited for open field cultivation in Holland, and area's with a similar climate. Of course it's also possible to grow the Biddy Early with great results indoors under lights, but remaining mothers in a vegetative stage for a prolonged period, can be difficult, and in some cases even impossible. The majority of the plants will form red and purple colours if exposed to low temperatures, yet with some variation in the location and intensity of the discoloration. It has a sweet candy aroma and a powerful high, not recommended as a "day-time smoke", but still mild enough not to be considered a "party killer".

I bought the seeds in a spanish grow shop for 30€ (~$40). Out of 10 seeds, half were females.

I grew the ladies with bonsai technique (see FAQ for infos) which proved to be very efficient: i obtained 5 healthy bonsai moms 25 cm (10 ") tall. The problem i was aware of, was the tendency of this strain to autoflower even under 24/7 light regimen: Gerrit, MG's creator, mentions this prob on his Biddy Early description. I got only one mom which didn't autoflower within 3 months: this is the pheno i kept for next grow. In this grow report i had 2 phenos: the one from the mom that doesn't autoflower and the other from an autoflowering mom that went to trash. The first makes lower plants, fluffy, conic buds (non autoflowering mom) and the other more compact buds, that aggregates horizontally into massive buds (autoflowering mom), taller. Both at the end have same taste, odor, buzz...

I used GH products (gro, flo, Ripen) and Bionova PK 13/14.

400W HPS, pH 5.5

I have a Nutriculture Flogro 520 which is composed of a dripping ringover a 75 cm (30") tray w clay pebbles & tank.

This strain is easy to clone within 10 days (cheapo aero cloner : see FAQ).

This grow was initially a try for SOG : i quickly discovered i had chosen wrong strain for this propagation technique. Because of her sativa origins, this strain stretches a lot when put under 12/12 (2 to 3 times). I shouldn't have waited for clones to make roots before switching to 12/12: they grew too fast, too tall and canopy was very irregular. Besides there SCROG would suit better...

I didn't top the plants and they all grew up with XMas tree shape (central cola + numerous big buds).

They required low maintenance & low nutes levels (1.5 max). This strain grows geometrically perfect, with thin stems, few fan leaves, much resin and many bud sites that later join together to form big colas & buds. It responds very quickly to 12/12, and form pistils within 7-10 days. This must be its "early" lineage as it is ready to harvest within 56 days flowering.

It really STINKS from week 4 of flo (strong fruity aroma) :it is even worse than WW!! Odor control is highly recommended for neighbourhood. I fed them with increasing dosis of PK13/14 while decreasing flo nutes levels from week 4 'till middle of week 7. This started the flushing process as the N concentration became lower and lower. I ended the flush with 10 days of Ripen only followed by 2 days of ph'd water. The plants were all yellow when harvested.

I harvested when all trichs were cloudy. It dried in 1-2 weeks and i made a 2 weeks cure when i'm writing.

This is a good producer as i got about 300g out of 6 plants.

This is a very soft & clean smoke, but taste is not quite distinctive...Some subtle fruity/candy aroma develops as curing progresses. It is anyway very pleasant to smoke with sometimes slight skunky aftertaste.

Biddy Early will cast you a spell of eternal stoniness: quick head rush, strong heart beat increase followed by a long mellow and trippy buzz (3 hours & more). This is an excellent uplifting high, with weird state of consciousness : it is a very special and undescribable buzz. It gets you VERY stoned, but still capable of doing things: you don't know really if you're tired or not!!!.Gerrit made a unique strain you can recognize among thousand others by this trippy and nicely balanced buzz.

It is not a "one shot" strain that kills you with 1 puff...The more you smoke, the more you get stoned : the prob is you always wanna smoke more!

The structure/growing pattern is similar to the Warlock but it does not elongate that much and it has more and bigger dark green leaves. It does not react on short days as quickly as the Warlock so they take approx. a week longer to finish. The fresh pistils are less white than those on the Warlock but the mature pistils are tan as well. The smell is also strong and sweet but with a pine smell added to it, aggressive on a fresh plant but pleasant on the dried product. The high is strong but more on the body (sedative).

I received the seeds as a 'tester pack'! Planted 5, kept one healthy compact female.
She stopped growth at a height of about 25 inch. Smallest plant I have ever cultivated.. hehe.

The branching was not too heavy, must be a great choice for SOG systems (if that's a common trait).
The buds developed very constantly, looking like some out-of-space cottoncandy or something in the last few weeks. The distinctive, creamy berry-scent came up in the last few days of flowering, before it 'just' smelled extremely sweet (as it still does..).

The bubblehash I made from the trimmings is some serious shit. Supertasty & extremely strong. Soft like butter in consistency.

I have to say that the effect is not a pure couchlock. It has some active, I might say 'trippy', aspects.

Another great Magus-strain..!

Exile is a pretty decent strain that yields good and has a nice pleasant taste that lasts right to the last whack of the joint.

The buzz is pretty strong if your not used to smoking powerful indicas which all I really smoke is heavy sativa varieties so this stuff whacks me.

I could see this working good for people who need cannabis for medicinal purposes as it numbs me up pretty good.

One thing that I didn't like is how damn tired it makes you after an hour or two after your done toking.

I prefer smoke that I can still function on but I can see someone out there loving it.

Another thing is it takes a long time to mature as the quickest female took over 70 days and the longest one took 90 or so.

The yield does compensate some for long flowering time. This strain would be good for SOG as it grows big ass colas even after being topped.

I had a little bit of budrot in one of the colas but it was my own fault as it was in a corner not getting hardly any air flow on her so be careful for that with the big colas.

So to sum it up this strain is not my personal preference but I can see someone really loving the knockout buzz and big yields. The piney taste is nice aswell and brings back some memories when there was tons of "christmas tree weed".

Ok so I bought 10 seeds directly from Magus @ the HT cannabis cup. I selected Warlock since his only other two strains were Warlock derivatives. He had a flowering plant on display, a bowl of buds, and his seeds. So anyone could see all stages of the plant. Could not be better.

I bought ten seeds, went home and popped them. Only 8 popped properly. A month later I took all eight and sexed them. I was half lucky. I killed three of the four males. I took the best female (out of four) and worked with that one.

Warlock is very branchy and grows geometrically perfect (lots of bud sites/nodes). It's sweet indoors. The leaves are Sativa looking (very narrow fingers) but the overall leaf size is tiny, which is good to allow light through.

The plant can handle extreme variables. Indoor and Outdoor. Outdoor the plant is bushy not to exceed the height of 2 meters. It does not require that much light compared to other strains, making it great for indoors or places like the Netherlands.

The smell is SUPER. Does not stink at all smells like a fruit market. Also a great quality for indoors.

It is a very early flowerer. 55 days if great/7weeks tops.

The pistils turn tan or pink and not red or orange so you have to judge maturity by crystal content (trichome maturity).

The taste is awesome, very fruity peachy/apricot/mango.

The high is like similar to C99 or Apollo 11 (A11) a soaring feeling, very stimulating---go work on something or talk to people. Up High. From its Sativa family.

The branches don't break easily, and I would recommend using it for SCROG or SOG without the screen.

I love this strain, since it is hard to burn out on it. This is not as stony as Sweet Tooth, or Buddas sis, but it is very complete not overpowering, one is still in control. Just enjoying the happiness.

I recommend it stongly. Don't fix what's not broken.

Coco Grow

I started out with 20 Deluxe seeds from Satori for selecting mother plants and then took cuttings which I grew in coco coir in 3,5 L (approx. 1 gallon) pots. The plant were watered by hand. Satori grew to a slim and compact sativa with excellent pest resistance and she finished flowering within a good time frame. The plants had a powerful central stem with internodes growing in a "steps". Sideshoots grew mainly in a close upright position next to the main stem. That's why I can also recommend her for SOG. As a mother plant Satori requires approx. 3 weeks before the first robust cuttings can be taken. Only two days after they rooted I put them into flowering at about 10cm (4 inches) of height. From these short cuttings I got fantastic plants with an average height of 60-80cm (24-31 inches).

Satori grows nicely uniform. Some plants stay a bit shorter than the rest but it doesn't affect the yield. After 7 weeks in flowering you can count on a real boost in bud development. So a bit of patience really pays off. I found that the nutrient requirements for this strain are very low because the plants use all available nutrients to the optimum. She doesn't like to be overfed and giving her less = more! I recommend to all Satori growers to start with half of the recommended dosage and to observe the plants. In my coco grow the EC never went over 1,1 (starting level was EC 0,3). I use the Truncheon nutrient salts meter.

The (new) flowering time of 65-72 given by Mandala Seeds is definitely realistic. After 9-10 weeks also the longer flowering plants had matured. They filled the air with a strong sweet-spicy hash aroma when I touched them ... and the bud's aroma began to really intensify during drying!

The mainly average resin development does not in any way reflect the potency of this strain. The high is unbelievably strong and get's more powerful with every new inhalation! The clear and up-high is exactly what one desires from a sativa.

The two females were only vegetated for 35 days and reached a height of about 1 and half feet tall. The plants grew fat wide leaves and showed Indica traits. She took in nutrients nicely.

Flowering: I flowered the two plants for about 54 days. I like to harvest my plants with a minimum of 50% "cloudy" trichomes and 50% "amber" trichomes. The plants grew nice main colas with a fair amount of side branching. The pistols on one pheno were almost glowing blue during a certain phase in the flowering cycle. Both phenos grew alike but were still very different, although still pretty stable for an F2. They frosted up very nicely and didn't smell too strong. On the last week of ripening you can really smell blueberries when you rub the main colas. The overall size of the colas was quite impressive considering the smaller containers used (1 Gal pots) for the grow. I ended up with about an ounce and a half of dried and manicured buds (no stems!). She took in nutrients nicely, in fact I'm sure I under fed them.

Drying/Curing: The buds dried nicely in about 7 days (first 3 days hung up, and then 4 days in paper bags). The more you cured them for, the better and sweeter these buds tasted. They really smelled of blueberries and it was my first berry strain ever. I was quite pleased, as they smoked and tasted like they smelled too!

Smoke Test: The buzz was fast and heavy in the forehead. It throws off a nice Indica head stone, with a subtle body buzz. Munchies hit you every time and smoking too much will cause you to doze off :) nice meds for back pain and GREAT for upset stomachs and people who suffer from ulcers. Buzz lasts a good 2 hours. Good and potent.

The seeds were bought at my local friendly headshop and my girlfriend and I were heading off to the local garden center to pick up some vegetable seeds for my allotment. The sheer thought of actually going and purchasing myself some black widow seeds, for such a price, surely they will be the best plant ever I thought ...and I wasn't far off.

I've been growing Black Widow for about 4 runs now, maybe more, maybe less. Looking back at my first grow of this strain, compared with my recent one I am learning more and more everytime.

She's a delicate plant, but thrives when you give her what she wants.

You see, the trick with Black Widow, is the ability to control the nutrients she's getting to the drop. Don't get me wrong, she'll grow in anything you give her, just battle her way in her usual self, but once you start reading into her signs, noticing any abnormalities at all and finding out what they are, she's the best. Give her the nutrients she personally demands and she'll repay.

When I first popped the seeds I decided to do my first grow in soil. So all 15 seeds were planted after sucesfully germinating all of them between some paper towels.

About the paper towels, I simply got a sheet of kitchen paper, folded it up to shrink it down size a bit and thicken it up, placed the seeds inside, gave it a spray with a mister of just tap water, and left in dark cuboard under sink for a few days, checking the paper towels to make sure they were moist, not wet or soaking. All of them developed white tap roots.

The soil was put into some medium size pots with plenty of perlite, loads of perlite I mean, and loads of clay pebbles for aeration, and later the same into 5 gallon buckets. After having suffered the prices of 'chem bud' in the past, (ie but that tastes like shit and burns black cuz full or nutes) this time I fed just water, all the way through the grow.

As soon as the seedlings were above the soil, they were under 1000w of HPS Son-T-plus (or gro? I forgot which one it is). I'm not too bothered about the seedlings getting intense light from instant or the heat, the hardy one's'll make it, but I think this could be how I ended up with a poor female ratio.

Anyways all plants were completly varied in veg, after 2 weeks I tied the plants over, I mean I got the top of the plant, tied it to the bottom of the plant, and then put them into flower. This was to stop them from getting too high as I had no idea about how much they'd stretch and thought better be safe than sorry.

After 2weeks I weeded out the males and was left with 4 females I think. Still feeding them pure water, all was still good with the plants, the soil seemed to support them fine on its own.

3 of the plants at this time of around 5 weeks of flowering seemed to be developing similar bud structure, leaf appearance bud size.

The one remaining plant, was so Sativa it could of never finished in the end, I just pulled it after about 15 weeks but never bothered to sample it as the crystal production looked non-existant (plant on picture Dscn2152.jpg). The plant also developed 4 new shoots at every node, which I thought would have bought more bud, but it just seemed to be its downfall, I could probably grow it better if I could control the nutrient level more accurately, but I threw the plant after this grow.

The 3 remaining plants went on to finish after at about 10 weeks, all the time those final weeks the plant really does pack on extra weight and beef and solidify up to some excellent buds.

Smoke after cure is shit, but then again, I'd say every smoke without cure is shit.

After 40+ days cure, the bud is good. Very Hindu spicy Asia smell, reminds me of Arabia or something similar. The taste is just like the smell and it tastes delicious; you really do crave more for the smoke.

You smoke the spliff, you feel it about half way down the spliff and by the time you finish the spliff, you think you're fucked, then it really hits you, strong, like wobbling in your body, very fast.

I found myself able to do unthinkable amounts of physical exercise, swimming further than I've ever swummed and running for longer than I've ever run when doing exercise after smoking.

A bong full will send you buzzing around your growroom in a state of complete paranoia, hearing police sirens everytime you walk into your growroom, but not when you step out, excellent but you shit your pants alright.

Critical Mass from Mr Nice

From: Mr Nice

Source Description

*mrmedicine.gif*A reworked excellent version of an old breed once known as Big Bud. This is an absolute must for the cultivator who demands a high yield with an equally high stone. It is the heaviest plant currently in production for commercial farmers and outdoor crops and resembles the male genital protrusion of a giant donkey. Due to its heavy flower construction it can be susceptible to mould if the growing area is too humid. So be warned, and harvest on time. It has a genetic pedigree originating from a particularly heavy Afghani combined with the original Skunk#1. An expected yield indoors would be 650-750 grams per square metre within 50-55 days, possibly more for the experienced cultivators. If cultivated outdoors, expect harvest in September for the northern hemisphere and by March in the southern hemisphere.

This plant is for those who are looking for yield as it gets massive, gigantic, fat, thick colas. It is very dense and heavy -- watch out for mold as it seems prone to it due to the density and thickness of the buds.

I grew these in DWC and it was a very easy plant to grow, no problems at all. It had very Sativa looking leaves but very little stretch. It made nice average size bushes with monster fat buds. The smell and taste could be better -- not that they are bad more just plain and nothing to talk about.

The potency is definitely good though and I had no complaints from any who smoked it. I think this would be a great beginner strain for those who want to get a good yield of good weed as I believe that even a noob could get good yields with this baby.

I would say to let it go longer than the breeder says in flower because resin development didn't really happen till late in flower, but if you do let them go to full maturation keep a close watch for mold.

I grew out a pack of CrtitcalMass (16 seeds) from Mr.Nice seedbank. Most of the plants were pretty average but I did find one exceptional female. Afghani-dominant in growth and appearance. The plant was grown in a five gallon bucket under 3K with a total organic feeding regime (moonshine's organic soil mix). The mix is mainly castings, bat guano and seabird guano, perlite and coco-fiber. The best female finished at 4 1/2 ft with solid bud from top to bottom. No leaf, which made trimming a dream. The temps were kept at 82 day and 61 night, which made the plant totally purple out. Huge Bag appeal with frosty purple nuggets and crazy orange hairs. I have read this plant isn't big on resin ... the female I have is HUGE on resin so that's an added bonus.

I used to smoke a strain called Godzilla at the Greenhouse in Amsterdam. This was around 97-98 when Shantibaba was with Greenhouse. I have a strong feeling the Crit and Godzilla are of the same lineage. I loved that particular strain (Godzilla) and had a huge flashback the first time I puffed the Crit ... I'd be interested to find out for sure from Shanti...

May,

I purchased my dynamite seeds when on vacation in Vancouver about two years ago from a retail seed company there. All of the phenos were very similar in taste and appearance. The one that I chose was a medium stout quick finisher that put on a ton of resin and was very easy to grow.

In veg dynamite is very hardy and easy to clone. Clones usually root in 7-10 days using Dip & Grow and rockwool cubes. Once rooted the plants establish a root base quickly and out grow a keg cup in about 10 days with roots wrapped around the bottom. Using floros and then a MH. Once repotted the plants grow fast and start to put out very large deep green fan leaves.

In bloom dynamite stretches very little, about 20% of its original size when flipped. After its initial stretch it starts to grow white sticky hairs in abundance and has resin on the leaves from two and a half weeks on. Starting in week three the buds start to develop plant matter under the hairs and start to plump up and get a thicker coat of resin that easy rubs off on your clothes and fingers.

At thirty days you could harvest this thing with more resin than some plants I have seen at harvest. It starts to really put on weight well until 46 days or so then it starts to ripen quickly. I usually harvest at this point because if left longer the high can get really intense and tends to burn me out. I have let it go up to 60 days before and it does put on some wait between 45-60 days. The thing that is good about letting dynamite go is the colors that will come with colder temps. You will start to see purple start at the bottom of the bud and move up with beautiful hues that can leave it looking quite impressive.

Most people that try it say that it is the best weed they have ever smoked and I know why. The high is like a sledgehammer to the head followed with couchlock and munchies. It's everything that good kick ass weed should be. I am just more of a fan of workable and less intense weed that doesn't leave me burned out for the rest of the night. The high lasts about a hour and a half leaves my forehead and skull numb for most of it. Even though I prefer to smoke other strains most of the time dynamite is always good when you just want to smoke a bowl and get really high. I will always have a place in my garden for such pretty potent bud and because my friends love it.

Gets really tall, so not reccommended for grows with height restraints, but they don't start producing budz till about the 4 week so it's ok to give em a nice chop about the 3rd week of 12/12. Long flowering time, but worth the wait.

Very good strain. Pretty much easy to grow. I didn't use much fert throughout the grow and the plant seemed to cope. After drying and harvesting for one week then curing for another week the buds were strong and sweet. After a few months they were very, very strong! The longer the better in my case! Excellent allrounder and a very quick flowerer, which helps.

This was excellent weed, short, squatty, easy to grow plants. Smell was strong and pungent, taste was amazing. The plant do not appear to be very remarkable at first, look like bagseed, but they behave very well indoors and usually show sex at approx 4-5 internodes. I have never had a herm and I have had probably 40 total. Easy to clone and very hardy and resilient. Easy to regenerate if you leave a few leaves on and switch the light back to veg. The taste is a very unique greasy chemical taste that coats your mouth and throat, the high is a typical heavy Indica high but a pleasure nonetheless.

I germinated all 10 seeds in a 50/50 mix of vermiculite and perlite in a plastic Solo cup, at a depth of 1/4 inch. At day 4, I had 8 out of 10 seeds up and that was it. The seedlings grew well and I transplanted them into the full sized containers with lava rock media.

Of 12 seeds, I had one that was female. I grew it outside in FULL sun, in Central Ontario, Canada.
Big dark fan leaves were classic of this original Indica strain.

Beautiful full buds, (mine had purple flowers from the lower temperature outside)

I grew with organic ferts, not much at that, and the yield reflected this.

Very very drought resistant, clones easily (I had 100% success rate) stalks like a TREE!

Potency was crap at first, but after three weeks of curing, they were decent indeed! Only got better as the weeks went by.

Everyone that smoked it loved it, and when I told people it was Afghani, they all said the same thing "Ahhh, I knew I recognized that high", none of them knew what the Indica flavor and high were all about. This is the REAL DEAL as far as the genuine Indica hash plants go... next season I'll make hash and oil for sure.

CONS:

I had a serious drying issue. It took my single plant FIVE, yes FIVE weeks to show any signs of drying. The temperature was a steady 70-75 degrees with 45% humidity. I was very disappointed because I lost about a quarter of the buds to mold because of this.

Was my first grow, I had some bagseed going as well, but the Afghani outperformed the others at every turn. My final bud count was 45 grams dried buds. It is what it is, an original "KING of Cannabis"

Germination

Seedlings were germinated using the damp paper towel and ziplock bag method. I placed the bag on top of my computer monitor and 9 seedlings had cracked within 3 days. 1 seed failed to germinate. 1 seedling died before reaching a few days old.

Vegative Growth

It was very slow at first, very little growth between days 7 and 14 before I repotted (they weren't actually rootbound) and they hit their growth spurt. Vegged with half doses of Canna Terra Nutes each week. After 34 days most plants had only just hit 8 inches. I decided the flip into flower early, only 1 of the plants was alternating at each node.

Flowering/Harvest

I immediately started weekly half strength doses of canna terra nutes. My bushiest plant turned hermie during the 2nd week of flowering, leaving 3 females. Plants continued stretching for around 34 days of the 51 day flowering period. The plants tripled in height to reach heights of around 22-24 inches. Around this time the plants developed a serious nitrogen deficiency due to underfertilizing. I watered with epsom salts and full strength canna flores nutes and the yellowing stopped. I continued a full strength weekly does of canna flores until the last week before harvest. I then gave another does of canna flores as more leaves were yellowing. I allowed the roots to take up nutes for 5 hours before a full flush.

3 days later I turned the lights out for a 28 hour dark period before cutting and hanging upside down overnight in the growbox. Trichs were 30-40% cloudy for a less couchlocky high. The next day I manicured the buds and laid them on newspaper to dry for 5 days at around 75F and 45% Humidity with a small oscilating fan circulating air in the room. I then placed 35.7g of dry buds in a 0.75 litre mason jar and began curing, airing out twice a day for between 30-60 minutes.

The Smoke

I took one small lower bud and ground it up before rolling a very small joint (half roach, half bud). The bud had wonderful lemony orange aromas with the musky undertone of hash. I proceeded to take 6 or 7 light puffs (smooth provided you aren't taking huge hits) and the smoke tasted fairly sweet, almost like sweet oranges, before dying away as the smoke glides down your into your lungs. I then felt something creamy on my lips. I looked at the roach of my joint and it was covered in oily brown resin and so were my lips. I then decided to wait and see how the high was before I smoked any more.

A great body high with a fairly clear head. Sensations are stronger, I feel more creative, more relaxed, warm all over. Memories are stronger and there are regular bouts of the munchies. The high peaked around 1 hour and trailed off during the next couple of hours.

Conclusion

-----

A great strain to learn growing on, very forgiving (I underferted hugely and still got an acceptable (for a first attempt) yield of 35.7g. A pleasant smoke an a great high all round.

July, 2002

I finally dug up my old pics of my first grow. It was Afghan from Nirvana. I of course was a noob, and this is what I did. Started 2 seeds in paper towel and got 100% germ. Went on to using a lava lamp light bulb for the first week of veg. Needless to say I didn't get much growth. Then moved on to my friends house and used 2 old old OLD 40 watt fluoros, without reflectors, so I really had about 30 watts max of actual light reaching them.

They vegged slowly of course, and my friend was on water duty, I knew how to water properly, and instructed him, but of course he wanted the best looking one to grow the fastest, and over watered it, causing death.

So I was down to 1 plant, unknown sex. It vegged for 5 weeks under 30 watts, had its share of trouble, and grew slowly and unhealthily.

Then came time when we saved enough money to buy our 70 watt hps from home depot. Moved it back to the parents house and set up a nice little flower chamber. Those pics are gone for good, they were uploaded on the cannabis.com forums, but were deleted. Once flowering starter, it took off. with the proper light and temperature and all that, it grew very fast and vigorous. Thank god it turned out female about a week in. Now that she was doubled in size in nearly 2 weeks, the leaves were a dark beautiful green, healthy and strong, always at a 45 degree angle. As a noob I didn't use a timer, so flowering time was lengthened by light stress. I also ended up with some male bananas, which in turn helped me learn the capability of female seeds first hand.

I yielded 60 grams out of the fresh 70 watt hps and 2 40 watt brand new fluoros, it took more time then usual, but eventually it got there.

This plant was very resistant to abuse. Wrong lights, low wattage, neglect, over watering, and no veg nutes at all. Only used liquid bloom high P fertz 3 week of flowering, and stopped after the 5th.

Afghan made such a comeback that I recommend this as one of the best first time grows, even without the help of OG I made it okay.

On another note, some of my dried weed was in a RubberMaid from the attic (it had mites in it somehow) ended up getting eaten from the inside out, and I lost roughly half of that 60 gram yield to them. made some hash tho.*shivers* Great strain, good job Nirvana.

The plants grew very fast, with dark green leaves and a more Indica shape. This strain produces much resin, trim leaves are very resinous, so it's a very good bubblehash producer. The yield is also very good, and manicuring takes little time. I mixed cow and chicken manure, with worm castings to the soil, and never fed again, plants were very healthy during all their lives. I grew outdoors with full sunlight. plants were small because of my latitude (23 degrees south), so they grew for like 25 days and flowered. I only grew 2 plants of this strain, one had a small pot and became 1/4 of the size of the other plant. I observed 2 different phenos, and called them Silver (small plant) and Pine (big plant)

Pine pheno: Wide leaves, dark green, heavy yielder. At harvest the smell was piney (never heard of pine smell in AK, but mine had). After a week curing the smell is becoming more like citrus. The taste is pretty much the same as the smell. It's not that 1 hit wonder, but it's potent. No couch-lock effects (or very little), Makes you think in lots of stuff, but allows to concentrate when needed. the main effect lasts like 1 - 1,5 hour, then it lows and the body effects become more evident, you can even sleep if you don't keep moving.

Silver pheno: The plant was very small due to pot size, had more sativa-like leaves, lighter green, lower yield. the smell is fruitier on this one. the buds had a more silver appearance because of the resin, even when dry this pheno looks more crystal. the high is also more heady and active. I would keep this pheno.

The AK-48 is a very beautiful plant, that grows fast and easily, and has lots of resin. I expected a little more on the high of this plant, but I still recommend it to everyone. It was a pleasure to grow, and I'll surely do it again.

8 seeds planted all germinated, I ended up with 2 females; one sativa and one indica phenotype. They were vegged for 7 weeks in soil using organic ferters. It grows fast and produces much better bud if vegged longer, 6 weeks at least, it's very easy to clone, and has a good yield. I also haven't seen any hermi traits in this strain.

This strain is a stinker the indica pheno smelled like over ripe fruit and the sativa pheno smelled like rotten meat, while flowering. The sativa pheno flowered for 68 days and the indica took 58 days.

The cured indica tasted very sweet and fruity and the sativa tasted like assorted herbs, very spicy. I prefer the sativa pheno but the indica yields more both are very nice.

One of the best strains I've ever grown. With long, big, compact beautiful buds coated in frost, it also has great bag appeal, and as soon as the bag is opened you are hit with a strong rich dank aroma.

AK48 from Nirvana Seeds was a pleasure to grow, very simple and it seemed if I ever did mess up with over-feeding or missed a watering because I was away the plant always bounced back with nothing to it. I found it very easy to grow and when something went wrong it was very easy to fix and keep going strong. I would reccomend this strain to anyone starting out because of the easyness but yet I would still recommend this strain to some of the most advanced growers because of the potency and yeild.

Although the taste wasn't all that great even after properly drying and curing for some time, the high was very awesome. The buds were sticky, and dense. I was very surprised at the high I got from just one of the smaller buds on the lower branches. The taste may not be great but you will not be disappointed with the high and smell of the buds.

The plants tend to stay shorter and more bushy than most I have grown in the past; this is a great feature when limited on space and growing inside, even growing outside I'm sure this would be a great thing to have. I found the yield to be higher with the AK48 than I did other plants that tend to get tall and skinny. The plant is very easy to train and you don't have to worry about stressing it out all that much. I say all in all this plant was a pleasure to grow and didn't let me down in any of the areas except taste.

Grower Report

June, 2003

I got this strain because I wanted the "one hit wonder". I knew it wouldn't get me stoned after just a hit, but I want to see the strain that can do that to me.

Grow:

I germed 4 seeds, and they all sprouted.

They grew uniformly and fast, they were a bit different tho, some were more sativa than others.

One pheno, sativa dominant, grew faster and stronger than the others, this one also proved to perform and yield best. It's the one you normally see when having an AK pic.

Cloned well after about 8-10 days.

Preflowers showed after about 3 weeks, I had 3 females and 1 male.

Flower:

In flower 3 different phenos showed:

1) Dark green, sometimes kinda weird leaves, budding kicked in late, buds stayed fluffy.

Sweet smell.

Rather poor yield, 1/2 oz, mostly due to being far away from the light.

2) The best. Light green, the great white AK buds, lots of sidebuds, sweet honey smell.

Towards the end it showed severe mg deficiency, after the other strains tho. I gotta admit the yellow leaves looked neat!

Very sticky stuff, and if you don't like trimming you'll love this strain, some small leaves, but nothing really.

Yield was good, about 2oz.

3) Stayed small, so did the buds, but they were just covered in a layer of resin, just incredible. The buds were not rather fluffy tho, didn't yield much but good trim and about 1/2 oz of great weed.

Smoke:

The finished product is extremely sticky, smelling sweet, but herbal sweet, more interesting than just sweet. I've heard many saying normally it's cherry, but with all the phenos I had I got this smell that I can't define with words, very pleasant, with a slight hint of cherry. Pheno 1 has an earthy smell.

The high is very good, rushing and strong, coming on fast. Mostly heady, meaning your head feels like a detached unit, kinda heavy. At the same time you just can't get a smile off your face. I don't find thinking to be a problem after consumption.

A joint burns smooth, smells sweet, the smoke is heavy and kind of sweet, too.

I don't recommend this weed for bong smokers! I can smoke pretty much everything in a bong, but a good hit from AK48, which goes in smooth, makes you explode when you exhale, it expands very much.

Opinion:

I think this was pretty much what I expected. Well, one pheno was, #1 wasn't worth the effort and #3 needs more light.

Overall certainly a strain that I will grow again (clone from #2).

The smoke is great, so is the growth of the plant. A bargain at 20?. money doesn't grow on trees... right.

March, 2004

After a 100% germination I started preparing myself for the worst - lots of good pot!

Grew very well during veg, got 4/6 female which showed sex in the 3rd week of veg. Only problem I had was a magnesium deficiency which was corrected with Epsom Salts. These plants are very hungry growers throughout their lifecycle.

Started to flower them at around 12 inches - they stretched over 3 times during flower, so be prepared to either tie your plants or move your light daily.

These plants stank so much during flower that I could smell them down the street! Wasn't an issue due to where I live, but is if you are considering growing this strain.

Harvested when trichs were mostly cloudy with a few amber.

Overall this strain was an easy grow and interesting, unfortunately the end product was somewhat lacking in taste and smell. My buds have been curing for a month and still don't taste or smell great - but are dense.

As for potency - two of my buddies who are regular smokers got green-fever after sharing a blunt with me.

I would grow this strain again purely for the potency.

Hey people, this grow took place one year ago, its just that I never had the guts to do a real report, well there it goes.

When I got these seeds from a friend they were still called AK-47, I believe it is the same strain as today, or at least similar.

Anyways, we grew them in the bush formats. We had to do a lot of "FIM" cuts all around the plant. Info on how long I vegged and flowered are underneath. I planted two plants from seed, both turned out to be females. There were two very distinct phenotypes.

The cherry pheno: It tasted and smelled a lot like a fruity kind of sweet. It was the first one to finish. The one with the smallest yield. It yielded around 40 dry grams. It wasn't as potent in the beginning. However after cure it was exceptional, not only that but the taste was also simply fantastic.

The super strong Indica pheno: This plant was different ... Pasmatic... It was probably the most potent indica I have ever smoked. It had no smell nor taste. However it yielded twice as much as the cherry pheno and it was simply a one bowl hitter. After 2 months cure, I would have to smoke very little and carefully as it was 100000 % couchlock guaranteed ahahahahaha!... Despite the failure in odor and taste, it is a must have for any serious potency lovers.

On the pictures, you will see the small cherry pheno AK-48 with most of the fan leaves consumed. It is very bushy. The one with the much darker leaves is the AK-48 with the super strong indica pheno. The picture of the plant in vegative mode (the small one on the blue vase) is the super strong indica pheno.

Picture 2: AK cherry pheno seconds before harvest.

Picture 3: AK cherry pheno bud a couple of weeks before harvest.

I started with 6 and got 5 females! After 1 month of vegging under four 4 ft floro's they went into the cabinet under the 400w HPS for the remaining 2 months. I had them in 1 gallon pots and transplanted into 3.25 gallon trash cans that worked great for the cabinet because of the square stature of the cans. They became huge and stretched a bit in flowering but turned out huge buds.

The high is potent and last a while. It's heady in the beginning then turns into more body stone.

I recommend this to any new grower looking for an easy growing plant that turns huge yields, with a powerful high, for very little money.

AK-48 grows fast, is compact and packs a lethal punch. This plant was short when flowering was initiated (about 1 foot) and didn't stretch much, it ended up 2 1/2 foot. Buds formed slowly at first, then during the fourth week exploded with multiple piling pistils. Resin production also went through the roof at this point.

This plant is ready in 50-55 days and it is just so covered in resin it's stupid! The transformation this goes through in the last two weeks is amazing. Smell also increased at this point, skunky/earthy smell.

I harvest by the color trichomes and when they were viewed under my 30x micro they were 50% milky about 30% clear and the other 20%

amber which i think is just about right.Harvest came on day 50 and took about 40 min(plenty of trim for some ice hash).

This lot is still drying/curing.

The taste is nice (no cherries here tho),hashy/earthy with floral undertones.

Now the buzz,unreal very strong.It starts after about two puffs you can feel it behind your eyes then as you progress through your joint you realise you are getting far too stoned, it hits hard leaving you wondering what you were supposed to be doing can make you very not bothered to do anything at all. Inexperienced smokers need not apply!

All seeds cracked in 24 hours, very fast germ rate, popped through the soil after 1 day, seedlings spent 2 weeks under fluoros, then under the 400w MH.

I vegged them for 10 weeks total, tying them down so all the side branches become like the main stem for more yield, as I haven't got much height in the grow room.

They were a quite fussy at first with the nutes, so in the first 2 weeks of your grow, make sure you only feed them just less than half strength nutes, but after that, you can start building it up gradually, feeding them stronger doses each feed until full strength.

Once triggered, these things just simply can't get enough feed, I fed them full strength all the way in flower, and they showed no signs of stress or over-fert at all, but that feed goes somewhere.....trust me!

I've never seen or grown a strain that piles on the weight as quick as this stuff, but it's mostly in early to mid flower, at about 17 - 36 days, that's when all the weight gets put on, after that, it's simply a case of maturing, the growth slows rapidly at about 40 days, and just gets so frosty!

This strain can either be chopped at 50 days like a couple of mine, or it can be left for 65 days if you want, I have 1 left now at 61 days as I type, which will be going another week or so I'd say. My 2 plants were chopped at 52 days, but they seemed to have matured a lot more than the one I still have growing.

Okay, now for the best part.... the HIGH!

I'll just begin by saying a note of CAUTION! This stuff is strong shit, has a different stone nearly every time I smoke it, very strange but NICE.

The first joint I had was a surprise, I smoked the joint watching TV, finished it, and thought shit man that was a waste of time growing that stuff, 5 - 10 minutes later... WACK!

It's a creeper, no doubt about that, I got rushes down my back, like on speed, heart races big time, and the high itself was very intense for the first 10 minutes or so then calmed down, spaces you out for a couple of hours, but now every time I have a joint, the high is different, but still fuckin' good.

Now, it's a case of smoking my first joint, getting a nice heady high, then the second REALLY does it for me, it really blitzes you, at first, a heady high, then the couchlock stone kicks in and puts you to sleep, a nice balance, a very enjoyable experience, but also trippy if you smoke a lot, and at one point I almost panicked for a split second. I will be growing this strain again and again!

After growing this strain again, I have come to realize that in the first (above) grow of AK-48, I had the strong pheno, as after the 2nd time I grew it the smoke wasn't as powerful as the first, but still very nice, but if you get that pheno your in for a good smoke, and the AK-48 is also very consistant in smell, taste, and structure, overall a brilliant strain, easy to grow and a persaonal favourite of mine, and I am currently on my 3rd AK-48 grow, and many more after that!

I started with 4 beans from Nirvana, all sprouted, 3 were female. All three were very similar in Indica appearance & growth. They could hold they're water! Brush up against 1 and you know she is Indica! Nice short nodes developed under my 400w MH. I use organic soil/ferts were provided by pre-soaking the soil with a diluted solution of Earth Juices. Pots were 1 gallon. I'm a closet grower so the space I used totaled 2 ft wide, 4 ft long, & 4 ft high. Flowered under 400w HPS with a PL light reflector (this made a considerable diff than my "other" reflector). Not much stretching was noticed which is always welcomed. Not much nutes were ever added after the initial t.p. Growth was thick & full heavy stems. After 65 days of being as patient as I could be, they blessed me with approx 6-7oz of well above average smoke.

The effects were a little less heady than I prefer but it was still a little heady, considering traits that was good. I will not reserve a spot for this one on keep list. If your looking for an after dinner smoke with possible room for nap this would be a good one for you.

Very quick growing plants. Germinated 5 seeds, 1 didn't crack, 2m and 2f. The two females were similar looking plants. There wasn't a whole lot of stretch. Despite this being an indica they will get huge if you want them to. I've got clones going in a SOG right now and they are looking great.

The two females I grew from seed were very crystallly plants. Wonderful smelling while growing and when dry. I think while smoking, it has a very nice traditional weed smell to it. A very stinky strain.

The yield off the two large female plants was about 14 ounces combined. They were about 4ft tall bushes with the bottoms trimmed.

The stone doesn't live up to the hype of AK47. But its still pretty damn good. Well worth the price it cost me to get the seeds.

I think this is a great commercial strain. The yield is defiantly there. Bag appeal is great.

I wanted this strain because of all the wonderful things I have read about it! It was time for me to try.

Grow: I germinated 6 seeds all showed their white little tails within 12 hrs. I veged them for 30 days. I had no problem with any nutrient uptake with them. The ak likes higher nutrient levels. I saw pre-flowers at day 22 on. I ended up with 3 females. They all grew uniformed in veg. Cloning this plant is extremely easy. You can get roots within 5 days if done right.

Flower: I put the ak in flower when they where about 12 inches tall. In flower I saw two different types of phenos. Their where two, being very Indica like with broad fat leaves. The other being one more sativa with the thinner leaves. The sativa raced to about 43 inches in flower. She smelled the best out of the bunch. The Indicia types stop stretching about 36 inches. They both finished in 53 days.

Yield: The Indica yielded the most each plant dried was 210+ grams. The sativa was very close at 200 grams. I kept two mothers. I couldn't decide on witch to keep.

Smoke: The finished product is a fabulous smoke. To me, it def taste of sandalwood and a little woodies. She is a one hit wonder in my book. I few hits out of your ROOR and you are out all night. I have seen a few experienced smokers complete clam up and twitch on this stuff. I would only offer this to experienced smoker who know what to except.

Final say: I have grown this ak for a year now. I still love it. I will always keep an ak mom in my garden. She is an easy grow and packs a powerful punch.

This was a very easy plant to start. It sprouted in 48 hours and grew fast. Of 5 seeds started 2 were male and 3 were female. I grew them out in HydroFarm/DWC buckets with Flora Nova nutes and Floralicous. Of the 3 female I killed one when a jug of water fell on her, and pulled one up after a couple weeks of veg because it did not seem right. The last female grew pretty fast and branched a lot on her own. I let her veg for 6 weeks-she got fairly large in that time. At 6 weeks I put her in the flower closet that has 1 400 watt HPS one 150 watt HPS and one 175 watt MH. She stretched to about 3x the size she started and after about 2 weeks I had to tie down the top buds. I continued to use the veg nutes for the first 2 weeks of flower then did a 8 hour flush with Florakleen before switching to Floranova Bloom. The buds grew fast and dense and were covered in trichs within 3 weeks-even the sugar leaves were covered in frost. She was a nute hog, making it up to 1 tbsp of Floranova/gallon of water.

All in all it was a very easy grow until the last 3 weeks when we were hit By a hurricane and without power for 10 days. My neighbor let me use his generator for the light but without A/C there was a slight bit of bud rot from the humidity and spider mites managed to get in from outside. I did manage to hold down the mite population until harvest.

She finished at 55 days(or at least I decided it was a good idea to cut her to avoid more bud rot).She produced a very large amount of very dense sticky bud. It was about 4 lbs wet but trimmed. After the dry and 3 weeks cure I wound up with 15.4 oz's of very sticky very sweet buds. Overall there was about 2 oz's of small fluffy buds and the rest was very large buds. The top bud weighed in at 2.5 oz's.

After the cure the bud took on a cherry smell and had a cherry Ludens taste to it. The stone was not as strong as I expected it to be ,but was very nice just the same. I would rate this in the top 5 for ease, looks and potency.

From seed:

I have kept the seeds in a fridge for about 2 years, and almost 100% germination.

They turn out great when planted, and grow long sativa like leaves, just make sure to put the light close so they dont stretch really bad at first.

Veg:

These plants get really tall, and uniform growth, not once at all have i seen this strain stretch in veg, the plants from seed turn somewhat squat. Vegging with clones they turn out amazing, all of the branches stretch way out beggining at the bottom of the plant, making this clone efficient when i put it in flower without FIMing the plant or pruning.

Flower:

Treat them right and they will really begin to stretch and give you these ultimate budsites, usually at the top is the king of the crop, the secondary branches look almost as amazing as the top of the plant as it grows. The cylaxes are a nice green, slightly lighter then the color of the fan leaves, they get a little darker at the end of flower, as they reach their death they will turn a purple hew on the tips of the cylaxes and under the fan leaves. It's a beautiful looking breed, full of moist trichomes that scatter in millions, they are highly crowded overall with trichomes and tend to cover every inch of your plant. In some phenos, cylaxes climb on eachother as it grows, fighting for light. BTW, the cylaxes get really big, the bud is slightly dense and form heavy crowns of candy goodness. Also, it smells of fresh fruits, apples, a tone of honey dew melon smell freshly cut.

Dried:

The smell is slightly mild at this point, the cylaxes keeping the scent in, when you break open the bud, the aroma is so sweet honey dew melon and apples, almost too sweet its wretched. The buds are overall heavy, like its made of iron its so densely heavy, as you squeeze the bud its almost rock solid, but crunches up nicely in a bowl.

Taste:

The taste of the dried bud is sweet, hashy more than sweet, and the slight taste of fresh apples.

High:

This isint creeper bud, within minutes you will feel the heavy effect taken over you. This isint genius bud, more like gotta-lay-down-and-relax kinda bud, its definately on the indica line. I have a friend who is old, and he likes this bud because it settles his bones, he has seen war and had shrapnel in his leg and he says "this stuff is great, makes my leg feel better". This weed definately numbs up your entire body, and makes you forget about the pain you have, and the high suprisingly long lasting. Dumfoundingly potent, it is pretty much one hit, lay down for a few minutes and take a breather, and smoke another bowl. Personally i like these kinds of bud, mind numbingly potent.

This was definately a pleasure to grow. Thankyou Nirvana. This plant was grown from seed and veged for 2 months in which it was fimed and cut back multiple times. I decided to use Lst due to size constraints. This plant was a pretty solid yielder and the buds were definately some of the best I've ever had. This plant has a smell that is totally unique, I did a test on a few good friends, and I took some good dank, and some ak and put them one by one underneath thier nose. They all went DAMN when the ak was placed underneath the nose. I asked them to describe it and they all hinted on some sort of a spice. This is definately a top notch strain in potency, I passed out a few times smoking it, it definately puts your dick in the dirt. I've found that this strain is very good for medical purposes also, for it relieves my ulcer pain and reduces nausea, and increases appetite. If used for medicine, use with caution, when smoked in mass this strain can cause very trippy effects, with sativa like qualities. This plant was grown with 1: 150w high pressure sodium remote ballasted. My Box was an old 15" subwoofer bandpass which I converted. The fans I used were as follows: 1: 4" 80cfm inline duct fan hooked to a homemade carbon scrubber. 1: 120mm 79cfm computer fan blowing on the plant tops and over the bulb. 1: 80mm 27 cfm fan blowing from the bottom at the bulb.

I yielded 48.4 grams of what I weighed, there was more but I predried some buds and left some popcorns on at the end to try and reveg her. I could have yielded more, but this was my first indoor grow and I didn't have the light close enough to the plant until the end. She was a beaut and I am definately growing this strain again.

flower, above each trolley was 1x 600watt hps light canna flores nutrients were used during flower no other addative or 'bud boosters' were used in this grow.

the plants grew fast with broad dark green leaves veged for 4 weeks without the scrog screen, the tallest plant was 16 inches.

flowered under scrog screens for 60 days without any problems temps stayed between 25-26C. i was always scared the smell would be bad as i did'nt have a carbon filter for this grow and also live in an appartment but i was very supprised that there was so little smell after reading so much about ak47 being one of the strongest smelling plants out there.

i wasnt very happy with the yield got an average of 0.60oz per plant 1350grams total or 0.45gram per watt. i believe if i used perlite, better nutrients, and a bloom addative the success would of been much better, growing in trolly's was very neat and tidy.

the buds are very sticky and have good bag appeal, my average joint will have 1 gram ive found that if you do nothing while smoking it it will just send me to sleep and can also be a party killer when smoking too much.

overall growing this plant was the easiest i've grown so far and would definatly reccomend to people new to the hobby. i am currently growing this strain again.

The High:

I first smoked B-52 in Switzerland, the first impression was a lasting one. The high is not for the inexperienced. In Switzerland I found myself watching VH1's Best of the 80's, and completely bugged out, I curled up fetal position in my bed, too high to even pass out, heart racing wondering what the hell reefer I just smoked. I didn't smoke alot of it, I wasn't drinking... It was just really powerful.

Later I grew it out for myself and had similar experiences. The high goes very well with music, almost too well. There were many times where I would smoke a bong or two of B-52 and pop in my favorite MMW album, UnInvisible. Half the time I couldn't make it past track 7 before getting so deep into the music that it would freak me out and I would have to stop the CD.

If you smoke after 11pm, you probably won't fall asleep until 3am.

The Plant:

If you HATE manicuring, you will absolutely love this plant. The buds were perfect little nuggets that would just spiral up the colas. It took me less than 10 minutes to manicure the entire plants' harvest, no joke. All of the small leaves surrounding the bud were so covered in resin they were worth keeping.

The plant did stretch a fair bit, but it wasn't too bad. The colas just kept growing skywards until the day they got chopped.

Oh and the resin content of these buds was ridiculous. Put one small dime sized bud in an electric grinder separate the resin from the plant matter, and the ratio of resin to plant matter is just insane. Almost unnatural.

I only ended up with 1 female B-52. Some were killed by varmit, I gave some seeds away, and one went male. The female produced three branches at every node, so it was a bit of a freak. The yeild was not that great, but every single bud, even the smallest, was a keeper.

It's only $15 for 10 beans, you will NOT be disappointed.

Grower Report

February, 004

I was very impressed with the ease of this grow. From germination to harvest I didn't encounter a single problem other than one hermaphrodite which occurred too late into the flowering cycle to effect any of the other plants. This entire grow was conducted under a combination of soft white and warm white compact fluorescent lights using The Inline CFL Method with a Diagonal SCROG. The average plant height was reduced using a warm color spectrum during vegetative cycle to accommodate the 26 inches of vertical grow space. Average plant height was about 18 inches, and they each produced one giant cola that was so dense it absorbed all of the smaller buds turning each plant into one giant bud. I was completely flabbergasted. My friends couldn't believe their eyes, and later after I told them this grow was conducted exclusively under compact fluorescent lighting those eyes damn near shot out of their respective sockets and hit the wall; however, I was prepared to duck and take evasive maneuvers since the same thing happened to me from my own prior disbelief.

The only element more impressive than the grow itself is the effect of this powerful narcotic. You will begin to understand where this strain developed the name "B52" only minutes after you consume the resinous, sticky, glistening, trichome coated flower loaded in tetrahydrocannabinol oils because you will either feel like you have been hit with a bomb, or you may actually believe that you are in fact a bomb yourself diving at a screaming velocity from a B52 Bomber crashing towards the earth. It must be laser guided or possibly using the new classified M-180 targeting system because this is one bomb that is sure to hit its target every time and leave its hapless victims reeling in a state of collateral damage.

I bought the B52 seeds from SD shop when I was in a'dam. I was looking for some "not-too-expensive" type of sativa taste seeds. B52 (Nirvana) was on my list because of the good comments I read on this StrainGuide. Well, it turned out to be true. An excellent strain, well worth the $15 and doesn't seem to receive much credit!

Grow:

Germinated 3 out of 10 in the pack. One turned out female. The other two plants that I was planning to grow was Shaman (Dutch passion) and White Rhino (Nirvana). Unfortunately all White Rhinos turned out to be male and I got one female Shaman.

The grow was straightforward, no sign of nute burn or stress. On the 6th week when I used PK13/14, the meter was showing 2.5uS and had no nute problems. I flushed on 7th and 8th week and the taste of a quick dried bud was close to excellent...

The buds were full of crystals and resin. Not too much yield though. A huge cola and some nuggets on the side and some pop corns... Compared to the Shaman, the yield was pretty low but full of shiny crystals...

Had some odor problems eventhough I had my carbon filter. I guess it's time to change the carbons...

Taste:

-----

I cannot say that I'm an expert on this. It was a taste much like hash but never tasted something similar to this. A spicy aroma, joyfull, no taste of green (proably because of the flush)

Smoke:

-----

B52 is a potent strain. Takes the stress out, opens your mind to different and parallel thoughts about details at the same time. Wathing movies is strongly recommended, especially LOTR, all three, non stop!

The bottom line; top quality strain, really worth the price!

Grower Report

February, 2005

This was a first time grow, so the efficiency of the garden wasn't that spectacular, however I will be making improvements for future grows.

B-52 was a good plant to start with, since it taught my valuable lessons both in regards to Sativa and Indica traits. I gave it an ease score of 7 because of Ph problems throughout 30% of the grow, and a fungus gnat problem.

Out of 10 seeds, only 3 were female. A couple were hermies, and the rest were males. Despite sufficient lighting, the size of the plants ended up being about 3 and a half feet tall, with thick resinous bud sites. (If you happened to brush up against a bud, your skin would feel stick afterwards.) The plants visually looked beautiful, and the final bud produced did as well. Those 3 females produced around 3.5 ounces altogether.

The bud is light, airy, bud very resinous, and burns much cleaner and clearer than run of the mill stuff. The high itself starts off in sativa fashion with a head rush, but later fades to couchlock in the later part of the high - especially if you are just sitting around and not doing anything.

Over all excellent quality. I would grow this strain again.

I germinated 30 seeds from which 25 sprouted after 2 days. Plants were vegged for 4 weeks reaching around 12 inches in height, feeded with Canna Terra Vega 2 times a week.

12 days after switching to 12/12, 15 plants turned out to be female, 10 were male. I continued to feed Terra Vega this 12 days then switched to Terra Flores and B'cuzz bud booster 2 times a week.

Despite my belief the crop turned out to be mostly uniform with only two ladies showing a more Sativa dominated pheno. Most plants tripled in height the first weeks after 12/12.

I was really surprised at how fast the plants filled out. The buddage at 4 weeks 12/12 was already outstanding. Plants finished in 63 days without any problems.

Total trimmed and dry harvest was nearly 400g and leaved me pleased.

I find this variety good value, easy to grow, high yielding with good potency. Only the taste is a bit harsh.....

For Veg. I used Flouros, early flowering because Big Bud increases overall size about 300% after switching to 12/12.

For Bloom I used 600W HPS. Standard nutes + handwatering. no extra Co2 and only 1 gallon soil pots (TEKKU ~15x15x25). Good ventilation is recommended.

The flowering time was different. In the phenos there was a fast low quality smoke pheno that comes to harvest after 8 1/2 Weeks. The second pheno was the biggest yielder and comes to harvest a week later. The other one is a very sativa-like, maybe neverending pheno that create unstoppable more new calyx (maybe good for revegging).

I only make the clones of pheno 2 to motherplants, pheno2 was the best smoke of my BB series, and the yield was more than pheno 1 and 3.

The Yield was about 60 and 120 grams per plant dry weed.

Grower Report
June, 2003

Oldest commercial strain and I can tell you that I know why it got it's award at the Cup back in '89. Cheap seeds, hardy easy to grow plants, lots of sticky dank buds that you can sell by the quarter-pounder!!!

Guerilla Growin':

Started off with 30 seeds, all germinated in 2 days. The sprouts were put in tiny youghurt cups and taken to the grow spot after 3-4 weeks of vegging. Then I transplanted the little ones directly into the soil in a window of five days of cloudy/rainy weather in June. Found this to be a plus for their root making and overall survival rate. I also transplanted bag when the weather was good and the seedlings got roasted. A good start is all it takes...

The rest was easy as pie: visited the grow spot once every two weeks with two 2L bottles of 15-15-15 fert. Many plants got stunted because of the poor soil, but they all pulled through though. Had to chop a lot of males also but that's what you get for growing in soil that has the Ph of 5.5.

Plants were very hardy and the bugs loved them. I've found that locusts, snails and cattarpillars love to munch on Big Bud leaf but the plants grow fast as if they didn't give a damn about anything. Word to the wise: indoors these plants suffer a lot from spidermites so be equipped and prepaired!

The Harvest:

Harvested in early October because I feared the rains and therefore the mold. When I chopped I found that none of my 5 females had any sort of mold, neither did my friend with his Big Buds. We both found a trace of bud rot due to the dew, but that's not a drawback. It only tastes harsher when smoked...

Filled 2 trashbags with the buds from 5 plants and it smelled so damn skunky. Don't know why, but some people enjoy this smell. I shure don't. Dried the shit in my room and couldn't sleep at night for three days. You could smell it from outside my room through the door!

The Smoke:

Great smoke! Never get tired of it. Can be rough for the neck and you do occasionally cough (oldschool skunk). Can't make a joint without scissors as it's so sticky. The high is very sociable and literally you can't stop laughing. It has some stoney qualities to it, but I cut mine early so the CBD didn't really form. Last year I left them longer than this year and it was killer. Half an hour for you is 3 minutes at the clock and that sort of shit. Not to be taken lightly. I've had some panic attacks from it, not to mention powerful heart palpitations.

Personal Opinion:

Great dank. Deffinitely going to grow it again and again. You can get up to half a kilo off a female and I'm not exagerrating in any way. I saw it. I've had a super female, that 1 in 4 that they said in the description. I didn't leave her fatten her buds as she should have, but she did form the fattest stickiest buds I've ever seen!

Few pics are mine...

The plant grew exceedingly well thru most of it's growth and produced nice tight nuggets average roughly the size of golfballs and several colas above ten inches in length (Some LST used in early veg) The buds were very sticky and trichome developement wasy dense with long thin resin glands giving the flowers the appearence of being frosted with sugar. Yield I felt was not as impressive as the hype but it was still a good yielder just not quite what I expected. I was most disappointed in the flavor. Breaking it up or smelling the smoke in the room it has a good pungent classic marijuana odor but when you smoke it there seems to be no flavor and that's after a one month cure. The high is okay but nothing to get excited about some who have sampled it report a sort of "Dark High". I find the high also failed to live up to the hype. Bottom-line is it produce a bag of smoke that you feel good about and maybe even get excited about it while cleaning some but when you smoke it you are disappointed in the taste but soon don't care because you are pleasantly buzzed. An okay source of bulk average weed.

This was my first grow. I grew 5 plants of Nirvana Big Bud and 5 plants of Sensi Early Skunk together. Over all I found the growing process to be fun and fairly easy. I think the Big Buds are a very hardy and easy to grow strain which I'm sure made things a little easier for me. 3 out of 5 plants ended up being female. The plants yielded with and efficiency of about .5g/Watt.

I trimmed all but the smallest of leaves. Some of the small leaves were just so covered with trichs I just had to leave the on. I dried the buds by hanging in a cool dark area with pretty good air circulation. I dried them for about 5 days then I started the cure process by placing them in mason jars. I gave them some air every day for a few weeks. Now a month later on some of the first harvest I have fully cured, prime bud. The smell is very pungent with a background of sweet fruitiness. On a rare occasion I'll take a hit that is a little harsh on the exhale, but no big deal. This bud is so much better than anything I've ever bought. The high is great. 3 to 5 hits off my bowl and I am totally fried. Everything just tingles. It's such a pleasant high that stays on strong for a few hours.

I had mixed results with this strain. It is a very pretty plant. I had 4/4 females and 2 died of root rot from the best I can guess. Unfortunately I flowered them at only one month so the yield and potency was only a little better than average. The high was nice, somewhat heady with little couchlock, but there was a definite ceiling on the stone and it never got me 'too' high, although due to the lowered yield it never made it to a full cure. Everyone else who tried it (who didn't smoke a whole lot or smoked schwag) thought it was fantastic. I'm a fairly heavy smoker so that probably explained some of the lack of potency as well. Harvested at around 57 days though it probably could have gone at least 7 to 10 days more.

But if stressed too much it will hermie on ya! I only had two phenos: 3 Indica doms and 1 Sativa dom. The Sativa had the fruitier smell and was the most resin producer of the two. I started 2 Blue Mystic seeds. One of which runted out in early veg. The other was the fastest growing, most healthy plant I had in my garden. This was my first grow with HID so the grow was plagued with newbie errors, which most of the plants fell victim to.

The Blue Mystic flourished through veg and reached the height of 2 feet before the other had even seen 16 in! This might be the Sativa in my pheno, but nonetheless this baby was healthy. She was my heighest yielding plant, giving me a little over an oz while others gave me about 1/2 oz or so. This girl was very frosty during the early stages of flowering while others took a while longer for the frost to fill up. I was surprised this $15 strain produced the amount of frost it did.

The bud was very dense and had a very nice smell. I would recommend this one to anyone looking for a low-cost strain which is resistant to newbie mistakes.

Very easy plant to grow, hard to over fert. Mixed pheno's though... indica looking leaves but almost sativa like in the height. She would have easily gone 5 feet if it had not been topped.

Very nice up heady type high ,but that could be because it was harvested earlier than it should have been. Didn't get the last two weeks to develop the classic indica stone, but all in all, very satisfying... but not knockout by any means.

Nice yield- 90 grams dried per plant. If you want a dependable plant that is easy to grow with a good yield and a nice, social stone to it, add this one to your list.

I tried growing the other 9 beans last year, and got lucky with the last seed this year. I Vegged indoors till about 5 nodes under fluros. I transplanted into an organic soil in a 5 gallon bucket outdoors in mid June. Basically fertilized a few times, let nature take its course for the most part. The plant grew into a nice 5 feet bush with multiple small budsites. I feel the yield could have been better had I tied down some branches and payed more attention to her. Overall yield was about 2 ounces of some fluffy sticky smelly buds. Great taste and a good overall stone. Potency isn't crazy, but it gets my buddies and myself fairly toked up.

First off let me say I'm gutted I didn't keep a mother of this, I threw it away due to space restrictions. This plant is easy to grow. I put five seeds in and got two females, one of which I gave to my mate.

The one I kept I took four clones off of it, they all rooted in about ten days then they were potted up in to 5 ltr pots which consisted of all mix, extra perlite, vermiculite, and potting compost from b&q. The mother was then chucked due to the space in the veg room. The clones were vegged for a week then put in to flower. Once they were put in, these plants grew fast and produced pretty buds. I found them very easy to maintain and if you leave them for the full 56 days you will be rewarded with buds that are begging to be harvested. I'm glad I've still got some seeds because I will do this plant again (after S.A.G.E and others). The taste is nice sort of berry with the white strain undertones. The buzz is nice the first one hits you quite hard and lasts for about 2 hours then I find I can smoke lots of this because of the taste. It's just so nice.

Out of four seeds only two popped up, out of the two one was female. Seeds started in cups for two weeks, then transplanted into 3 gallon grow bags filled with ocean forest soil and 1/3 perlite. Veg went smoothly with my 430 watt son agro bulb, 5 wks and I got a height avg. of 22 inches. I fed them crappy nutrients during this time (dyna grow and dyna bloom), causing some problems and imbalances combined with some inexperience and I got some leaf burn and actual necrosis of leaves.

The plant looked excellent going into 12/12 and about two weeks into the bloom cycle she lost a few leaves and changed some color. They required more nutrients so I gave it to her, eventually buying Canna Terra series nutrients and feeding her @ half strength until I got used to the nutrient dosage. Eventually the plant got what they needed and finished in 66 days.

Smoke report: Bitter and harsh; I need to perfect my drying or something because it was very expando-matic and harsh.... possibly it was the THC content?? It was not a cough like type hit you, can kinda hold it in, but not for that long. Over all a good smoke, excellent smell, and you can taste it when you exhale through your nose. Mmm I love that.

Over all I recommend most of the 'white strains' from nirvana, for 15 British pounds you can't go wrong. I've had great luck so far with nirvana seeds and I have other nirvana seeds I wanna grow in the near future like... papaya, PPP, snow white, aurora indica, master kush, and ak48...

June, 2003

Got this strain because I read many things about it that I wanted to try... Good yield, great taste, sometimes psychedelic high, blue hue late in flower... Here is what this experience turned out like!

Veg:

I germinated 6 seeds, out of those 5 made it.

Growth was very good, they grew very uniform. The growth was virtually identical and so was the color and indica dominant appearance.

The plants grew huge dark green fanleaves, very different from most other strains.

I've heard many people complain about root rot and over fertilization issues, but I didn't experience any problems with these plants.

Preflowers showed very late and were not very obvious when they did.

Another problem was the clonability. They rooted perfectly well, that was ok, but the plants focus on upward growth until week ~4-5, so there are not many shoots at all to take cuttings from.

Flower:

The first thing I experienced in flower was that you better be careful when handling the plants, as the stems are very brittle. Strong but brittle. It turned out that I got 2 females out of the 5.

A very nice trait is the unusual behavior of concentrating on lower growth, so you don't end up with one huge main cola, but with several equally sized buds, the main bud being one of the smaller ones usually.

The buds really put on weight, just as I expected a very indica dominant plant to grow.

Instead of getting a coating where you can see every single trichome they got a thin layer of small trichomes, leading to a very funky look.

Late in flower the BMs were the first ones to notice a mg def, leaves curled and yellowed, even tho the other plants in the system just barely started noticing something was wrong.

No hues of blue were visible tho, even tho temps were around 15°C at night.

Smell was sweet, very pleasant.

Harvested at 56 days, some say let them go longer, but mine seemed right.

Smoke:

The finished product: compact hairy buds, spicy sweet smell.

I'd call this connoisseur weed.

The smoke is very smooth and tasty, therefore joints are a pleasure.

On the other hand it's not the kind of knockout high which makes it good for daytime smokes... Leaves you functioning while, i.e. slightly screwing with your visual perception (you notice things you wouldn't notice normally... Light effects and such, all look great).

As I said, tasty but not that strong, great to enjoy weed and for people who want a good smoke bud don't need a killer high.

Opinion:

I think what really is a great trait is the yield. Even buds that don't receive much light put on good weight. Growing it again.

To date probably my favorite strain so far. Evenly mixed 50/50 Sativa Indica plant that has a very large yield of frosty sweet buds. I did receive a very Indica Afghani looking plant but turned out to be male. The other 2 females were pretty much uniform in every possible aspect.

The seeds I received in the breeder pack were large, plain almost grey in appearance with little to no stripes. 100% germination rate in soil. The plants grow quick during veg and can take some abuse. Very hardy strain, excellent for beginners or greenthumbs.

The smell was very minimal to nonexistent even during late flower. If you did catch a whiff of the plant the smell was sweet and not skunky-weed like at all.

I have heard that Bubble Gum produces best if left untopped but even if you have to top them they produce very well. A great producer in any setup.

The smoke from Nirvana's Bubble Gum is top notch. I mean super frosted light green buds that smoke like pure kief. The first rip expands in your lungs and make you cough it out. Sweet taste but harsh from all the trichomes. Bubble Gum has been known to take out my friends with a quickness. Be careful smoking it after youve been drinking, it will cause rapid dizziness and make you throw up.

The high is also top notch, quick hitting with a great up and giggly high. The only strain that made me more giggly was "Dumpster". Needless to say I would recommend this strain as your freebie from Gypsy. There aren't many strains this good for so cheap.

Grow: Plants were very vigorous... Most of the females were very stout save one more Sativa leaning pheno (my favourite) which grew a bit lankier. All the plants had side branches which kept up with the main colas in length.

All the plants were quite frosty and beautiful but the more Sativa pheno was in a class of its own in terms of beautiful bud structure and trichome coating... very lovely. VERY stinky girls these are... the stinkiest I've grown... but it's such a lovely stink.

Smoke: Dried and cured buds from the more Sativa pheno are my favourite... they have a grape bubblegum smell with a hint of muskyness behind it that gently reveals it's Skunk heritage.

The rest have a more pronounced, but still subtle, bubblegum smell (like the dry stick type of gum in trading card packs.) I absolutely love opening the jars of these buds and taking a big whiff.

In terms of potency I must say I was quite pleasantly surprised by the Nirvana Bubble Gum... even though I had read such glowing reports I really didn't expect it to be such nice smoke. The taste is piney and the smoke is fairly soft but very lung expanding.

The effects are mostly in the body, without being debilitating, but there is also enough head in there to keep things interesting. Absolutely PERFECT smoke for watching DVDs or playing video games.

Supposedly derived from Bubble Gum (TH Seeds, Serious Seeds). My germ was 5/5. Male to female ratio was 2/5. Both phenos where identical. I vegged this one for 5-6 weeks. Does very good in Veg. It grows real fast and vigorous. Nothing overwhelming though. Grew much shorter and Indica dom. (had Sativa looking leaves). Nice side branches. Bubble Gum is easy to clone as well.

Grew these two Bubblegum plants indoors from seed. I had two different phenos present themselves. One leaned to the Sativa side, the other to the Indica side. The Sativa leaning pheno smelled of the famed grape bubblegum while the Indica pheno simply smelled very sweet but not exactly "grapey".

The Indica stayed nice and short, about 36" at end of flower. The Sativa had to be tied down because it was stretching a bit, if not tied it looks like it would have been about 9" taller than the Indica.

In terms of potency, the Sativa leaning pheno blows the Indica away, and the Indica is in no way wimpy. Just that the Sativa is THAT much better. I let the Sativa go longer so that has a lot to do with it.

The Sativa went 60 days and the Indica went 49 days in flower. (Counting from onset of flower, not from switch of the lights).

Overall, I give the strain my highest recommendation (coming from a newbie so take it for what it is, just an opinion). I will definitely make room for this strain in my garden in the future after I have a chance to grow out a few more strains.

Grower Report

I germinated two seeds in a wet paper towel that was in a small tupperware container that was on my DSL modem. All seeds germed within 30 hours. I then planted one in a 1 gallon pot, and the the other one in a 6 inch pot. Later in the grow the one(female) that was growing in the 6inch pot got chopped by someone. So leaving me with my other female in the 1 gallon pot which grew better then the other one having more room for the roots to grow. When it was time to flower I transplanted it to a 3 gallon pot where it stretched double it's size, and packed on the buds.

The bubblelicious grew very fast and vigorous in vegetative growth. The one in the 1 gallon pot grew nice and bushy. The one that was in the 6 inch pot grew straight up and more sativa like. I really like this strain for it's ease. I barely payed money for anything. It was a very basic and cheap grow. I used miracle grows all purpose nutes for veg. which it seemed to appreciate very much. I would water it using the weigh method. I was actually surprised at how fast it grew, before I knew it, she had tons of preflowers, and was ready to flower her.

I then transplanted her to a 3 gallon pot of miracle grow. and gave her a good dosage of miracle grows bloom fert. after a little time it started showing MG deff. So I gave it a half teaspoon of epsom salt in a gallon of water, and then she was fine. At the first 2 weeks of flowering it doubled in size real quick. Soon after that it started packing on all the trichomes, and weight it could. It started to concentrate on filling in the buds a lot at the end. I wish I would of gave her 5 more days thinking the buds would of been less fluffy. This was my first harvest, and I learned a lot. I would reccomend this strain for all begining indoor growers, seeing how much I learned from it. I know a lot of right from wrongs now giving me more confidence in my next grow knowing it's going to be better.

I thought It was time to harvest her so I chopped her, manicured her, and seperatly hung on the buds upside down on hangers in my closet for a week. I then put all the buds in glass jars for cure. The finished product was fluffy, very sticky, and lots of orange hairs. When smoked it tasted so sweet and fruity. The high was great, felt the couchlock feeling all over my body and in my head. Great for kicking back with friends. The only thing I was dissapointed with was the yield. I yielded around a skimpy ounce from her. So overall I would say this is a strain for the starters to learn because of it's ease and great female ratios.

The lone female of 4 beans I had left, this girl was the shining star of my garden. She vegged strong. I flowered all my plants early, this girl grew from about 10" to over 2' before harvest. Bot too picky about nutes or watering, and excellent resin production, I'd recommend this strain to anybody. She could have gone 60 days, but I had to chop early. Her stone is very potent, full body and euphoric.

On July 16th 2004 I germinated 5 seeds of the Nirvana Bubblicious and had 100% success having all 5 crack open. I used FoxFarm ocean forest soil with a small mix of perlite in 16 oz. drinking cups with drainage holes on the bottom to start the seedlings. I acquired a used 400w HPS ballast with a hood from a friend and added a new Hortilux 430w HPS bulb to it, and immediately put the 16 oz. cups under it. About 9 days later the seedlings were transplanted into 6 inch by 9 inch plastic pots, giving them a nice dose of superthrive right after. At this point I was feeding them fox farm grow big in light doses (1/2 strength). Two weeks later I transplanted them into 11inch by 10 inch pots, again giving them a nice dose of superthrive afterwards by now I beefed up the feedings to normal everyday feeding again with fox farm grow big.

Amazingly just prior to transplanting into 5 gallon buckets, I was astonished to find I was the proud 1st time grower of 4 females and one male (which eventually was destroyed). One and a half weeks after the transplants into the 5 gallon buckets, I flipped from a 20/4 to a 12/12 photo period and prepared for the flowering stage. During flowering i fed them fox farm big bloom and earth juice micro blast in normal doses. The Bubliscious grew tall to about an avg height of 45 inches and the trees eventually got bushier, creating a very impressive canopy. The last two feedings included some tiger bloom I should note. Since this was my first real grow with a decent set up I think I did a great job, I still need to refine my feeding regimen though. I let the Bubblicious flower for exactly 65 days, I then cut the stalks on November 7th 2004 and hung them up to dry naturally with a single fan for 6 days (bone dry).

Thru the entire process my temps never exceeded 78"° and never dropped below 66"°. I found that these cooler temperatures were key in producing a Trihcome laden canopy and a danky smell.

Unfortunately due to lack of space I had to give a fellow OG-er the runt out fo the four Bubliscious, which made a friend happy and opened up some space for light to shine through. Out of the three plants I yielded a total of 179 grams of bone dry and manicured dank Nirvana Bubblicious buds.

The Nirvana Bubblicious smokes very well, it really surprised me and all my friends because of the cheap price of the seed packs. I honestly didn't expect such quality and high trichome production from this nirvana seed pack, so it was a pleasant surprise. Smoking my first bowl I immediately was taken over by the musky thick and robust smoke that wasn't very harsh but eventually made you cough when given the chance to expand in the lungs. Slight to no after taste, yet leaves a nice candy odor lingering in the air. When I open up the jars the whole house is stinking with Bubblicious.

I would like to thank every one who helped me along the way and stopped by my threads, overgrow is truly a unique experience and makes this hobby twice as rewarding, *((*(SohcDutch)*))****

January, 2005

Started with 4 seeds, all-germed, but 1 was to slow so I chucked it. I planted the other 3 plants then and put them under a 15w flouro. When all three seeds hit the surface, they had purple stems and multi colour leafs, so I knew this was going be a colourful plant! I switched to a 250w HPS 2 weeks into veg.

After 4 weeks the plants were showing sex! 2 females and 1 male. The male was the shortest plant; really tiny it looked 100% indica. I then topped these two females, and re-topped 1 again 10 days later.

I started flowering at 8 weeks. I had spider mite problems by this stage but didn't want to use to much spray, so not allot I could do about it.

I fed with Terra vegga and flores by the way.

The plants looked very nice, with beautiful purple stems and veins.

When flowering the plants stretched loads, as I had the nodes nice and tight throughout veg. I had to add another fan at the top as the buds had grown right up to the light and were starting to burn.

When I started flowering I had a nute problem though, and the leaves started to go yellow very fast. Not an easy plant to grow.

The plant got covered in loads of hairs and the buds started to swell out, they got much bigger than I thought they would, and more hair growth kept coming over the top of the buds already formed. I tied the buds back from the light and to increase yield some more.

I started a early flush about 3 1/2 weeks b4 finish, and the plants got very colourful, most leaves turned yellow, but some went purple and sum even red! The plant started to stench too, very strong candy smell.

This is the crystallised plant iv grown yet! Lots of big THC crystals all over the plant.

I chopped the plants at 56 days, they could have gone longer but they had lost nearly all leaves. The plant that was chopped twice yielded 1 3/4 oz, and the plant chopped once yielded 1 3/8 oz. I was very impressed with this as my last grow with the same set-up yield 3/4 oz.

The manicured buds looked very special. Great bag appeal, real crystals and colourful.

The smell of a bag of weed is hard to hide! It will stink wherever you go, even in a baggy, in a baggy, in a tin, in a bag. The smell is sweet like candy, with a strong skunk odour underneath.

This is one of the tastiest buds iv tried. All other bud tastes boring compared to this. When I 1st dried it and took it out, skinned up and passed it around my mates, they all said, whoa it tastes of bubblegum, and I didn't even tell them what it was! Other tastes iv picked up off it some times are like a bubble bath taste, not in a bad way, also one of my mates has described it as a perfume taste.

The stone is quite couch lock but not fully. I have sometimes got that funny feeling you get inside when you take shrooms, if you know what i mean.

Overall id say this is some top bud, looks brilliant, taste great, a good producer, and potent too! Top bud!

Germed 3 seeds by soaking them in a cup of water for 12 hours then placing them into 16 oz cups filled with miracle grow soil. All 3 popped within 2 days and were placed in a 2' x 2' cab under a vertical 150 HPS. Due to a lack of proper ventilation these plants grew slowly at first in the high heat environment.

After transplanting to 8 inch pots all three plants started to take off. Flowering was initiated 30 days after germination and none of the three had reached sexual maturity (alternating nodes). It took over 2 weeks for the first plant to show it's sex..a male. Second plant showed 2 days later, a female! Third plant showed a few days after that and it was male. Just as I was ready to throw out the male plants about a week after showing I noticed that the first male had started shooting out female flowers, it had hermied on me. I attributed this 100% to the high heat environment and I believe it would not have hermied under normal conditions.

Finally I was able to place the one female under a 430 HPS with excellent ventilation. I also did a final transplant into a 5 gal. bucket. This is when the plant started to really take off. It stretched...and stretched...and stretched some more. I think it went through 3 separate stretch periods when it was all said and done. Bud production was slow to keep up to the stretch at first and the leaf/calyx ratio was poor. Trich production was also slow in the beginning but both caught up after the plant finished stretching. Unfortunately I had to harvest this plant at day 70, I felt it could have gone another 10-14 days to reach it's full potential.

I was initially pissed because this plant did stretch so much and it took forever and I couldn't wait any longer to harvest it, however after smoking the buds and giving some to friends I am very pleased with the final results. It gives a wonderful high that lasts your typical 2 hours or so and I was slow to build a tolerance to this strain. Taste is fantastic. I find myself opening the jar daily to catch a whiff of it's aroma. Yielded over 2 ounces from this plant, buds were so heavy at the end on branch snapped, other were bent over from the weight. I will definitely grow this one again but knowing that I need at least 15 weeks from seed to harvest if I get the same pheno.

This was my first grow and I just have to say I'm pretty happy with it. I started three seeds in 1, 5 1/4 liter pots and I grew them in those pots until they showed sex. 2/3 turned out to be males, so I transplanted that female to a 4 liter pot. I vegged the plants only for one month and they grew very slowly. In veg I used 82w of CFL. In flower I used 100w HPS lamp. In the beginning of the flowering I started to train that to SCROG and it was best way to do because I had really limited height for my plant. I should have vegged it longer to get bigger yield. Citral was very smelly, although I had a carbon scrubber to cut some odor away. Without carbon scrubber whole grow area would've smelled very interesting.

High is pretty nice, not too stoney.

Although it was my first experience of growing, I have had quite no problems. The plants have seemed since the beginning very strong and lush, they have had a fast increase but they remained very short and squat.

On four plants I have had 3 females, the flowering has begun approximately ten days after I reduced the light hours to 12. The flowering has continued regularly with a uniform increase of the buds that have begun a lot soon to cover themselves of resin.

In the end there was therefore so much resin that the buds were white and sparkling. I recommend to all the inexpert growers to make experience with this strain. The smell wasn't very strong, you could feel it only by scouring the buds, after the drying the smell as also the taste have become quite like a fruit. The effect is quite only body, with an stimulation of the appetite outside from the common one, overall it is however enough strong.

Planted in regular soil, in the ground, outdoors, south UK. Fed only twice with Tomato food at the start of flowering, watered only 2 or 3 times throughout the whole season.

Genetically, the Nirvana version is a Durban Poison crossed with Skunk#1 but they don't make that clear. Kulu seeds is also, Durban Poison crossed with Skunk#1 but that is actually labeled as that.

Some give an almost aniseedy smell and taste. Some turned blue! Mixed Indica/Sativa looking plant, due I suppose to it's crossing with Skunk#1, really large tight buds but skinny leaves, heavy resin production.

At maturity, even though topped at the 5th node, was well over 6ft. Wind can become a problem due to the plants size. In fact my last grow of Durban x Skunk was cut short by strong winds which snapped the stems maybe a week before perfection...even so, the plant is potent and sticky. Very tough, isn't susceptible to mould or pests.

A really sweet smoke and really benefits from a cure. I liken it to a fine wine!

One of only 2 plants (the other being Hollands Hoop) that I can guarantee for beginners and professionals alike, guaranteed a harvest in even the worst years! Fantastic!

100% germination. Got 2 nice females and 2 phenotypes. Both were quite easy to grow.

Pheno#1:

I heard this strain is a cross between durban poison and a Dutch Skunk. Well I think this was more on the skunky side than the other one. This pheno came up quite unexpected. It was my smallest plant (planted later than the other ones) and didn't get very much attention until it started flowering.

Vegetative growth was good but nothing special. Large, light green, 7-fingered leaves which, after topping, turned into smaller 5-fingered leaves.

This pheno started flowering first. After 2 weeks it started turning purple. I was very surprised and it looked very nice throughout flowering.

The leaves also turned into a darker green colour. Very good looking plant. The smell was very fruity.

This pheno also yielded best though it was the smallest. It had 4 long colas.

The smoke on this one is fabulous. Not super strong but still the best of all. I really loved the taste, especially after one month of curing. Best tasting strain I ever had.

This was in every aspect the best of the 2 phenos

Pheno#2:

This pheno leaned more to the durban poison side, I think.

This pheno did best in vegative state. Fimmed it once. Light green leaves throughout the whole life of this plant.

Flowering was a little disapointing. It started flowring only a few days after the other one but looked like it was developing much slower. Actually the buds just weren't going to get that big. It were all small buds with not much crystals. This pheno also turned purple in late flowering.

The yield wasn't very big with all those little buds.

Smoke was almost as potent as the other pheno though it had less crystals.

I was very pleased with the results except for potency but that's not the most important thing for me.

Grower Report

February, 2004

Early Misty is an Indica heavy hybrid with strong wide leaves and a low, bushy profile.

It is recommended as a beginner's strain and this is a accurate recommendation - it is hardy, tolerates variation in climate well and suffers slips and spillages involving nutes. I grew this as part of my first grow and it held up much better to my abuses than the Northern Lights in the same room.

The grow technique was fairly standard - 18/6 for about 7-8 weeks vegging allowed the plants to grow to a reasonable size. Then a switch to 12/12 after which sex was easily determined from preflowers - males culled, females kept on. Fertilization was performed every other watering with half strength Baby-bio which was fine except for its lack of trace elements (especially zinc).

Just to point out - the pictures attached show the plants in pots that are far too small, this was rectified shortly after. Like all cannabis plants Early Misty will thrive with root room.

The leaves develop few trichomes, at least in my experience, so are little use for making hash. However, there are a lot of large leaves left over at the end so cannabutter or BHO are viable alternatives.

The yield was a little disappointing - few buds and they were fairly small, although this may have been a lack of skill on my part that caused a stressed plant to under produce.

The smoke is very smooth, tasty and results in a lot of giggling and inability to move from the sofa.

I also made some brownies with the trash - a strange experience that made me feel somewhat ill, not recommended.

All in all, a good hardy beginners strain, but don't expect mind-blowing results.

P.s. apologies - the pictures all date from approx. 6 weeks of veg. I lost my camera shortly after therefore could not photograph flowering and the harvest.

October, 2003

First grow, outdoor, started in May, ended in October, flowering started early August. Despite it's name, it's NOT an early plant.

It attracted all the insect from the entire garden, but with light usage of pesticide (none in bloom) the plant managed to get by, and produced very nice results. The plants became 3m high, while in pots of 35l. 250g per plant.

Phenotypes were vastly different, all were very tall, but some had the Sativa look, which others were really tall Indicas. The Sativa plants have a lovely effect, very talkative, energetic. Makes you want to get up and dance/talk for an hour, lots of resin on the flowers/leaves. The Indica phenotype is very dissapointing, low effect, low resin production. Not much goo on the flowers, and nothing on the leaves at all. The effect is relaxing, but that's it.

All in all, very good plant for a first grow, very easy to keep going. 50% of the plants produce great weed, 50% just suck.

This was a nice strain to grow, I was very happy with most of the growth, but had some problems with it wanting to grow through the roof. The high is nice and happy. It is a good day time high and very functionable. If you hit it too much, then you're in trouble. I was very happy with the total outcome of this strain from Nirvana and I kept a good mother plant. I will be running some clones of this strain, you won't be disappointed with this strain for 15 bucks. This strain has more than enough resin and is very sticky. It will glow at night if you hit it with a light.

I grew 2 plants, both were females. The result was very different from what I expected. I bought these seeds hoping to get a pure sativa, that would give me an idea of that legendary Haze high. Instead, I got indica plants (how did that genes get in there???) that grew fat leaves, and had some of the most resined buds I ever grew, in fact, they were the most cristally plants from the garden, even more than the Nirvana WW and other indicas. I got happy to grow them, but definitely they were not even close to pure sativas. Next time I''ll grow them along with the indica plants.

The plants were grown outdoors, very late in the season, when the photoperiod was under 12/12. They finished at about a foot high, so the yield was way too low, but if grown bigger I believe they will be good yielders. The grow was easy and problem free, all organic. It's hard to tell how long to finish, but I guess it was not more than 9 weeks. I think these would grow very well indoors, but they do stretch a bit more than the average indicas.

I believe this strain is a good commercial choice, because it produces some serious thric coverage, that cures to that white color and have a great bag appeal. Not as good yields as other indicas but keep in mind that it is sold as Haze.

Now the smoke report itself. Very pleasant to smoke, this strain will not give you that energetic high, but also will NOT let you down, the body feeling is very good, with a relax (NO couchlock) and warm feeling, kinda increases the tactile feelings. Makes a little hurricane in the head, you can stop it, like having many ideas in the same time, kinda hard to keep in focus. Just like think: I go to the kitchen, then you go to bath-room and think: I think I didn't want to come here... I don't know well how to describe this (my english is not that good).

All in all, it is surely a nice choice, and has some Haze in it. I''ll surely grow it again. A very good choice for those that want a sample of the Haze, but just can't wait too long. It's not a pure sativa. If you want to get the real deal, better go to TFD''s O Haze.

Hollands Hoop does smell, but like most cannabis plants, they only really smell when you disturb them. Matures a bit later than advertised...

maybe due to global warming but instead of finishing early - mid September...can go a bit later into October!

Not the most potent of plants...nor the tastiest...not even the biggest yielder...but a damn fine all rounder let me tell you!

These are my observations of "Ice" from Nirvana seeds....

Plant size and formation

...500-600 mm high, about the same in width.. large leaves (one resembled more indica) very long stems on the leaves , keeping them from covering any bud sites , very fast grower , fills out to very well shaped plant with many bud sites and medium to large buds

Yield...

Very good, 135 grams dry on the best yielding plant of the 4 females I grew; the lowest was just less than 100 grams...

Maturing time... (Outdoors)

From seed to harvest total of around 77 days , a few took about 10 days more, she grew very quickly and showed sex in the first few weeks , I was impressed to see that it had the vigor to still form a good size plant , actual flowering days were hard to count , but were noticeably quick ..

Bud size and form :)

... Nice tight bud formation, dark golden/green in colour, very frosty...Were up to 3 inches in diameter on first plant harvested, slightly larger on the plant with the looser buds ..

Uniformity..

Out of 4 females they were all slightly different, wasn't a bother due to the high quality and pleasant smells they all exhibited.. 2 were similar in look and smell , with slight variations , and the other 2 were quite different to all , a sweeter , slightly looser bud (probably the best yielder but suffered mould ) , one of the sweeter plants seemed to more resemble an indica in leaf shape and bud form , had a very bubble gummy smell ..

Smell and taste

... Pleasant "skunky smell", taste was very similar to super skunk i recently harvested, quite bitey with a strong aftertaste ...an elusive perfumy taste ...

Stoned..

strong stoned , much in the head , comes on fast, can also feel it in my arms - little numb ,sort of buzzy feeling , nice ..

well that's how she performed folks , i enjoyed the grow , the smoke was memorable , with the indica pheno being the strongest overall ,would definitely try again , a great performer ..

... Total yield from the 4 plants was 415 grams thereabouts, will keep the wolf from the door for a few weeks id say...

Ice is one of my faves. It produces so many resin glands that the plant is completely covered. The high is nice and uplifting and will not turn you into a couch potato. Ice is good to smoke before doing something active like biking or hiking. The high creeps up on you after smoking ... you might end up smoking 3 bowls before you realize how stoned you really are. The smell of the plant while flowering is amazing: very sweet smelling with undertones of skunk. This smell intensifies with curing.

The plant seems to really use up the nitrogen during flowering. I had this problem more when using chem fert. About halfway through flower it would go very yellow. During veg feed heavy with nitrogen but do not and feed veg nutes until the second week of flower and you shouldn't have this problem.

The Grow

This is my second Ice plant grown, the first was male. It was an extremely vigorous strain. I used Sams Choice soil with a 40% mix of perlite. During veg I used Miracle Grow AP 15-30-15. She was vegged with 100 watts of CF's for 5 weeks and 13" at which point she showed female pre flowers and I set her up with 400W HPS all for herself. After 14 days of flower she was stretched up to 32" and her flowers had formed. I used Sam's choice Deep feeding 10-52-10 for the first 3 weeks and Shultz Expert Gardener 10-60-10 for the remainder of flower. She had no smell during veg. She did not smell in flower until the last week during the flush when all I could smell was a mango scent. Throughout the grow temps ranged from 62F - 89F and humidity from 30%-60%.

The Harvest

Her last day of 12/12 was the 45th day into flower and she was 38" tall. She sat in 24 hrs of darkness and was harvested on her 46th day. I removed all of the branches and manicured them. They were hung to dry in my closet with a fan and a couple of ONA blocks. After 4 days she was then re manicured and put into a tin container. Her scent has become less fruity and more like a real tangy kind of smell. This phenotype smells NOTHING like ganja at all. No one could get over just holding the buds up to their noses and inhaling its stench. Yield was 129 Grams off of this one plant after cure.

The Smoke Test

I had three people separately test the bud and I documented their impressions so I could give the best possible opinions of Nirvanas' Ice.

Smoker #1 is a chronic smoker and has been most of his life. He usually smokes the best in town, and could not stop drooling over this. He rates it as one of his top 3 smokes of his life. Causes munchies.

Taste = 8

Smell = 10

High = 7

Smoker #2 is another "pothead" :) and while not as excited as smoker #1 definitely thinks it is incredibly good smoke.

Taste = 8

High = 9

Smoker #3 is in love with Ice. She thinks that it smells like cucumber skin. Causes munchies.

In Review

The only sad thing was that I was not prepared to clone as this was definitely the mother plant I have dreamed of. I will be growing this again and praying this phenotype visit my garden once more.

I thoroughly enjoyed this plant! I am re-growing it right now. Don't let my numbers fool you, I think I may have messed up somewhere with the hydro solution. It isn't the plant's fault, even though I wish there was no Ruderalis in the strain (causes early flowering), I wanted to veg my plant for a bit longer and see if I could get a more pleasing yield.

The trichomes cover everything and shimmer in the light, the smell is definitely pleasing but hard to describe or put a finger on. The main intense smells come from the buds actually being broken into bits. Low odor was a major issue with my setup and I'm glad I got a plant that doesn't make the whole house smell like growing pot (already smells like smoked pot).

*nirvana-thum.gif*With Ice we have successfully attempted to bring quality and quantity together. Ice has ancestors of Afghani, a very special Skunk, Northern Light, and Shiva. An intense selection process of thousands of plants was used in finding this special mix. Ice flowers are richly covered in trichomes and have a dense consistency. Buds form along main branches and there is a high flower to leaf ratio. Fantastic for hydro and soil applications. The stone is heavy and the aroma is almost like fuel. Ice is a winner of the 1998 Cannabis Cup.

Five seeds germinated out of six, in 3 days, directly in soil.

They stayed for a week under 54w of fluoros and then for other three weeks under 250w of HPS.

All the plants grew very fast with a lot of side branches and just one showed a bit of yellowing; they need quite a lot of nitrogen during vegging and preflowering, little pots can cause problems.

After the preflowers the females were four, but absolutely I hadn't the space to grow more than three plants, so one was gave to a friend.

Despite the reduced distance between the lamp and the plants, I had a consistent stretching in preflowering, passing from 30 cm to one meter. I had two plants with a more indica pheno and one kind of 50/50. Neither a little problem during flowering, they started ripening very soon and I harvested after 53 days from the switch to 12/12.

In that period I used the 250w HPS plus 36w of fluoros.

I fed with a generic fertilizer (NPK: 10-5-5+Fe) during vegging and preflowering, Canna Terra Flores (2-2-4) after the first flowers, PK 13-14 in middle flowering and GHE Ripen as end bloom booster (it made the buds much bigger and dense!).

I gave Plagroom Roots too, after transplants.

The pots were 1,5 litres for seedling, 6 l after 2 weeks (a bit too late!) and 12 l after the sexing to the end. German pro soil + worms humus + expanded clay.

The final result is 125 grams of top quality buds and 30 g of trims and microbuds (used to make a great hashish!).

The stone is quite balanced for the two more indica plants: it's very heady at the beginning but after a quarter of hour you realize that stand up from the sofa is so hard...

The third plant, less indica than the others, was the worst yielder and it's more sweet and candy-like... It's also a bit less destructive, so I can even smoke it in the morning!

Yes, because talking about ICE you can say it has a strong and nice smell, a not so bad flavour, but what everybody would say after a joint is that this is one of the most potent strain in commerce! All of my friends are amazed from ICE...

Grower Report

September, 2004

This was my first grow, I only germinated one Ice seed (along with a few other seeds of other strains). It sprouted and turned out to be female (my only one actually). I cared for this plant well because she was all I had left. I was on a slight time constraint so I only vegged for a little under 4 weeks. She started showing sex around a week into flower.

I used LST at the beginning of flower to try and maximize yield, it worked extremely well! Many budsites formed, but they start to grow around mid-way into flowering. The crystals start coming up around week 5 in flowering, but they slowly form all over the plant and it looked wonderful! By the end of flowering the plant was absolutely covered in trichs and resin!

The pistils were still only around 40% red, but the trichomes were mostly cloudy and I harvested on day 55 of flower. She didn't smell much at all during flower, only when disturbed. She has a citrus-y, fruity smell, but it becomes more perfumy after harvest. She was a bit hard to handle with the nutes, the leaves would curl up when I ferted but she still showed signs of deficiencies, but it wasn't a big problem I used Fox Farms soil and ferts and they worked nicely. I ferted every watering, but this was only around once a week, then up to once every 4 days in late flowering.

I don't know the exact yield because I don't have a scale, but because of the LST she made many budsites and I think the yield was around 2.3 ounces total. The buds aren't dense at all though, quite fluffy but I don't mind this, they smoke extremely well! The smell, taste, and high are all superb and they're much better than the top notch stuff we buy here. I'd recommend this plant to anyone who likes their buds covered in trichs! Easy on the nutes though, and I'd recommend to use LST, this strain responds well to it. The high is more couchlock than I'd hoped for, but I still like it a lot. Puts you in a happy mood after just a couple of hits, then it slowly brings you down over an hour and it ends up making you a couch potato for the second hour.

VEG: I started 7 plants total, and ended up with 4 females. All the plants were similar in structure. Very branch and somewhat short. I used fish emulsion once a week for veg. They smelled very skunky during veg.

Flower: Flowering these plants was easy. I used Fox Farm Big Bloom for bloom. These plants flowered very quickly and packed on the trichomes. These plants were so frosty, and had 2 plants turn purple from cold temps. The skunky odor went away when flowering started, and plants were pretty much undetectable. I loved growing these plants, they were easy, uniform, and very frosty.

Yield: My yield was very low. I only got about 2.5 ounces off 4 plants, I used a 400watt MH for the whole grow. The bulb was about a year and a half old, so that may have something to do with it. It certainly wasn't the plants, they had great potential.

Smoke: The smoke is great. It is a great day time high. It has a little head in it and a little body. Both are pretty intense feelings, and a lot of tingling in the body. Very obvious that you are stoned after smoking a bowl.

I had 4 of 6 beans show female in 5 days of 12/12. I used GH Flora nutes at 5ml/10ml/15ml per gallon. Spider mites attacked at 2 weeks, I put in a No Pest Strip and raised RH to 70%. Mites were gone, but the high RH caused 1 top to get feathery mildew by week 7 and a small portion (2"-3") of the infected cola was removed early. By day 54 1 plant was totally ambered and I decided to harvest. The sativa natured tops were easy to trim and the density yielded way more than expected.

Normal growth rate, but I did see alot of different phenos, stretching from all sides of the family. It had fast side branching, a very strong and healthy plant, and very easy to grow. I found though it couldn't handle light stress though, and a few hermied. Also had high germination rates.

Though it was vigorous, it was a little slow to respond to flowering. Hardly any stretching though, most only had around 4 or 5 inches of stretching. Very easy to clone. This plant seems to grow better if the side branches are allowed to be tied out some, improving yield. Yield by the way is way above average on most of the K2 phenos.

I found it to be a little couchy, that puts a stupid grin on my face. Though I really enjoyed it, I found it to be lacking luster after a few weeks of smoking. This is another strain that just packs on the frosty goodness. But there are so many different phenos, it becomes a good/bad thing. But it has great potential.

5 of 6 beans popped, only one was female. The five plants were rootbound I later found out so that might have added to the f/m. After transplanted to 3.5 gallon pots the plants took off. MG soil and perlite were all that were used for a soil base. I noticed every plant was different in form and stature. Some plants stayed green all the way to the male rip, and some yellowed fast.

All the clones that were taken rooted-- none failed and that was my first time. Plant budded nicely/frosty and in the end I had 52 grams under a 250w hps.

The stone I got off the one female is a real creeper, comes on minutes later and lasts hours. It's not my kinda stone, very paranoia inducing and I swear my IQ lowered for 8 hours lol. Puts you right to bed though. Interesting plant and apparently a good yielder but I can tell 5 years from now I won't be growing this plant.

This was my first time growing Nirvana K2 and I must say that it is a fantastic strain. I recieved the seeds as freebies from SeedsDirect and germed 5/5 seeds. Very hardy veg growth and 2/3 phenos grew into squat Indica bushes while the other pheno had a Sativa structure. 3/5 were females and all 3 were cut around day 57 when the trichs looked right.

The smoke is exactly what a full Indica would be and proved to be very medical. The Sativa pheno gave the most up buzz, the regular Indica pheno gave a stong couchlock effect, and the rock bud pheno knocked you on your ass much like LifeSaver... Overall the high was great, especially for the evening. 3 months of curing has really brought the flavor out and when smoked in the vaporisor it is top notch. Anyone looking for a heavy Indica for night time should seriously consider K2.

This was my first grow so I made a few mistakes so I think I could definitely have yielded more with some experience.

When my seeds arrived I soaked them in spring water over night and put them in peat pellets when the seeds cracked. I started with 160w fluoro and continued with it through veg (24/7, 45 days). My 1000w HPS finally arrived and I switched to 12/12 immediately. After 3 days into flowering they were tied down to promote undergrowth. They did much better after being tied down and being put under the HPS. I ferted with Shultz all purpose during veg, and Miracle-Gro Rose Food during flowering. I started with 10 plants and ended up with 7 females, from which I harvested 8oz. There was a 100% germ rate on the seeds. The smoke was somewhat heady since I was forced to harvest at 47 days due to my landlord wanting to show my apartment. About 40% of the trichomes were amber when I harvested. I ended up with 2, 1 quart zip-lock bags full of nice trim from which I made Ice-hash and canna-butter. The hash was strong and potent, 2 hits and I was good for 3 hours or so. I would recommend to a first timer since they were very low maintenance. Some words of caution would be to watch for mold in more humid climates because the main colas are very dense. I have also heard they are prone to hermie but luckily, I didn't have that problem. Overall, I would say they were great for the price, and a perfect strain to cut my teeth on.

Grower Report

June, 2003

Germination: The K2 germinated very fast, within 24hrs and 8/8 sprouted. none of them were crippled.

Vegetative: When transferred to my NFT, growth started at a normal rate, the plants were developing big, broad, dark-green Indica leaves. The structure is the normal Indica one, very useful for SCROG, since the plants develop many branches and stay rather short, while getting very bushy. Most branches keep up with the main growth.

Stems are very solid, for a ~4' plant the thickest stem was .75".

No problems with over-fertilizing at all, they took pretty much everything.

After ~4 weeks they were put under a 400w HPS, which made them double their growth rate for one week, until put in flower. After 4 weeks I was able to identify one male.

Flower: Surprisingly, the K2 didn't quite behave like an obviously almost pure Indica.

The stretch might have been due to NFT, plants tend to stretch a lot in hydro systems. The stretch was from about 12"-40", that includes some tying-down, they were actually ~4' at the end.

Sexing was not that easy, since flower didn't kick in until ~10-14 days 12/12, meaning no flowers at all, just stretch. After sexing, I got 50/50, one of those was a slight hermie, and actually pollinated some lower buds, since I didn't find all flowers, apparently.

Not too many phenos, there were 2 normal looking Indicas, which also were the tallest, and 2 smaller ones, with darker, bigger leaves, which also had darker and smaller buds, but way more beautiful. I think the reason was not genetic variation, but different lighting, as the taller ones had more light.

The buds developed fast, turning into hairy, shiny buds, which were very sticky.

Buds were very dense.

Towards the end they put on a red hue, maybe due to temps at night, which were rather low.

Smell was strong starting at ~week 3. It was sweet, fruity, yet pungent and not really fresh, nothing like NYCD for example, more like...piney, sour/sweet. Can't really tell.

Flushed for 5 Days, with only water and cannazym, some trace elements were also added.

Harvested in 2 stages, first time day 57, second time 59.

Trimming was ok, good strain for hash, since some buds had lots of leaves covered in resin growing out of them. Still had to scrape the resin off the blades after every bud.

When dry, the smell is lemony.

Yield:

~190g (~6oz) for 3 plants

Smoke report:

Well, what did you expect? Yes, couch lock, but not as much as one might think.

It's not that bad actually, but it makes you not want to do anything but sit down, and watch a movie, listen to music...like it for Sunday mornings, take a nap later, and when you wake up, your mind is clear.

For me, it's a good daytime smoke, not too long. A friend of mine couldn't stop laughing for some hrs, and ate everything he could find...so effects vary.

Smoke is smooth after 2 weeks curing, sometimes expansive in the lungs, not much taste though. Smell of the buds is like lemons.

It does make you stupid, I tried to count my heartbeats once, and never got past 20....

Keeps you stoned for a fairly long time, comedown is clear.

Overall Opinion:

Great and easy to grow, big yielder, strong plants, good evening smoke, very potent.

Recommended!

A plant for the novice grower. I only grew the Nirvana version.

germination rate was good, 2 out of 2, seedlings were healthy but sensitive to hot temps, very wide leaves from the very start, seedlings remained 2 weeks under fluoros, Veg stage came after those 2 weeks, plants were nice, and I got 2 phenos , one short and bushy and the other somewhat tall, one of the plants showed sex early in 18/6 and the other ended up male.

The survivor was the tall one, not too bad. She was a big fat cola also she was keeping the Indica traits so that was enough, also after a week of 12/12 she started flower production faster than the widows, smell was similar to the widows. Size of the flowers were good considering the fame of the breeder , also she was one HUGE cola of the size if a beer can. I harvested at 9 weeks looking for the mix between heady and couch lock and I think I went a little over, the smoke is good but not what I like. Potency : first hit makes you euphoric... 3rd hit makes you see yourself in slow motion.

They were around 16 inches when I put them into bloom and ended at around 40 inches. I vegged for 52 days and flowered 55days.

In flowering I noticed one of the plants had a more leaf to bud ratio while the other three looked very nice. The buds on the most part were compact and had plenty of trichrome. Yielded average and clones easy.

The smoke is good with a body stone that makes you pretty lazy in the long run.. With a mild taste of hash and (rotten) fruit.

I personally enjoyed growing this plant and intend on growing it again in the near future. I had a bumpy ride throughout this grow but did come away with more success than anticipated.

Germ:

1/4 were female

Veg:

This plant was added a little later to my garden and was very slow growing during veg period. She was pH sensitive and started out a little sensitive to ferts. She gradually strengthened with time. Vegged for only 30 days before introduced to 12/12. Because of this there was no side branching.

Flower:

She was exposed to a lot of stress during 12/12 (had to be moved couple of times). But she still produced a very nice compact buds. Very frosty and a beautiful sight. Everybody that saw it had to have it! She was flowered for 56 days (+2 days of darkness).

Odor/Taste:

The smell wasn't bad while growing, kind of a musky, skunky smell I guess. The taste isn't bad either, kind of a woody, earthy taste- which I expected. I would not recommend smoking alot of this weed with out it being properly cured.

High/Effect:

I was very surprised with this high. Very similar to WR but probably not as good. It definitely packs a knockout punch making you want to pass out in front of the TV. I would say it is bit of a creeper, so you can get your munchies before you feel the body stone. Overall I enjoy this high.

I would recommend this strain to the beginner, easy to grow and learn on, but not for the experienced grower of course. I wish I could of had more time for this little girl to veg becuz I am sure I could have gotten 2 oz. if vegged longer. This may not be a big yeilding plant, but if properly grown I think the results would be very rewarding for even a newbie.

Grower Report

October, 2003

I ordered K2 from Nirvana for my first grow one and a half year ago.

I got my ten seeds via mail and planted three of them right away into soil, then added some water and placed under 11w fluoro. All germinated within three days and I kept those babies under that same light their first week.

Then it was time for my very first growing room. It was 1.5-2 sq.ft closet with 105w of fluoro light, 5 x 21w bulbs were hanging from the roof of that closet, and positioned an inch away from plants. I couldn't provide ventilation, but not that I would have needed - heat is not an issue with 105w of fluoro, and basically I was manually ventilating all the time :) first grow, right.

After 4 weeks veg I switched 12/12, and after two weeks from that I realised I got 3 males. Those males were quite stable looking similar brothers until one of them showed some pistils too. Chopped after 2 weeks flowering at 2-3 ft, lacked potency even for male plants.

Then I germinated one more K2 along two of nirvana's NL. This one looked a bit different in veg than her earlier brothers. Those boys were branching nicely while this one was the opposite. It went from one to three feet after a couple of weeks 12/12, it was one stick with quite thin leaves, especially after moving to 12/12.

At the same I got a K2 plant that my friend had grown. He couldn't continue growing at the time and there were some space in my garden after removing one male NL plant. It was ready to flower, shoved sex fast and was similar to the males I got earlier. This branchy and bushy femme ended up 3 ft as well.

I was more than delighted how this bushy pheno started to flower, but at the same time this weird "stick" pheno wasn't doing that fine. It could have been because the circumstances were not similar to these plants, 'stick' got only 1 gallon pot while the other one was in a 2.5 gallon pot. Still there were something else wrong with this stick, because it curled all of its leaves somehow under, but showed no kind of burn signs. I think it was just a poor individual plant, nothing else. It showed one pair of male flowers at the end of the flowering and I found few seeds from the bud.

Well, after 9 weeks flowering I was amazed how good the yield looked like considering my low light levels and inexperience. Chopped bushy at 62 days and 'stick' at 69 days after keeping a couple days dark. Hanged those buds about a week after placing into jars. The 'real' k2 plant yielded two jars of dry bud and the 'weird' pheno a bit under one. Don't know in grams, but I know it was a good yield at least for me at the time. Not every strain work well with flouros and low light levels, this was the best trait in K2 in my opinion.

Smoke was definitely indica. Funny but physical. It wasn't as potent as the NL, but still quite effective. Smoking a lot of it sent me always to the floor and watching the roof dancing.. On the other hand it developed tolerance fast, and after a while it was only NL to send me to the floor. At the end the high even felt a bit boring compared to other strains I smoked at the time. 7/10 is how I could describe the potency, but because it builds tolerance fast, it's more like 6/10 or 5/10. It was quite smooth to smoke but lacked taste a bit or/and had some hashiness in it. Still enjoyable.

+ Easy
+ Works well with fluoros
+ Yield

- Builds tolerance fast
- Not overwhelming potent

This strain is good for beginners, but also for the people with cf's who want to ensure that yield is going to be big enough, even if you have just a few compact fluoros. On the other hand, if you are looking for a heavy indica with connoisseur's high, I would pick something else then. Still I was truly happy with this plant overall, thumbs up.

As this was our first attempt, we were rather pleasantly surprised... We used a 100w bulb and growing soil from a local garden center. The food we used was Miracle Grow and Super-Thrive. At first we were dubious, using a 250w mercury bulb, which was what us Northerners call 'shan'. So, with some advice, we changed to a 125w Envirolight and to our surprise it shot off! The first shot we had of it was thru a pipe at our band practice and the creativity flowed like The River Nile. The effect wasn't of normal stature, it kept us going... Chatty and very happy. We found there was no sign of couch-lock, more of a trippy buzz from it.

Nirvana's Masterkush is a cross of Hindu Kush and Skunk #1. It has the exact same flavor as the HK but the potency is far superior. I've grown Masterkush a couple of times now and they usually finish around 60 days. Nice solid Indica buds with loads of resin. Both times they were very easy to grow. This is one of the more potent Indicas I've smoked, but they are worth growing just for the taste.

No desire to get up and do anything, however, doesn't turn you into a complete log. Good for sitting with a guitar and getting lost in the music. No significant changes in thought patters. initial buzz lasts for about an hour, then tapers of for the next hour. Relaxing, and may be good for those who can't sleep. No hangover felt the next day.

I have grown the strain for a few years and it's in 8th generation now. It likes to auto branch when refined. This strain has almost a over powering flavor, odd to it self, at times it is very romantic and very full flavored. The strain grows well but take a long time to stabilize with variations still showing up as the strain develops. This is a nice sound strain base even with the variations, it gives a taste unto it self. I got to say it's a romantic hashish flavor with soft sweet skunkish under tones. A little strong for med weeds but nice for the pain of body and mind. Its' an easy plant to over look and needs little care and always show a good all round health. This strain dose much better in the higher gens as you can see, so it takes time to relate to a new TCE (temps/conditions/environments).

'Master Kush' from Nirvana

- 'Master Kush'

First called High-Rise, Master Kush was developed in one of the tall buildings of south Amsterdam. Instantly the coffeeshops fell in love with this special new tetraploid. Through popular demand, this Hindu Kush/Skunk hybrid was stabilized and marketed. It has been a classic ever since. A strong plant of medium height and bushiness, Master Kush is a heavy producer with soil, hydro, and has great greenhouse results. The earthy smell of Master Kush is strong and the smoke is smooth.

March, 2003

This plant was a breeze to grow, very nice structure, nice smell in the growroom and very eye appealing buds fairly heavily frosted with trichomes. Multiple colas (some LST done early in veg) with a large number of bic lighter size buds and many smaller jawbreaker sized popcorn buds. The only issue I had with growing these is that they seemed slightly sensitive to ferts in flower and were I to do again I'd use 3/4 strength

An excellent beginner's strain. Only slight variation in phenos and all will produce dark green, glossy leaves. Grew excellent and put on a good

Flowering period was 8 weeks on average, and some were harvested earlier, which to my liking produced a different buzz.

Yield was superior for such low wattage and low intensity. Buds grew dense regardless.

Taste was excellent! The curing smell was that of a pine astringent and I would imagine similar to any of the "Diesel" strains.

Misty was real easy to grow, all were pretty much uniform. Shows preflowers at around 6 weeks, and is one of the easiest strains I have grown. Thick stalk, dark green leaves, branches shoot out in a "Y".

Some plants had a fruity aroma, others had a strong pugnent smell while in flowering. I found it to smell more than most, but not to the point I would call it over-powering. When cured it has a musky smell, but a sweet taste, still minty. But it tastes a whole lot better after the cure though, still nothing to write home about.

One thing I really loved was the high amount of sugar on the buds, and the buds were rock tight. I found yield to be just above average, but the buds were dense.

It has more of a body stone, couchy and it comes on quickly, getting behind the eyes at first. It stretches about half its size when flowering is induced. Bud mass really picks up at around the 4th week of flowering, and I found mine to be best right around 56 days.

It would be an easy strain for a beginner to grow, but as long as they had proper ventilation and odor control, cause it does smell slightly more than some. But I have smelt some that were way more smellier.

Nice strain - cheap and easy to grow. Slightly odd smell - but very strong so be careful if smell is a problem. I'm not joking. I had some of this weed cured in a sealed plastic bag one evening in my jacket pocket. I got home - took the baggie out of my pocket and left it in my house - then in the morning I got up put my jacket on and went to work, and as soon as I walked in the door to my office - my mate could smell the weed from the other side of the room (from a sealed bag that was in my pocket over 12 hours ago!). Fairly big yield.

Started with 6 seeds which all sprouted on damp kitchen paper within 36 hours and eventually gave 4 girls :) 100% germination.

Plants were in general purpose compost for the first couple of weeks and then potted up to All-Mix. Apart from some deficiency (my fault) at about 3 weeks there were no problems at all. A half arsed attempt at LSTing was started aswell.

Some Misty's can really smell, with vegging seeming a lot worse than flowering to me. Even at 2 weeks old the plants could easily be smelt in the room. As they age a kind of stale sweat, garlic, cat piss and coffee aroma develops.. mmm nice.

Plants were vegged for around 6 weeks before changing to 12/12, with them then having about 5 or 6 colas each from the training. Very little stretch during flowering with them all ending up around 18". They seem to explode with bud growth within days of changing to 12/12, much faster than other strains I've grown.

Nothing eventful happened during flowering and plants were eventually chopped at 7, 9 (2 plants) and 10 weeks into flowering to see how the highs varied. The later harvested plants really piled on the weight in the last couple of weeks. The lowest yielding plant (the 7 week one) was around 22g, highest was about 40g I think and the four plants gave around 4.4oz in total plus 3g of hash from the trim.

The buds have quite a piney smell when fresh but it changes to a much fruitier one over time I found. My stash is now almost 4 months old and they have a lovely sweet smell about them. The flavour seems quite spicy to me with various nutmeg, aniseed and minty tastes coming through along with a bit of pine.

Not the most potent of plants but everyone who's tried it seemed impressed all the same.. one that you can smoke all day without ending up a zombie. The one chopped at 7 weeks gave a nice head high, reminding me very much of a mild dose of shrooms. The later cut ones were somewhat stonier but not too much and still a head buzz there. If I grew again I'd chop them all at 9 or 10 weeks as you get the improved yield and still a balanced high.

All in all an easy to grow strain with decent yields, tastes and potency. Shouldn't give any problems for a beginner.

I got 2 females Nirvana Specials in my mixed seed selection that I bought from Nirvana. They were very easily identifiable from my other girls, due to the tall slender structure and very long thin sativa leaves.

The first female I grew I had some problems with in 18/6, but I think most of this was due to the soil I was using (bog-standard compost bought at a local DIY store.) The fan leaves kept dying, but overall the plant was healthy.

When I switched to 12/12, she began to put on a stretch, the gap between fan leaves was about 3-4 inches, although the rest of her lower growth was much better-proportioned. She also grew very odd-looking calyx on her stems, which had me worried about possible hermaphroditism quite early on, although nothing came of it.

All in all she did not seem very stable. At this point in the grow, I had completely changed her soil to coconut-fibre based stuff which saw a dramatic improvement in overall health but she was still a very tall and skinny lady.

She started flowering about a week after being switched to 12/12 and started really packing on the weight in her buds from week 4 onwards. She had very tall lanky buds, covered in trichomes on both the top and the underside of leaves and stems, and a pleasant sweetish smell, faintly lemony or like dried flowers. There was a good-sized cola and the side branches also produces some good buds considering she was not trained. From weeks 7-8 she did not put any more weight on her buds, but things began to ripen up ready for harvest 63 days after being switched to 12/12. She was given 36 hours of darkness at the end, and was flushed for the last week of growth.

The second Nirvana Special was far more stable in 18/6, and had a much better all-round structure with better distribution of internodal growth, and less of a stretch to it, however, this plant was vegged under metal halide, and had better soil from the outset, so conditions may have helped. She showed pre-flowers at week 5 under 18/6 schedule (I like to veg them a little longer, usually around 6 weeks) and was moved under 12/12 at 6 weeks.

She also had the same calyx structures on her main stem, however this time they did become hermaphrodite flowers, and she was pulled from my grow at 3 weeks of 12/12. From my experience, I'd say this plant is quite unstable, the second plant was grown in spring, so there was a tiny amount of light getting into my growroom during the dark period and my timer also packed in, so these are things you want absolutely perfect to cut down on the possibility of it going hermie on you.

The smoke:

Nirvana Special is a lovely-tasting grass. Not harsh at all on the back of your throat, and a very sweet-tasting grass, again, reminds me of the smell of dried sweet flowers. Very cerebral smoke, you feel this one in your temples and the front part of your head, and comes on quickly. Not really something you'd want to smoke in the dead of winter when your stuck indoors. I felt pretty creative and spent ages drawing after a joint of Spesh. I also thought the yield was pretty decent from a 250w HPS (38 grams). The grass is certainly decent, but I wouldn't bother with this strain again, because I would be constantly on tinterhooks throughout flowering.

2 of 3 plants turned out Sativa dominant which both turned hermie, probably due to the begginers error.

They had very few male flowers but enough to pollinate a good percentage of the grow... The buds were long (some as long as 12 inches) but were very light and fluffy, with few crystals in sight... It also had a cereal type smell and a similar taste.

The high was not much to shout about and I was not very impressed to say the least!

Ease to grow - 9/10... Never had problem with these from start to finish, except for the dreaded male flowers.

As for the other plant that is a different story...

This one turned out Indica dominant. It was an extremely potent smelling plant, that smelled skunky during the veg stage and a fruity type smell during flowering.

This plant needed more attention than the other 2, on 2 occasions it had nute deficiency, but was well worth the extra effort.

The high was couch lock at its best, 2 J's put me in my place.

I am gutted that I didn't clone it! It would be worth buying 10 seeds just to get a mother of this quality.

Ease to grow - 8/10... A few minor nute problems but nothing too serious.

OVERALL WEIGHT = 3-3.5oz / approx. 100 grams

Also I should add both phenos required a lot of manicuring.

Unfortunately my digicam broke near the end of my grow, so no final harvest pics, sorry.

Excellent grow very forgiving much like it's Northern Light parentage. Was growing this strain continuously for at least a year. After experimenting I found at 10/11 weeks the buds are branch benders. You must watch for mold in later stages as buds are that big (good ventilation a must). Responds well to tying / training and responds well in SOG / SCROG although tying / pruning MUST begin early or your in for a forest. Masses of sticky trichies (fan leaves, stems the lot). I have also grown this outdoors and this strain has reached 7 foot although here in UK it didn't really have time to finish fully so you might want to start covering her a bit early.

I used hydro and 400 watts and got near 4 oz off of the one plant. Like any bud I would give it a few days to dry and at least 2 weeks to cure in glass jars before tasting it. And then it is rock hard crystal candy, but not because of compression, because of natural density. This stuff is rock hard and oozing with resin. All of the fan leaves had resin beside a few really big leaves.

The plant grows many shoots, at least the pheno I got, and I needed a way to tie up the buds so they could support their own weight.

This plant stinks of odor, and is not recommended for stealth growing. BTW SweetTooth#3 is virtually odor free.

This was my second grow a few years back, my first grow using breeder seeds.

Germination rates were good and i recieved 2 out of 2 females. both were very hardy growers during veg. I was pretty much shocked that i had recieved 2 totally different phenos in the same pck of seeds, i mean completely different.

INDICA-

One was a very hardy indica that grew short and thick, the stem was as thick as a pencil when it was about 5 inches tall. She was an easy plant to grow and was what i had expected from a northern lights plant, minimal smell, hardy squat bush with dark green leaves almost turning black on my clone during veg.

She went into flowering very quick and didnt stretch too much, starting packing on weight quicker than i have seen any other plant so i knew she would finish up real fast. I picked her around day 50 or so and i was surprised on the density of the bud structure, real nice chunky nuggs that were VERY easy to trim. Just cut off the big fans and there you go, all the other leaves were so frosted that they were left on. Its no wonder why NL is so popular it gets frosty, dense, large yield and finishes quick perfect for begginers or commercial growers.

After a nice long cure and i mean long like 2 months the smell was perfect IMO, very grape and sweet. From what ive heard BOG got his grape pheno he uses from NL heritage so if your growing it out wish for the grape pheno. The second round from clone went about 57 days and the grape aroma was not as strong as the first that went 50.

Smoking the NL was not incredible or anything, better appearance than effect or taste. To be honest the taste was kindof lacking. The high was pretty balanced leaning slightly to the couchlock side, still not as couchlock as i had expected.

SKUNK- The other pheno i aquired from the same pack of NLPI was infact not indica at all but more sativa in almost every aspect. I would guess its genetics come from the male breeder plant Nirvana uses to cross with. Anyhow still a nice plant with a nice coffee smell and thin leaves.

During flower it didnt stretch as much as expected, very loose compared to the indica with nice swollen calxys, tall bud structure, good yield a good surprise to find in a indica pack of seeds.

After curing the skunk pheno i was surprised that the coffee smell had faded away and turned rather lemony. Smoking the skunk was a pure treat the buds smoked so smooth with a subtle lemon hint.

The high was pretty uplifting and clear with just a hint of body, good weed when doing activities. Needless to say it was smoked up way before the indica was, but inturn the indica had a very slow cure that it really needed.

Some pictures are clones from the second round. Skunk pheno first.

The first picture was inverted using paint shop and i looked at it and was like.. Wow its the cannabis god, and look the buds are praying to him.

Grower Report

September, 2003

Grown from seed, of 8 ended up with 2 females & kept 1 very vigorous male for breeding.

Vegged for 4 weeks, 1 grown bush style, 1 'tied and trained' smokinrav style.

*Very* Indica dominated with large fan leaves bigger than my hand! I did not experience any sativa pheno as some others have encountered.

The un-topped plant was flowered for 52 days and the tied plant at 56 days. Yield was 38 & 42 grams respectively.

A very easy strain to grow & clone, growth was vigorous & healthy. The untrained plant was quite a beauty with all of the stems/colas 'bunching' up to the central cola, we dubbed her "The Baseball Bat"

The smoke was smooth but 'heavy', a real body stone. Not such a great stone if you have important business to conduct but perfect for just chilling out to at the end of a long day :) A couple of my friends who use medicinally had only good things to say.

Appearance of the final product (dried 2 weeks & cured 3) is excellent, it looks and smells great, nicely covered with crystals & dense as well as a decent 'body' stone. We've since chosen Northern Lights as one (of two) of our 'commercial' strains.

Recommended to new & commercial growers or for those desiring an Indica dominated plant, easy to grow, early maturation, good appearance & a decent stone.

Only kept in veg about two weeks under 400MH

Very easy to grow. Had 4 very similar plants with one weird bean-pole plant.

All the plants produced dense, thickly, chrystallized buds.

The bean pole's buds were much thinner, but potent. This cannot be a pure indica as claimed, but I don't care--these seeds grow good pot.

I was pleasantly surprised by this plant, based on the Strain guide reviews I read before I grew what turned out to be a very nice plant.

I'm going to order more seeds asap and make room in my garden for another grow of this.

Planted 4 Nirvana NL beans in Scotts Seed starting soil & perlite mix 70/30 in 4" pots on 4/8/04. 3 of the 4 sprouted by 4/11/04. I had some beginner problems of over watering. Week 3 I transplanted to 6" pots with Scotts Potting Soil (0-0.01-0) Perlite 60/40 mix. I also added 1Tbsp Blood Meal (12-0-0) 1 Tbsp Kelp meal (1-0-2) 1Tsp Bone Meal (1-11-0) 1 Tsp Epsom salts. I also watered at this time with Alaska Fish (5-1-1) big mistake as it caused some nute burn. I continued in vegetation growth for 40 days. Plants were ~ 12" tall and showing pre-sex signs. Had 2 females & 1 male, killed him.

Of the 2 females 1 was a mutant. It had leaf deformities on the fan leaves on 1 side.

I transplanted to 12" pots with Scotts potting soil , Perlite 60/40. I also added 2 oz of Alaska Dry Fish ( 3-8-5). I watered at this time with Alaska Fish (5-1-1) and switched lights to 12/12. Flowered the mutant for 56 days & the other 1 for 63 days. Finished at ~ 30-36". Dried 5 days. Cured 1 week at present time.

Overall for the price of the seed and ease of growing you can't go wrong. Although it seems to take longer than what the breeder says to finish. Would grow again. Everyone likes the smoke.

Veg:

20 Days under 140 watts of fluoros in a rubbermaid fluoro box.

20 Days under a 400 watt MH.

Problems that occurred in that time period. -- Survived from ALL:

Incorrectly transplanted

Dropped the plant from 4 feet high because a spider was in it, had to retransplant.

Powdery mildew - tons of neem oil got to the roots and began to kill the plant, had to transplant to get it back to normal, it survived all of that.

Flowering:

It exploded. It's a bud machine, just super compact, at the end, 95% of the stems that I cut had to be manicured because of the tons and tons of buds. Unfortunately because I used a 400W MH, the buds were light and airy. There was almost no smell until the last 2 weeks of growing.

The harvest after dried:

This was my first plant I ever grew, and in my opinion, it is by far, the strongest weed I have ever smoked. I guess my tolerance isn't that high, but I smoke this shit everyday, and after 2 hits, I'm toasted.

I harvested about 230 wet grams which dried to about 60 grams.

Tons of hairs and tons of crystals.

The 3 plants on the smoke report is the smaller one that's on the right with tape holding the stem in the middle. I liked this plant, it was very easy to grow. It liked the nutes but can burn if you're not careful. Even split the stem in the middle 3 weeks to go (my fault) and she didn't blink at all, just kept growing and filling out. She did exploded about the 4th week when I added BudBooster by Dr.Hornby's.

She was only about 3 feet tall, vegged her at 30 days and 12 inches.

Finished in 52 days and 75% Amber-25% Cloudy.

When The buds are pinched, it smells like a kerosene. Some fuel like smell but can't pinpoint it. Really danky, musky smell with a hint of pine, resins makes it all sticky and worthwhile. It's very stoney weed with couchlock that hits later like 5-10 minutes. Taking a bong hit seems to really bring out the coolness in the smoke. The stone is there alright, it's that day later you may still be stoned! I gave it a 9 because it ranks right up there with good weed.

August, 2004

Northern lights has a reputation for being an easy to grow, tough plant, and after many trials and tribulations, my first attempt at indoor growing ended with a fine bushy plant and around two and a half ounces of top quality smoke.

I would really recommend this strain for those just finding their way in the minefield of growing, during the course of my grow the plant had to suffer various indignities as I tweaked my growroom to get temperatures, light distance, watering, and fertilising under control. But Nirvana Northern Lights just adapted to the changing conditions where many a more finicky modern strain would have given up the ghost.

Conditions for this plant was a 250W metal halide lamp in an outdoor garden shed with all the wildly fluctuating temperatures that this type of growing involves. Moving into the attic, again under the 250W for flowering. Soil was Bio-Bizz, Vegging ferts (hardly used) was Bio-Gro from Bio-Bizz. And flowering ferts were Bio-Bloom.

Yield turned out to be about two and a half to three ounces and the smoke is of the highest calibre, couched for about an hour then up and talking again-great smoke overall. Would strongly advise any grower to try this out, it is far to good a strain to allow to fade into history.

Pack received was a freeby along with another strain. 10/10 seeds germed in 48 hours and plants vegged under 110w fluro light for 4 weeks.

Plants showed sex within one week of switching to 12/12 resulting in 6 females and 4 males.

Of the 6 females, 4 were similar mixed Ind/Sat phenos, which finished around 45 days. These smoked piney and induced a heavy body stone that sent me to sleep and made me feel hungry, not really to my taste.

The 2 other plants were Indica doms and finished a few days later. These had denser bud formations and one smokes fruity (my favourite) the other lemony. The effects of these plants is more balanced.

A great 'first' strain and well worth the price. I encountered no problems with this strain and would recommend it to others. Smoke is strong but not the tastiest.

I germanated them with a damp paper towl folded over and set on a plate next to a heater. After chekcing them in less that 12 hours I saw little white root tails cracking through the soft seed shell. I set them about 1 inch deep into plastic paper cups and grew em out. They were under until flowering a 125 w compact flouro and a 35w compact flouro. Fed em with a mix me and my brother made. I flowed em with a 360 w cover- sion hps into a metal halide balast, o ya at the end of veg we used a 400w metal halide. SO the we flowered em until the trichomes looked nice and cloudy

The buds and leaves smelled sweet and furry the smoke was also that way. It definetly got me fucked in the face. In Flower I used a used 400watt MH. Same as in veg. The yield was ok, my buds were light and airy. I only got 84 grams off the 3 plants. The smoke is great. I chopped when most trichomes were clear very few cloudy which was at 60 days. The high hits you with a rush in the head, and gives you body high as well that is very calming. I thought this was great plant to grow. I over ferted about midway through flowering, but other than that and the poor yield this plant was great!

I started off with a pack of 10 Nirvana Northern Lights and I got 100% germination. I then had to get rid of 2 for space reasons and out of the remaining 8 I got 5 females and kept 4.

Plant 1: I topped this one at the beginning of flower but it still grew too tall and I had to tie down the 2 top colas and I ended up yielding 2 ounces from this one alone. That's almost as much as the other 3 combined. This one also has a kind of bland smell to the bud itself, unless it's in a jar but the taste is pretty good. The smell is starting to change with the cure though to a kind of skittles smell..

Plant 2: This one was also topped and ended up being very weird in the fact that it was nothing like the other 3 in smell, taste, or appearance. It has a very musky gasoline type smell to it, I don't really care for it but it doesn't seem to be lacking any potency. It also had very airy buds for some reason. I yielded about 1 ounce off her.

Plant 3: My 2nd largest yielder got me about 30 grams and was grown tree style. This one smelled wonderful throughout flower and seems to be getting better with curing. This one also had one of the branches from the VERY bottom grow up to the top and basically became a main cola. That whole branch alone yielded me a quarter ounce. If I did save cuttings this one would probably be the one i'de keep, at least 2 months of curing really brings out the great NL taste and i'de say this is the most potent one.

Plant 4: My last one is very nice but it was under my blower and had a lot of light blocked from her from the other 3 so it only yielded me about 12 grams from the top of the cola. It smells just like the previous plant but stronger, same with the taste.. kinda overwhelming.

All in all I yielded about 4.5 ounces. I'd probably grow this strain again but I didn't keep cuttings from them (mainly because I have no where to keep a mom at the moment). I have a lot more pics as well, you can either check out my gallery or PM me and I can hook you up with a link to

And with organics it was a pretty easy grow. what else was nice was how compact it stayed. I also had very little problem with overfeeding or underfeeding with NL, it was a typical feeding profile.

What I didnt like was trying out some early harvested NL (at 45 days), just dont do it, the high was disappointing, and really the potency didnt really develop until the 8th week. I finally harvested some when the trichromes were cloudy with a few amber trichromes.

The smoke and aroma is interesting, a earthy pine and musky fruit smell, the smoke was easy on the lungs, but this stuff is a creeper for me, it seemed like it just didn't hit, then slowly but surely the body high takes over.. I'm not sure why, but in comparison to other NL's by other breeders this is somewhat different in aroma. This is a medium type of high, but it had me dazed staring off into space.

I am a bit disappointed with the yield, but this is my first run with organic hydroponics so it might be me just needing to tweak the grow. The

bud ratio was ok.

I did like the odor free quality of the NL series, the only time it really smelled is if I brushed up against the plant. Overall it was a easy plant to work with.

Very easy to grow. Handled transplanting and high nutes very well. Low odor, would be good for stealth cabs. Had a little trouble cloning but was mostly user error. My plants had very tight internode spacing, and bushy. I vegged them for 4 weeks and switched to 12/12, plants were about 2 1/2 ft at harvest time and yielded about 3 1/2 ounces each. Nice size colas and the trim made some excellent cannabutter.

Lights it is a much better plant. The internodes are very tight together and the buds were super-dense. It is a very tough strain... I was growing it with Snow White and all issues I ran into showed up either only on the SW or on the Sw first. The NLxBB was very forgiving to nutrient issues etc. Again the yield is amazing, and the flavor and sent is a nice citrus as well. One thing I love about the flavor is it lasts right down to the last hit!

The high is also very nice.... Wonderful body buzz... (Weightless tingle type).. It harbors a unique body buzz to say the least. On top of that, it has a nice bit of heady high to kick it up a bit. It is a very pleasurable high. It's not 'one hit quit' but definitely will get you there in a reasonable amount of consumption. This strain is leaps and bounds above the Original BB.

As far as appearance it is very very dense and very very trichome covered... it starts bulking up and getting frosty around 3 weeks flowering. Soon they get really sticky. When you break up a properly handled dry bud there is a pile of kif on the table!

All and all it is a wonderful strain... great yields, easy to grow, and great end product!
Check out the pics, they speak for themselves.

The Northern Lights Big Bud is a great strain for stealth cabs, new growers or anyone looking for an easy-to-grow potent plant. It handled transplants, abuse and high ferters well. I grew it FIM and scrog style. My yield was approx. 5 ounces (dried) under fluoros. I feel the total yield could have been more, but am attributing most mistakes to user error.

I planted 9 seeds, 8 sprouted, 3 females survived through flowering. The plants were vegged for 35 days and flowered for first 2 weeks under 300 watts of shoplight provided flouro. Plants were then flowered under 400 watt hps for an additional 60 days.

I didn't run into too many problems during veg, the plants were all about 18 inches tall with very short internodal growth. I kept the plants in small half gallon containers during veg to keep them from growing too tall, as height was an issue.

I had a big problem with temperature during flowering with the hps, temps hit 100f on several occasions. This strain is so hardy though, the plants handled it well.

Two different phenos showed once the plants started budding, one was very indica, the buds clung tight to the plants stalk, making almost 2/3s of the plant one solid bud. The other pheno stretched out a bit more, but yielded better, the difference between the two isn't really that big though.

I ended up yielding a little over 3 ounces from the plants, this is even with harvesting one of the plants way too early, and several general newbie mistakes with fertilizer levels. The smoke is pretty smooth, and decently potent but really doesn't have much flavor, hopefully it will come about a bit more in the weeks of curing to come.

I would definitely recommend this strain to growers looking for a hardy solid producing plant, I will grow it again myself, and hope to improve upon my own results. You could probably take my yields and double them if your an experienced or even solid grower. I fully expect the plant to produce a lot better with different ferts and much lower temps

NL#5 x BigBud is a GREAT beginner strain! This was my very first grow and these plants took some heavy abuse during the early stages due to my lack of experience, especially with watering. To my surprise, they bounced back beautifully every time. A very forgiving strain!

I was lucky to have a 100% germination rate from the 9 seeds I planted (into Scott's Seed Starting Soil). SIX of the 9 seeds turned out to be female (three males). My cab only holds (5) 10" pots, so during my final transplant (after they showed sex) I picked the best-looking five and had to chop the sixth along with her 3 boyfriends.

The veg stage started off slow due to my under watering and overall inexperience. Once I transplanted into 6" pots, healthy growth began immediately! Lots of healthy green leaves and stems and when you figure out the watering, these babies really can take off! I vegged until they were all at least 12" tall. My tallest at the 12/12 switch was 17" tall, and turned out to be the tallest at Harvest at 3'4".

After switching to 12/12, the five ladies stretched about double in size, if not a tad more! The grow was a breeze after going into flowering, as I just sat back and watched my babies get nice and chunky. I soaked my 10" pots (flowering) every 3 to 4 days, but giving at least a heavy misting EVERY day. They loved it. Colas ended up being fat as hell! Two of the 5 turned out to be of different pheno type (see the last two plant pics, both on day 54 but different-looking colas).

After harvesting, I smoked some of the lower bud which dropped off during chopping/trimming and was VERY IMPRESSED right from the start, before any curing. This being my first grow, I never expected to make it to the finish line!

I have 6 loaded mason jars that will last me plenty and the smoke gets better and better the more it is cured! The flavor is mild, but what there is of it is very pleasant. The high starts out in the head and slowly works it's way to the body. I love this high! More active than the boring ol' couchlock, but you eventually land there if you smoke too much!

I yielded approximately 1.5 ounces from each of my five plants (~7.5-8 ounces) from my organic soil grow in a cabinet approx. 5 sq ft. using a 250 HPS.

In short (heh heh), this was a kick-ass strain, especially if you are learning to grow. Cheap seeds, very forgiving, and a nicely-balanced high. Hope some of this helps somebody. PEACE.

February, 2002

As I am a fairly new grower, please read this with a grain of salt. This entry is mainly for the pics, and to say it has been the healthiest growing variety I have tried yet (out of about 7 types). The smell was medium-low. 8 out of 10 germination. Grown 7 weeks from seed until I switched to 12/12. 3 of the 8 were males, and were culled after 10 days of flowering. Of the remaining 5 females, 2 were short and stout, and 3 had longer internodal spacing, and grew taller and thinner, with popcorn buds that dry rock hard. I simply folded the main stems over to keep them off the light. The shorter ones became hard when dried also, but less dense. My favorite to smoke was the one with longer nodes, it was a nice trippy haze high, more 'up' than the shorter pheno. I harvested all at 80 days of flower. The pine taste of the buds leans towards lemon, with the short pheno being similar, but sweeter. Nothing special about the taste, IMO, but it IS smooth. Very smooth smoke, no harshness at all. No sleepiness either, this keeps me awake, without the jitters.

I can't say enough good things about Nirvana's NL x Haze. It was as nice to grow as it is to smoke. Wouldn't recommend it for newbies, or for those looking for a commercial strain, but if you're looking for a high quality strain on a low quality budget, you'd be hard pressed to find too many better than this.

I started 3 seeds, which gave me 2 females. Very easy to manage, train and diagnose in veg. Grown under 65w Fluorex cfl's, fed with Safer brand all purpose liquid fertilizer w/fish emulsions, full strength, every other watering, starting at day 14. The one vegging in the pic was 19 days from planting.

After 6 weeks of veg, switched to 12/12, under a 400watt HPS Hortilux. Grew like nothing I've ever seen in bloom. Stems and fans leaves were as crystalized as the rest of the plant by the 4th week of 12/12. Main stalk bulged out all over like it was on steroids. Fed EJ Bloom & Fox Farm Big Bloom every other watering for 4 weeks, then just EJ Bloom for 2, then just water for 2. I'm really sad that I wasn't able to clone her as I believe she was "the" desirable phenotype. Haze dom. with Indica stature, flowered at about 14 inches, finished at about 32. Stalk, leaves, stems and parts of bud turned a beautiful shade of purple the last 2 weeks, with temps getting down to 67-68 during sleep period. Yielded approx. 2.5 oz. of excellent purple NL x Haze smoke.

Appearance - Looked indica on the plant, I guess the dense looking buds were filled with air, cause it dried out lookin like Haze, lost 75% of its density. Bag appeal would be very high though, crystals galore, all over everything.

Smell/Taste - I've put these two together because this is the first stuff I've had in a long, long time that tastes just like you think it would by smelling it. Great taste, very distinctive strong smell. A little skunky, a lot hazy. Only thing I've smelled similar is Black Haze and what some-one called Purple Haze quite a few years ago.

Effect - This is where she truly shines in my opinion. I haven't felt a high like this since I was 16 or 17 years old. I have a ridiculously high tolerance and by the 2nd or 3rd good toke of this stuff, I feel that buzz rush from the back to the front of my head. Another thing that makes this stuff really special to me is, even after smoking it 7-8-9 times in a day, it still gives me a great buzz everytime.

Started 6 seeds, 4 were girls. Vegged for about 6 weeks, until they showed sex, flowered for 7 1/2 weeks. I had 2 that were very lanky and eventually had to be cut down to make room for my Haze Hybrid.

The remaining 2 were nice, indica dominant ladies that flowered pretty quickly. Nice and frosty at 4-5 weeks and 100% cloudy at 7 weeks.

Nice fruity taste with skunky undertones. They high was incredible, all in the head. I liked it, but tired of it fairly quicky. Baeutiful lime green buds with lots of orange hairs, 2-3 good hits to get ripped.

August, 2002

This was my first grow in 2001. NL x Shiva was a great place to start. The plants grew quickly and were very forgiving. I kept the pH around 6 - 6.2 (now I keep it lower). There was only a little diversity in phenotypes, all had fat, triangular leaves.

The males showed preflowers pretty early. I placed most of the plants into the flowering area and kept one female for clones: she showed pre-flowers. Out of six I put into flower one was male and was removed.

The leaves were COVERED in trichomes! At that time I didn't know about making hash so I didn't do anything with them. If I ever want to make hash this is the plant I will grow.

The smoke was great. It laid me out for the duration with one toke. Don't expect to drive while enjoying this.

Nirvana seeds have never let me down.

Growers comment:

NL x Shiva was a very rewarding variety to grow. I would definitely recommend this variety to anyone looking for positive, uplifting high and a smooth, spicy taste. I would also highly recommend this strain to those looking for relief from depression. I enjoyed growing and smoking this strain very much. I am sure to grow it again.

In the beginning.....

I started 5 seeds out in cactus mix in a used sushii tray. I watered with Genesis micro base (uB) and Genesis Grow #2. Added a few drops of root hormone to seed sites. Seeds were on a heat mat under a 22W grow floro. 100% germination rate. PH 5.5 - 6.0

Transplanted to paper drinking cups with sphagnum grow mix around day 7. Transplanted to 6 inch pots at day 14.

Used FIM technique on all plants (day 18)

Vegitate.....

47 days from planting seeds till flowering. Used Genesis uB and grow #1 after first 14 days. These girls had no problem with 600 PPM nutes during veg stage. Plants around 10 inches. Flower.

Flower.....

Flowered girls between 49 and 56 days. Two males showed up early and were removed. No hermies. These girls loved thier nutes. My N1 plant demanded several waterings at 2400 PPM during bloom. I had to keep nutes at about 1600 PPM for most of the bloom period.

Of the three plants I had, there was quite a difference in the amount of stretching that went on during 12/12 cycle.

I had to put the shorter girls on pedastals to keep the canopy level.

Harvest and smoke..... :)

N1: This girls was a collossus. Finishing at 4 ft tall on day 49. This one had the least potent stone, but had the best buzz of all of my plants. I

toked up a little of this smoke and was rewarded with a very positive and motivating high. The taste was soft with a hint of sandalwood. Very nice

N3: This girl finished at about 3 ft tall in 53 days. Very similar taste to N1. This one had a bit more of a mellow stone, but still quite uplifting. Really good party smoke.

N4: This girl finished the shortest of all at a mere 18". She only stretched 10" during flower and finished last at day 56. Taste was great. High was similar to the other girls.

All girls were very trichome rich. The smaller fan leaves had trichomes coating them all the way up the stems and onto both sides of the leaf. Buds were quite sticky and very visually appealing.

July, 2004

This is the first time I have grown this strain. I really was not sure what to make of this strain, but due to the f'up in my room I needed to drop a few more seeds to max the sq footage.

I dropped 3 seeds into cubes, germed and then planted directly into 2g pots. At the same time I also had 6 White Rhino's (Nirvana) starting too.

Of the 3 NL x Shiva's, I ended up with 2 male and 1 female. They were really strange starters compared to others that I have grown and with the WR right beside them. They were slow starters and were really dwarfed by the WR. They were developing branches and leaves just staying super low and squat.

After 6 weeks of veg, I flipped the room to 12/12. The little dwarf (5" tall) female I had went nuts when the lights were switched. It ended up being a 36" high when finished at 57 days 12/12 and was having trouble standing itself up - it kept wanting to tip over!

Overall it was very easy to grow and did not have any nute issues or anything. It also did not use much water, probably due to its bud-stick form.

It really smells great when you cut it up. Quite a sweet smell while at the same time a dank smell.

In the end, after 57 days 12/12 I ended up getting just over 1 oz of dried, trimmed and manicured primo buds. No popcorn buds were kept but rather put aside for some ice in the future.

Overall not too much yield but not too bad either considering their small statured at 6 weeks when I changed the light cycle.

The buds are quite sticky when chopping them up, but I am not complaining! The smell is still fruity with a hint of skunk even after cure. All of the buds are quite frosty also!

During smoking, the buds are not harsh at all (I find some smoke can be more a tobacco taste). Very smooth, fruity flavor and pleasant to smoke!

From a potency point of view, I have had stronger but this is strong nonetheless! I actually find this to work better than the WR I harvested at the same time. I have about 7oz of WR to compare it with and I will defiantly be saving and preserving my NL x Shiva for special occasions!

I have another 7 seeds left from my 10 pack and I will defiantly being starting up a few more in the fall when I start the room backup. I also have some other strains I will be starting in parallel.

Very much worth the $ to buy the seeds and the wait to harvest! I would recommend this strain!

3 seeds germinated and 1 was female. She was average size with tight internodes during vegetative growth. It doubled in height between 12/12 and finish. The plant grew a very large top cola and a very thick stem; it needed no support. This plant was so loaded with trichomes that the buds looked pearl at a distance under the lighting. The buds pack a powerful punch. The buzz is very potent and still a good balance to the high. She goes 56 days. Good for stealth growers, light smell.

Outdoors this plant is great. Very tall and very full. The weather was absolutely wretched this summer with a consistent 90% humidity rating. Dutch passion, bagseed, skunk #1 and afghanis developed lethal fusarium stem infections which ate straight through the main stem and killed them all. The mango was resistant to this plague and it saved the harvest. Plants reach a height of about 12 feet if not pruned and if they are pruned they stay at about 8 feet but they get very bushy (up to 7 feet in circumference). Very nice smell, beautiful appearance, and an unbelievable taste. Expect about 500- 700 grams per plant if grown in the ground and you can get 1 oz in a 1 gallon pot. Oh yeah, I had 1 on the bank of a stream which flooded several times and left the main stem in 6 inches of water for two days at a time, guess what, it was never even phased. Very dependable and good to go if you need a plant you can count on.

I purchased my seeds from Nick at Dutch-Seeds and will start off by saying that I will definitely grow this strain again. All seeds germinated but due to space I selected the best 6 to keep. All plants looked the same with extreme lateral branch growth. After vegging for 4 weeks they started showing sex. I had 2 females. The males were pulled and the females were put in 12/12. They stretched alot...almost tripled in height. The buds started forming right away. They never had any problems with ferts, pests or heat. A true joy to grow (and smoke).

But the time between vegative phase and flowering phase was very long, which I believe was due to the very hot summer in Germany.

But fortunately they got buds and they needed till 27th September, when they got harvested.

I harvested about 280g per plant, wet, but I don't know how much this was after drying.

After 2 weeks the first smoke:

Partly it was still wet, but only a bit so it was smokeable. It smelled like nothing special and really not the mango smell that I hoped to get.

But when you smoked it, the odor of the mango spreaded, and it smelled really fine.

The high was okay nothing special, but it made you high. Totally heady, and that's what I was looking for.

Yesterday I had a long way by train and I met an old schoolfriend in the train . It was a very funny talk and I had to laugh a lot. One of the best train travels I've ever had because of the many joints I smoked before going by train.

So if you are interested in growing something easy and have a pretty nice weed but not anything special, then you're right with this strain.

Grower Report

January, 2004

Veg: Well this plant was a big fuzz with a lot of problems. Under the veg. period there were a lot of problems with MG, N etc. deficiency. While vegging this plant I discovered that the pH should be low (for organic soil) by low I mean 5.5 to 6 (more like hydro) - when this pH was hit, the plant grew well and after 35 day it was ready to set to flower.

Flower: Here we have something explosive! After 3 days of 12/12 (YES it's true!) the first sign of resin showed on my plant and I started counting days of flower. The flowering period did go well, and there was no special 'blooming-booms' as the flowers developed nice all the way. After 7.25 week (not 8 as Nirvana recommend) the plant is ripe and ready to harvest, this was done without any trimming - as I believe the best drying results is with a full leaf matter.

Taste, smell and potential, effect: The taste is nothing to write about (the plant it not cured yet!!); there was only a slight taste of something sweet, I think it is good, not bad. For smell, this plant is pretty low odor - sometimes there was a small whiff of plum. When it comes to potential and effect - the plant took me by surprise as I have figured that with no taste and 'thought hurt' the plant must have been weak (I did see all the trichomes, but...) - the surprise was that after 5 minutes I could notice a small visual disorder and a feeling of hot water running trough my body, 5 minutes after that my mind started to shine like a summers day - stress from work left me, and my mouth got active. Overall effect - this plant is a true worry-remover; Or as my wife said "This strain brings out the subconscious hippie :)"

Final rating: This plants carries some trouble, but if u have the time, it's worth it

Ferts + Supplies: I used bog's method of growing, 2 weeks seedling stage + 3 weeks veg stage + harvest at around 74 days flower.

Papaya can mature either very fast, or in the case with this plant, very slow. One of my male papaya plants busted a pollen sack at only 4 weeks veg. Be very careful with this plant, and from week 4 on, you absolutely MUST check for male sacks on an every other day basis.

Veg stage: Veg state was uneventful, the plant grew hard and strong. I gave quite a bit of nutes, and this plant took it like quite a champ. This pheno was somewhat tall and lanky, and required quite a decent amount of training. I had to tie, and re-tie many times due to the fact that this plant was such a strong grower. The leaves were a slightly lighter green than normal. They were wide, but were not completely indica wide. The leaves were a perfect balance between indica and sativa, which meant that the leaves didn't completely block light to the lower sections of the plant. The plant itself was somewhat lanky, but not too lanky. I would have to say that this plant was about 60/40 or maybe even 70/30 sativa, which i really liked.

Flower: This plant appreciated a 6.0 ph. This plant also seemed to respond oddly to nutes.. whereas most plants would burn the tips when given too much nutes, this plant would just retard its growth. Interesting for sure, and makes for a very difficult diagnosis of possible problems. The plant seems completely fine, but just doesn't grow. It was only when i dropped the nutrients to normal strength that the plant took off once again (i had, at the time, been giving 1.5 strength)

The main cola was not only the most beautiful part of the plant, but also the best producer (in terms of weight), and packed the most resin. Which brings us to another point, the trichomes. The trichomes on this plant were of the bulbous variety. From a distance it seemed as if there were almost no trichomes on this plant; This statement however, could not be further from the truth. Upon inspection with a radio shack microscope, you could see that there were a TON of trichomes, the only reason for lack of a pretty picture? The fact that they were bulbous.

Once dried, the trichomes stand out quite a bit more. However do not use trichomes as an indicator of potency.

Late flower was also uneventful. This plant loves the dark periods. If you are ONLY growing this one plant by itself, I implore you to lengthen the dark period to 14 hours. This plant responds amazingly to a longer dark period. In fact, for reasons that were outside my control, i had to put the plant into darkness for almost a full 24 hours towards the end of the growth. When I did this, I realized how the plant reacted to the dark cycle. It matured incredibly over a short period of time. However I do not recommend this practice, it is a sure indicator of the plants love for dark. Especially since I cut back on the light, and saw the most rapid maturation.

This plant really does smell of mango, which is where i believe its heritage lies. I had a few plants also growing in the chamber, and from quite a distance this plant could be smelt. I believe my friend said "man this place stinks like a mango skunk." So you can be sure that it wasn't just me :)

Smoke Report: The smoke from this plant is absolutely beautiful. What is so beautiful about it, is in its smoothness of smoke, and mild yet powerful stone. I have had more powerful stones, but they usually left me paranoid. This stone left me quite happy, and I was very impressed with its effects. I have also never smoked a bud as smooth as papaya. I mean, it was almost as if i was smoking flavored air, and not smoke at all. This is definitely a plant for those that don't have iron lungs. I really can't stress how smooth and light the smoke was for my lungs.

The taste is also one of the positive attributes of papaya. Like I stated earlier, there is a mango smell to the plant, what i did not mention was that this smell was carried on as flavor during the smoke. Everyone commented on the plant's fruity taste. This plant also improves from a long cure. I would recommend a very minimum of a month, in order to enjoy the plants fruity flavor.

As great as papaya is, it isn't without its achilles heel. The only downside to papaya is that the wonderful stone, is very short lived. The stone rarely lasts longer than one and a half hours. The stone gives a nice up, clear, very heady type of stone. This is most certainly not a body stone, and would not be a great pain reliever. This is also not a night cap stone, like many of the predominantly indica type stones. If I ever have a day where I have nothing to do, I smoke this stuff first thing in the morning. It is the only pot I've had that has a great come down, and keeps me energized enough to do mundane homely tasks.

Pot Cocktails: There is a remedy I discovered in order to counter the short lived stone, and that is to mix this fine herb with another more powerful herb. My mix of choice is jock horror from nirvana. The mix will really depend on what I want, but if its a night cap, I will do a 60/40 split in favor of jock horror. A nice after dinner smoke will be a 60/40 split in favor of Papaya. The 60/40 split gives just enough oomph to give the papaya a sleepy come down some 3 hours later (if you remember, the stone usually lasts for 1.5 hours, but the jack lengthens the time by double!). The 60/40 split also leaves the papaya taste (whereas the 40/60 isn't as strong). Also on days when i really want some fruitiness, I will mix the papaya with blueberry. You should really try this some time, as it is probably the most tasty (fruity) combo i've ever had.

I definitely give papaya a thumbs up! It is a MUST sample for every grower out there.. whether it has a permanent home in your garden, is up to your needs and wants. Personally for me, I wish I had kept a clone as I'm growing to appreciate this plant more and more every day. I will miss its wonderful fruity taste that felt almost as if it was my dessert after a good meal.

It's too easy for a new grower like me ...

But I think that it's also appreciated by the "old school" peoples.

She made big, dense buds. Typical indica growth pattern.

Bud are too big.....

Only three weeks of growing on 24/25, three 90 watt fluos, and when she goes away from there she goes in a closet, a small closet. 250w HPS for 12 hour/day, with a small add of DM Super Bud.

They are too thick when they are ready for harvest.

From three bushy plants (like 1 ft and half tall) I've harvested a total of 107 g.

2 plants grown outdoors in a greenhouse with scrog tech. These plants were alot of fun to grow. Not a whole lot of trouble at all.

They loved the organic fertes especially the taller lankier one of the two. The taller one of the 2 finished about 2 weeks after the shorter one. I am assuming it was more of a sativa pheno, lanky with only 2 large main colas with lots of smaller buds.

The shorter one had lots of short like chubby buds and a little bit different smell in flowering. The more sativa of the two smelled alot sweeter and put on quite a bit of weight the last 2-3 weeks of flowering. Finished both plants with about 30% amber trichomes.

The smoke is quite rushy at times, a great smoke for the outdoors. Brings nature out alot. I am deffinetly going to be keepin this one in my seed regime. A fun smoke and grow indeed.

I received these as freebies from SeedsDirect and they worked out much better than the crappy KC Brains I ordered (those are more trouble than they are worth). PPP seeds were a breeze to germinate. I had a few incredible males that I wish I saved for breeding. They were the fastest growing plants I have ever seen.

The plants themselves react pretty quickly to pH imbalance and I found that they prefer around 5.9.

7 out of 10 plants showed preflowers after about 50 days so I dumped the males and unknowns. I was left with 4 females to choose from. The diversity of phenotypes was minimal. Great for Nirvanas which are supposedly F2's.

Clones rooted pretty easily and the mothers produce lots of clone sites if cropped correctly.

There was about a foot of stretch in the flowering phase, but not unmanageable. The smell during flowering was a little increased but not too bad. I found the yield to be better than I expected. This is a great plant!

The smoke is great, the couchlock only sets in if you lay down. Otherwise, a great up high that lasts. The flavor is spicy and sometimes reminds me of peanut butter! I would grow PPP again with no hesitation. Great value for the price, no false economy here.

Got lucky with one single PPP female, germinating various strains has given me good luck. Soil grow (Ocean Forest soil/perlite) started with 3 PPP seeds, one was female two were male. As with most Nirvana plants that I've grown the PPP was no different, very healthy and uniform growth. These plants had distinct 'fatty' indica leaves, making it easy to tell it apart from other plants in my garden, they also never got dark green compared to the other plants I had in the garden. She went under a 430 watt HPS for about 45 days or so until they showed sex and got to the desired height. 1000w Hortilux was waiting or the single PPP female. Bloom went off without a hitch, the PPP took its sweet time flowering, with a late start at the very beginning. the PPP is a hearty eater, and grew well over 32 inches tall outgrowing most other plants I had in my bloom room. After 70 days plus flowering I took her down, dried her for 4 days naturally, and cured her for another week (berping the jars for fresh air every day).

This strain was a bit rough during the beginning stages. I had 2 females out of 3 seeds planted, and went from there. The method I used included topping, and then paperclip training for about a week to spread out the canopy. The plants were grown under a Sun Systems Garden Light II 150w HPS. The soil was Scotts potting soil and perlite (60/40), with about a cup of blood meal mixed in. DynaGro nutes were used exclusively. I did not follow a schedule with the nutes but rather fed the plants when they needed it.

The buds were dried for a week hanging upside down, and then transferred to mason jars. The smoke has a nice smooth texture with a nice piney and lemony flavor. When sampled by my neighbors I was told it was the best bud they had ever tasted.

The high doesn't sneak up on you but rather flows into your head after a hit or two. The effect is defiantly sativa like, and I found myself paranoid many times. After a bowl I would feel as if I had downed two Red Bulls (energy drink), and had somewhat of a caffeine rush like feeling, along with the usual paranoia. The high doesn't render one useless, and is a great day smoke in my opinion, with couch lock only setting in when smoking while already tired.

Overall, I would defiantly grow this strain again. The odor was very low, and this strain is great for stealth growing IMHO. I believe a higher yield could have been obtained using the SCROG method, but I yielded about 2.5-3 oz. total off the two plants. If you are looking for a nice

Being my first grow I decided to try Nirvana's Pure Power Plant plus 3 other strains to determine which particular genetics would best suit my very confined loft scrog and my lack of experience. The PPP was perfect in both these respects - I've already ordered some more seeds for my next grow :-).

Unfortunately due to growing constraints and gender, I was restricted to just one plant, I can't therefore offer any comparative examples.

I planted 3 seeds and got 2 females and 1 unknown, eventually I was forced the cull 2 of them due to space limitations. (I only wish I had trashed some of the other strains now)

I vegged at 18/6 under a 600w HPS for 12 weeks, by which time she was 12" tall and looking stout with dark green indica leaves held firmly upwards on short leaf stems. I attempted a FIM at about 9 weeks but got a standard "top" instead. Better luck next time I hope.

I then flowered at 12/12 for 80 days, the extra long flowering was due to me not realising I was over-watering. I've since got a moisture meter :-)

They showed sex a couple weeks into flowering and my remaining plant stretched quickly to twice it's final veg height but it then stopped growing just as quickly. This plant looks beautiful during flowering, the white trichs look excellent against the dark green leaves. Once she had stopped stretching she needed next to no attention.

I watered daily and fed every 3 days with half strength ferts, 25:15:15 for vegging then 15:15:30 for flowring. I stopped the ferts 2 weeks before harvest. Unlike the other strains in my garden, the PPP never showed any signs of distress, she didn't even complain about having water-logged roots for most of her life. The other strains suffered occasional periods of heat-stress during hot 38 degree sunny days, the PPP however looked as happy as ever. A very forgiving plant, ideal for scrogs and beginners.

I eventually harvested 3 ounces from my one plant, the bud looks very appealing with fairly-dense light-green buds that glisten with trichs and require very little manicuring.

With regard to the smoke, it has a crisp pine smoothness, very easy on the throat and quite more-rish. A month's curing has improved upon the smoothness and taste slightly.

This particular pheno glues my arse firmly to the couch with a smile from ear to ear. It's the most potent smoke I've ever enjoyed. For me however, this has to be a weekend smoke, I couldn't hold down a day job after smoking PPP in the evenings.

Reports back from friends confirm my experiences, this bud is wiping-out even the most hardened stoners with a single joint. Unfortunately they all want the bud I have the least of.

On a negative side, I've found PPP really screws-up my taste buds, a few tokes and expensive wine begins to taste like vinegar. Strangely chocolate seems the only flavour unaffected :-)

I will be dedicating 3 quarters of my grow room to this strain for my next grow, the remaining quarter is reserved for Nirvana's NLxShiva that's my weekday smoke. I've chosen 2 strains from the original 4 to regrow, the discarded strains were both from another breeder.

All-in-all a very easy plant to grow that rewarded me with a smooth monged-out but happy couch-lock. Hopefully I will get a sativa dominant pheno next time.

An excellent price for such a high quality plant & smoke.

Sorry for the quality of the photos, I've just bought a better camera for my second grow.

Had a lot of trouble with these plants...out of 5 seeds germed, 3 ended up as female. All 3 were of the same phenotype (consequently the males were of thier same specific phenotype as well). They were all very sativa statured; tall with loose, airy buds and "claw" like fan leaves.

All preflowered, around 4-5 days 12/12 under a 400W HPS, after vegging for about 4 weeks under a 400W MH (nothin special, just let them grow out as they would as trees). Grew next to 4 other strains and was amazed at how sativa-like these plants were getting. They took forever to flower....around 70 days but could have definately gone longer.

I know other folks have had completely opposite experiences with this particular strain, so just remember the phenotypes that I recieved were just that.

Out of the threes females I recieved about 40g dry, not too much, and the smoke isn't honestly that great. Very sativa high but the taste just isn;t there. My other simultaneous grows went perfectly, I think this strain is just picky and I didn't tend to it as much as it probably would have liked...I had to focus on a few test grows for other members that took priority.

Used Superthrive with supplemental macro and micro nutrients/vitamins throughout last 2 weeks of veg....used Earth Juice bloom and Catalyst (foliar) dring flower.

It makes me forget things...

Good plant.....not the best in my stock but a keeper nonetheless.

It will be SUPER bushy if you pinch it, or will SOG with ease if left alone, versatile grower.

Long petioles, so they are kinda easy to crowd their elbow room, but didnt really suffer from it. Interesting leafs, the fans seem to contort to one side like pH problems in freshly transplanted clones that cause those weird "twisties"; they do it very slightly with no ill effect, but curious.....

It isnt the stinkiest plant in the world, but after harvesting the others and shifting the PPP around, that place stunk like hell....! It did go about 7-10 days longer, but the Mac comes down in like 51 or so...

My plants had fertilizer burn early in veg and it stalled growth for quite awhile. These plants react very quickly to ferts and ph. In veg the leaves seemed more of a mix between Indica and Sativa but as soon as they hit flowering the leaves became very Sativa-looking and there was really bad stretching. It wasn't all that hard to contain with good training.

My plants all reacted very well to training and I was able to get a crapload of bud sites. One drawback I saw was that the buds were too stringy, I like my buds more dense. Resin production also seemed under par compared to what I have seen. Over all I am satisfied with my Pure Power Plant grow and harvest, but after my clones bloom, I am done with this strain. I enjoyed the experience but not a keeper in my garden.

Smoke Report:

The smoke from my PPP buds is light in taste and pretty heady in effect. I tend to become more paranoid with this bud. As weird as it seems it's a good bud to let loose and have fun. Very energetic, up high. When I smoke these sweet piney buds I tend to get my ass off da couch and go have some fun. If you are an Indica lover, the pheno I got ain't for you!

There were not any major problems during veg or flower stage, but this strain really loves humidity during early veg phase. This strain was very bushy and had loads of branches. If you are looking for a strain to grow out a mother plant, this will give loads of clones.

The odor on this strain was very fruity during the flowering stage but went a little more sweet and heavy to the end. The yield was about 40 grams of nice trich covered bud. The buds were really icy and looked inviting. This is an excellent bubblehash strain.

After a week of drying and 10 days of cure, I sampled this bud. The smell is really overwhelming sweet and hashy. The fruitiness is all but gone now.

The taste is very sweet. Not fruity sweet, but more hash heavy. A hint of vanilla? The high is really energetic. This is a perfect wake & bake herb. All in all this is a nice strain that I'll grow again, no doubt.

Very easy to grow. Very hardy plant. It had every leaf picked off by a deer and somehow regrew and yielded 4+oz. Decent smoke. Could have been better but most of the problems were due to grower error. These come as freebies from Gypsy, and a pretty easy grow... except they took a bit longer to mature than I would like in a typical strain.

I love this plant. Overall I would have to say it is one of the best strains I have ever grown. She is stable and able to withstand massive amounts of abuse. She grows fat thick buds with great cal/leaf ratio. I have intentionally tried to cut clones in the most screwed up bound to fail manner and they still root. My seed germination was 80% with 4 out of 8 plants being female. I highly suggest this strain to a new grower. If you can't grow this strain than give up on growing altogether.

Mine were grown in an organic soil mix and matured starting at day 53. Trichs were fully clouded by day 56. I had to tie down the top colas on several plants before they snapped off. The best thing is... I got the seeds for free...

I've got one Skunk #1 female in my mum area, a clone of the first plant I ever grew. However, she's a beauty! Very vigorous and rapid growth in vegging, good trichome production in flowering, and pretty good smoke overall.

Sativa-dominant in appearance, and duration of flowering, but definitely not in yeild. This girl just keeps on flowering... at 60 days, the one I've got still spits out fresh calyxes, stacking on budmass anywhere it can. High is mainly heady, fairly energetic, but in my opinion, somewhat lacking in character. It's excellent smoke, don't get me wrong... but there's nothing about it that just... jumps out at me. Yet, it is fairly potent, and the yield and appearance are most excellent. I'm certainly glad to have it in my collection.

Despite its name, my Skunk #1 wasn't very skunky at all! It was fairly low odor, but definitely had a noticable pine and Skunk mixed in there.

This was my third grow and first very successful grow.

I put three seeds in papertowels and all three germinated within two/three days. All three ended up being female. They were a little sensitive to fert's in their early stages but adjusted very nicely. The only problem I had with these girls was that they stretched quite significantly for the first two weeks of flowering. After that they just started packing on buds.

I used a tea made of bat guano, peruvian seabird guano, epsom salt, and kelp at pretty much every watering once flowering started. The last two weeks I just watered them with 24-hr water.

I harvested at 55 days because my next strain was ready for flowering and the Skunks where done for the most part. 50% of the trichs were cloudy and 45% clear, maybe about 5% amber. That's where I like them.

I pulled 3 oz from two Skunk #1 seeds direct freebies. I kept a clone for the future, since this is a nice strain to have around.

I only used a converted 150w HPS security light plus two compact flouros during flowering. With more light the buds may have been more compact and dense.

All my friends that got to smoke these buds were very impressed. The smoke is extremely smooth and tastes very nice. The high comes on immediately and is fairly energetic. Some people even said this is the nicest bud they've ever seen... and later sent me phone messages like: "Hoollly Shitt, I'm high".

I definitely recommend this strain and it's definitely worth every penny!

The Skunk #1 was an easy undemanding plant to grow, and would be great for a beginning grower. There was some odor, but not as bad as I had expected.

The Sk#1 was not picky about fertilizers or anything else.

There was moderate stretch in flowering, but not bad for a mostly Sativa strain.

Yield for one plant was 1.6 oz, above average in this particular crop.

The smoke is a head high, fun and active, but also a bit paranoia inducing. The high is disappointingly short lived. The buds are not the most potent - although better than commercial bud - but they give a nice racy high if that's what you're in the mood for. I prefer to mix these buds in a bowl with something more Indica, to take the edge off the stone as well as lengthen the duration.

I enjoyed the grow from start to finish. This plant took a lot of stress and was very giving. It clones very easily. The plant stays nice and healthy under all sorts of conditions. Didn't stretch much. The Sk#1 had medium size nuggets. This strain is a good beginner strain but really not much of a keeper. It took at least 60 days to fully mature and that is way to long for a skunk #1. Also the potency was very disappointing. I grew this strain in different situations and always ended up with a weak potency. Definitely the weakest potency I have every seen from what looked like great dank nuggets. The resin production was amazing, crystals everywhere, just falling from every part of the buds. The High was not very strong. At first the high was a mild head high but it was not accompanied by any couch lock so it leaves you feeling not high.

I germinated 10 seeds of the skunk #1s from Nirvana. All 10 sprouted and grew healthy. Out of the 10 I got 5 females but one looked weak so I killed it. The 4 skunk #1s were grown under 250 watts of flouros in the veg cycle until about a foot tall. I put 3 of the 4 under the 400 watt MH agrosun light with 118 watts of side lighting from flouros.

The other one I left with a clone from my last grow (Durban poison) under the flouros. They grew to about 2 and 1/2 ft. tall with nicely developed lower colas as well as a beefy main cola. I broke the main stem pretty badly of one of the skunk#1s. I duct taped it and supported it and it recovered but stayed shorter than the others. I planed on flushing them for 2 weeks before harvest but stopped feeding too early and flushed for about 4 weeks. I also stopped watering a few days before harvest as well. I harvested when most of the trichomes were cloudy, not many amber. The one skunk#1 I left under complete flouros got very purpley due to the low temps at night.

Big thanks to Gypsy and seeds direct, for 20$ I'd be happy with one good female getting at least an ounce or two. That 20 bucks I spent ended me up with over 6 ounces. The smoke is smooth and very relaxing while still social. I can't get enough with my aromazap vaporizer I just keep

I harvested this plant at day 62 of flower. The buds were slow cured for 2 months. It has a very strong skunk smell. The buds are sticky and resonous, with golden/red hairs, a classic skunk look. The buzz is strong and nicely balanced. The plant was grown under 168w CFL and 70w HPS in a cabinet, using a 5gal DWC bubble bucket. I used BC nutes. I started with 2 plants, vegged them for 5 weeks and determined that 1 was a male. The female vegged for a total of 6 weeks. She flowered under a 360w HPS and became very bushy. I had to tie it down 2 times in order to keep it under the light. It prduced 5 1/2oz of bud.

Grower Report

August, 2004

I started this grow with (2) Skunk #1 seeds from Nirvana, one turned out to be male, a standard 50/50 mix. The price for the seeds was very reasonable and delivery was prompt. The plant was grown in a 5Gal DWC hydro system with BC nutrients, in a stealth grow cabinet. I had to tie the plant back and down several times to keep it from getting to close to the 360HPS light during flower. Temps in the cab were 68 degrees F at the resevoir and 78 degrees F at the canopy under the light. When I harvested this plant at 50/50 amber trics, the smell was overwhelming, very strong skunk odor through the whole house and outside as well. I ended up with 5 1/2 oz. of premium bud, as well as 2 oz. of very sticky shake, which made excellent hash. 2 hits of the scissor hash almost knocked me over. The buds were slow cured in glass jars. The buds are sticky and have a strong skunk odor, the smoke tastes strongly of hash. The high is strong, a good blend of an 'up' head high with a pleasing body stone. 4 or 5 hits are plenty even after smoking these buds for a month.

Skunk Special... Could be a little more special. This plant was pretty easy to grow with a good yield, very stinky. This plant could easily stink up your whole house... trust me! Outdoor it smells more like Bubble gum! The taste is pretty good also but the effects were not as I expected, it just didn't "hit" me hard enough. With a Skunk#1 finishing a short time before comparing the two I was all about the Skunk#1. Skunk Special is a good plant though don't get me wrong if you're a Skunk lover I'd give it a try.

We germinated four seeds out of a regular pack, two of those turned out to be female.

Both plants grew quite quick, they were vegged until they were 12 inches high, cuttings were taken then they were put in to flower. I will say that I've had trouble rooting these cuttings, out of four I took I only got two to root!!(they are in flower now). This strain does not smell very much unless disturbed, and then the smell is of earth which mellows into a pleasant fruity berry smell. The plants show resin from about week three and by week 8 they are covered in snow, they look really nice. These were harvested after 8 and a half. Now on to the buzz....well I was looking for something to knock me out, and boy do I think I've found it, the plants I've got are very strong, it's very fuzzy and warm. It makes your eyes feel very heavy and your brain work very slow, not really the ideal smoke for during the day more like to end the day on. Overall a good strain for body pain, and insomnia...it's damn near narcotic.

Snow White was for me a dream to grow she did exactly what I needed her too. Short, high yeilding, great smoke, I used Oxyplus and Superthrive to start them of then ionic nutes starting at 1/4 strength going up to 3/4 strength, never needed full strength. Out of 10 seeds all popped but as time went on 2 kinda lagged behind but I kept them anyway just to see. I vegged for around 4 1/2 weeks until the 7th node then switched them to 12/12, they started out under fluoros and then to a 400w son-t. Out of the 8 best I got 4 male and 4 lovely ladies. They grew like crazy up and out like little Christmas trees and piled on the bud, masses of swollen calyxes and white hairs stretching out for pollen but there was none there as the males were long gone. They just kept on fattening up, crystaling was amazing they sparkled in the light. They went a full eight weeks until ready with some sampling along the way, it got better as they neared the 8th week, I also left 1 for a week more and it was more couchlock than the others. The 2 that lagged behind ended up vegging for 3 weeks longer then flowered and they turned out great a lot smaller than the others but perfectly formed and with even fatter buds , snow white will hopefully be in my garden for the foreseeable future due to clones I took and kept 2 back as moms. Happy growing.

Flowering took a while to start up, about 10 days after a light cycle change. But once it started, DAMN... it was relentless. Packed on a lot of weight in the last 3rd of flowering. And I mean a lot. Every cola was falling over and needed support.

Not the most frosty bud in the world. In fact, takes a damned long time for the trichs to show up. But in the end the calyxes are completely frosted over. The trichs seem to be limited to the reproductive region only. Very very few trichs on the foliage. But packs a decent punch. I recommend it.

This was a very nice grow. The plant takes a little while to grow in veg. Around the 2nd - 3rd week she gets going. She vegged for around 2 months. She kept growing in flower and didn't show signs of sex for about 12 days into 12/12.

Flowering came on strong in the 3rd week. She started packing on weight and got a second boost in the 8th week. I cut her at 60 days with 95% cloudy and 5% amber. I got between 5 to 6 oz off this plant. The smoke is great.

Reminds me of the old red hair I got in high school. Very clean high. Helps out with anxiety and upset stomach. The buds are full of red hairs and a ok amount of crystals. Little gummy so cure it out good before the jars. Like the last guys, she did hermi but only in the last two weeks. Didn't hurt anything.

Only found 3 seeds out of my fist OZ. That didn't effect anything or bother the smoke. Get it while you can. I would grow again just cause its a good buzz for any event...

Grower Report

September, 2004

This strain is excellent. Any other reports that showed low yield, poor potency and anything otherwise bad is totally false. This strain was very easy to grow. Started seedlings indoors under a 70 watt hps and 2 40watt fluoro tubes, then moved them outdoors, although it's an indoor strain, it did very well. The only differences between indoor and out is that it grew a bit bigger under the sun, and took a little bit longer to flower. Also, the genetics are a tad unstable outdoors. I saw only 2 variations, about half were a foot taller, with lots of branches and less trichs to start, and flowered a tad slower as well. The other was shorter, had no branches at all and grew a massive 1 cola bud from the bottom to the top. The trichs are noticeably fuller and they flowered quicker.

Other qualities were the resistance to many things. All the plants I neglected ended up female, while all the other I had time to take care of ended up male. Needless to say, the females were left root bound for several weeks, they were dry most of the time, and had no nutes at all. They basically turned yellow green, and started losing lower leaves. In the end, once they were given WEAK nutes and transplanted and watered properly, they took right off and recovered completely. I assume it lowered their overall yield, but I still brought in a whopping 1 lbs per plant. Other resistance were mold and overall lack of water and nutes. All of the plants at one point were without water for over a week, in 30 degree weather. They all turned yellow green before adding light nutes, and were exposed to the highest humidity and moisture levels imaginable. I only picked 2 small mold spots off 2 plants, to my amazement. Anyone living in Atlantic Canada knows how bad the mold was this year. So I was very happy with those results. The seeds were ordered from Nirvana through www.buydutchseeds.com The smoke of this weed is great. It is flavorful, and fruity. The aroma is great, not much smell during the grow, but once a few trichs pop, out it comes. The bag appeal is very good. Lots of trichs, a lighter green bud. It was very easy to grow and went through a lot to come out like t did. I recommend this strain to anyone who wants a much shorter flower time, and that doesn't sacrifice yield or potency.

- 'Top 44'

T44 is one of our top commercial strains. Top 44 is our fastest flowering variety which under ideal conditions can be ready in ~6 weeks. This strain stays low and does not branch to much making it ideal for confined gardens or sea of green farming. Top 44 is a strong easy to grow plant and a great selection for the first timer. Top 44 has also proven to be a great balcony producer. The smoke is deep and skunky with a long lasting buzz.

Grower Report

June, 2005

Friend of mine had a couple of plants to give away, that he had grown from seed. I thought it best to chop them up, into clones. A third plant, a wee bit on the scraggly side showed signs of female. So I thought, Well I won't tell you what I said. We eventually made 61 clones.

My pal eventually ended up needing some, so he took 10. I slung 26 in the tray and put 12 in pots outside. The rest weren't able to be spaced anywhere. R.I.P!

Once the clones had broken through the 3 inch cubes, I placed them in the tray, and Vegd for 3 weeks.

As they were compacted together, I obviously had to do a lot of trimming on lower folage along the way.

Flowering :

I was still feeding them Veg (Growth Tech) 13 days into flowering.

Day7 - Add B-cuzz bloom stimulator

Day13 - Flush out tank. Add Bloom (Growth Tech).

Day27 - Flush out tank.

I extended the timing of the light cycle from 12/12 at the beginning of day 25 to 14/10. Until day 43, it was brought back to 12/12.

Day 49 - Flush out tank , feed Ripen 1week.

Day 56 - Flush out tank. 5days half strenght Ripen.

2days plain water.

Finish day 60. Hairs 80% amber

I started to harvest some plants 2 days before the end so the trimming wasn't so gruelling.
23 vigorous plants. And 3 from the scraggly one.

Frostfrostfrostfrost,all the way. The bud's went from suger dusting to Narnia. Extreem.

This wasn't a day 44 Top44. Even though I extended the light, and over feed once.
But I did also want to see what Top44 would be like longer into flowering. I even let some plants go 62/63 days.

Nice smoke, but very strong. Get the munchies on the thirst joint. Bed time by 2nd joint nitenite ZZZzzzzzzzzzz....

P.S. Them that know. Know!

White Rhino are very healthy and sturdy plants. The only thing I could add is they don't take much nutes. I only use organics. But Leaf burn is there on some leafs. I've tried to back off and then fert again. I usually nute every other watering but on the White Rhino's maybe every third would do.

They are starting to really smell. I have good air flow thru the flower room to the outside. But upon getting close to these babies they smell worse than any strain I've grown since bagseed. They smell of sweet fresh flowers. They actually smell like I'm in a florist shop.

I have no problems whatsoever with this strain. Nirvana couldn't have an easier strain to grow. That leaf nute burn issue never became a problem.

First up is my largest sativa phenom rhino it will be the largest yielder hard nugs and frosty as hell. The White Rhino was harvested at 57 days. Trics cloudy and pistols 70%.White Rhino's have tight hard frosty buds. They smell like an evergreen tree. But curing will change that.

The Appearance is of a two toned brown and green. The bud leaves are green and the calyxes are a tan and brown color. These buds are shiny from trichomes and very very sticky. When you break these buds apart it sticks to itself. When you pull it apart the buds are so tight that you must pull it apart, then pull that apart, then pull that apart, you get the idea. It's endless. When you finish pulling the bud apart you will have some nice finger hash to scrape off your fingers. Let me tell you it slows down the typing of this report.

The Smell is of a pine forest, a very light piney smell. Smells just like Lysol Bathroom cleaner. but not obnoxious.

I must tell you that I smoke joints. So in a joint this weed burns very slow and hard to keep light. It is very resinous and coats the cigarette paper with black tar as it burns. Don't get me wrong it burns well while you're tokin but stop for a while and it goes out.

The Taste test; I'm smoking a joint of this right now and what comes to mind is piney.

Light semi-smooth but not very expansive. You cannot hold this in for long. The piney taste will cause you to exhale sooner than you would like. It reminds me of Super Silver Haze. It has a very strong taste somewhat harsh and you just can't hold the smoke in for long. It leaves a pine cough drop residual on your tongue which is not unpleasant if you like cough drops.

The High When I smoked my first joint of it. It passed my sticky test, my burn test and my taste test but here I was trying to decide on the high. Then it hit me. It hit me HARD.

This is truly one of the creeper strains. The high takes you over in about ten minuets. And you get light headed. I actually get a positive sativa inspired high. Also I feel waves of body high flowing through my body. The waves start in my gut and flow right up to my head and feed the head high more strength. WOW it's a double edge sword. This stuff is potent! Why for $15 it's a steal. The high lasts a long time and if you smoke too much your eyelids will keep attempting to meet. I highly recommend this strain to newbie and old-timers alike. The yield is there the potency is there and it's very easy to grow. I will grow it again.

This is just unreal! Some days ago I put a NIRVANA; WHITE-RHINO-seed into a "Jiffy".....48 hours later I wondered as I noticed 2 roots coming out of the seed.....only a day later I saw 2 little plants in that Jiffy: (one of them looks a bit ill/sick).....now I separated them in 2 independent jiffy pots. The healthy plant is growing already, but the sick looking plant stays little. My twins are doing very well.....by the way....the sick one is healthy, too. -only the "germ-leafs" were damaged...but the next leaves look healthy.

I grow these plants near 55°N; it's a very wet and cold climate. I bought these seeds for indoor, but then I had some trouble. So my only chance to grow cannabis was to grow it outdoors. It was only a test how the Rhino grows in my climate, and YOU ALL know the result of it...!!!

I'm very content with this harvest. The Rhino#1 was a more indica pheno with a spicy strong smell, and the yield was 590g wet! The second Rhino was a bit more sativa than the other plant...with a very sweet fruity smell...the yield was 560g wet! Both plants were about 1.80m tall. I just checked the dry yield of the second Rhino, and it was 160g! That means 180g+160g=340g from one seed!! That's enough I think! -Thanks

NIRVANA-Seeds!

The smell is so strong, I wont need a deodorant in the future ...my clothes still smell like weed after harvesting those smelly bitches!

That should be in the list of "strains, which a grower should grow in his life".

I'm curing this weed now for 3 weeks, and yesterday I smoked the first pure joint of it!

The smoke could be softer, but the high is just amazing, it is so strong that you can't smoke it pure, or you'll lose your mind, that is what happened to me and my friend after we had smoked about 2/3 of the pure spliff.

I just sit in a chair, thinking about everything you could imagine. I had problems staying on the ground and not flying around. It was really different to all what I have smoked before, either homegrown or bought buds. Only very experienced smokers are able to smoke that pure or you'll die after smoking a whole joint :) LOL

I don't want to know how the affects would be smoking that shit in a bong.... creeper stone!

I started these out in a 14 gallon bubbler, then as I saw a problem arise, changing nutes during flowering, didn't want to break branches by taking top lid off, so I made it into a top feeding bubbler. I started out with 5 out of 5 beans germinating and ended up with 3 females. I started them under a 400 watt HPS from seed, moved them to a 1000 watt HPS during flowering. they hardly required any nutes and was always having to top off with plain water and never any nutes except when changing res.

I pulled the switch on the grow op due to odor problems and, well I didn't have any weed. the buds were looking great and thanks to the kool-bloom added I got big buds quick. I looked at the trichomes under a 60x-100x microscope and they were some cloudy some amber and some clear. after hearing about a more 'up' high I decided to test a bud. I nuked it according to darkstars steam method and was absolutely amazed at how good it was after coming out of microwave. 6 weeks and 3 days was total flowering time and believe me when I tell you I have no problem with yield or potency. to any one looking for a great strain this is it. wish I had kept a mother

I grew this strain out from 5 seeds. I got 100% germination. 1 plant was very skimpy and culled 2 were males and also culled.

The two remaining plants W2 and W5 were grown using Genesis formula nutes in a simple soilless mix. (See Aethyr 93 NL x Shiva report for more grow details)

The plants grew quite well and I had no problems with them during the grow.

Vegged plants 47 days and started flower at 8"

Flowered plants 60 days finished at 28"

Buds formed in a Christmas tree shape but were slow to fill out and then remained quite airy even under two 400 W lights. I grew NL x Shiva at the same time as this one and the buds on those girls were big and much tighter.

Harvest and smoke:

Yield was a bit below what I would have liked, but quite respectable. This bud had very little aroma or taste. The stone was okay. It was an all around buzz, but kind of had a wet blanket feeling to it. Just not my cup of tea.

Conclusion:

I was quite disappointed with this strain. Although it was easy to grow and looked pretty good, the poor taste and wet blanket stone was a real let down. I am growing my mother's out and will not be growing this strain anymore.

Update:

I felt I was a bit harsh on this strain so I had a few friends do a smoke report for me. They all thought the White Rhino had a very good stone and they didn't really mind the mild, almost weedy taste. In all, 2 people thought it was so-so and the rest REALLY liked it. I would consider growing this again if I had a medical application for it.

The stone is a lost Stone very hard to keep thought on one thing for any amount of time. Something ive noticed is if you have any work that needs done it wont get done, thats what ive noticed this is a PM smoke for shure. Out of a bowl its hard on the old lungs, but in a bong very nice. Everyone I know that has smoked this tells me its almost to strong:)

I got this strain because of all the great things one reads about it. First of all the potency and it's ability to function as a painkiller.

Veg:

I started 4 seeds, don't remember if it was me or the seeds, but out of those 2 germinated.

In veg these plants were nothing unusual.

Normal growth, slightly purple stems which seem to be a trait of this strain.

Not much to say about growth really...

Preflowers showed rather early.

WR is also an easy cloner, due to lots of good branches I had a good base to start from.

They all rooted.

Not much to say about growth apart from that, pretty normal.

Flower:

In flower the one female I got started to stretch, like I expected it to, considering its sativa dominance. Wasn't too bad at all tho, just a bit more than the indica dominant plants in the system.

Buds looked very unique, dark green and very compact.

They didn't start swelling for a long time, when the others had already finished budding, this one took of. Not as much as expected tho.

I harvested this one at day 60. Smell was very fruity at that time, the buds were covered in resin.

The buds I harvested were very compact; in fact I was not able to squeeze them at all... great product.

Smoke:

The final product looks greenish brown, the buds are incredibly compact and sticky, are broken up easily (with a grinder), and smoke perfectly smooth in a joint.

Many describe the high as very strong, but I don't really agree. Haven't smoked enough to really be able to tell, but compared to my AK48 it doesn't stay in your body for hours and keep you flying.

It's more of a stoney, mellow high which numbs your body.

The buds smell like citrus cleaner, the smoke is a bit sour, kinda like NYCD.

Opinion:

The WR is ok in all aspects, the only things I was disappointed by a bit: I expected it to be more potent than the AK, but obviously they are very different and the AK is generally stronger.

What I liked was the apparently small yield which turned out to be above average due to the bud's density.

Grower Report

July, 2004

Well this was the first time I have grown Nirvana White Rhino or any breeder's White Rhino for that matter. I have grown indoors before (SAGE x Rhino plus others) and have had some successful crops that keeps my supply up. The grow started a little later than planned as I had a screw up! The original plan was to clone some SAGE that I had but I baked them by accident. No fans for one night and it cooked the newly rooted clones!

I followed my usual pattern of starting the seeds in cubes, and then dropping directly into their full size to maturation container (4.5g). Seeds germed quickly (2 days or less) and all sprouted. None were lost due to mortality of seed failure.

I vegged under 18/6 for 6 weeks from seed and they went to about 8" on average excluding my single runt. Used 400w HPS bulb for both veg and flower (my 400w MH could not be used, in addition to HPS, this late in the year due to heat issues). Watered daily and fert every 3rd watering at full strength throughout except for last few weeks (flush). Flowered for 8 weeks (57 days) at 12/12 and decreasing to 10/14 for the last two weeks. Also added Monsta Bud per their directions during both Veg and Flower which seemed to show some positive results.

Smoke Report

I harvested at 57 days 12/12 with the last 36 hours of complete darkness. The harvest was a bit early but I had some out of town vacation planned and nobody to babysit - again back to the screw up as the cause! I let them hang to dry for 4 days before performing final pruning and cleanup then put some in a baggy, packed the rest away and went on vacation. I ended up with 8.3oz of dried and clean buds. The smaller & less trich covered buds along with the bud trim I did not weigh and put aside for some ice later on. The buds are sticky but not too stinky either. There is quite a covering of trichs on all of the buds.

The taste is an earthy, hash type taste. Not the 7-up taste but a good tasty smoke overall though. I also find it is not a lung collapser which is a good thing. The high is quite good. I have had better but I have to keep in mind I harvested a week early maybe up to two. I don't find it to be a couchlock stone but defiantly a getup and go type smoke for me anyhow. Also find you can get trippin' and really forget what the hell you were doing!

Overall a good quality smoke, no hassle to grow and a breeze overall! I will grow it again, as a matter of fact I have a 10-seed pack on standby for a future grow! Next time I will do a bit better time planning and ensure I can let them go to the very bitter end to get the best yield, taste and trich development.

Good plant. I only started 2 or 3 seeds, and got 1 female. She grew great. Cloned easy, and was not fussy about nutes. I had no problem growing her, and the grow room was all about problems until almost 5 weeks flowering. Grew nice fat nug. Buds on sticks. Just one fat nug at the end of a branch, and a fat awesome looking mail cola. LOTS of Trichomes, you could see the widow coming out.

The high was mostly indica. Couch look for sure. Might have given a better score for buzz if I liked indicas more, but I'm kinda a sativa guy. The taste was a bit lacking, if you ask me, but maybe it just had not cured long enough. Not sure, the taste was just kind of generic too me. Not a lot of smell tell you broke up a bud, then it was a ripe fruit, and a sweet, and sour sknuky kinda smell. Bag appeal was grate. I would have gave it a 10 if the buds were a bit more solid.

This was my first indoor grow, and the easiest grow I've done so far! I had no problems at all except for a little bit of nute burn when I gave high doses of 10-60-10. I germinated 2 seeds, both took in 3 days, and I got one male one female. Vegged for 2 months to just over 3 feet tall. the plant only grew another foot till it stopped about 3 weeks into bloom. the plant finished just under 4 feet. Nice sticky buds loaded with resin, tones of red hairs, covered in crystals, and a top cola that was dam near an Oz. I'm defiantly gonna keep this strain going, and recommend it to all my friends!

Placed one White Rhino seed in wet paper towel on 8 May 2004. You may say this is a risk to get a female but the reason is because I have "tried" to grow WR before and used 3 seeds from the same pack and I ended up with 3 males that time. So I thought that statistically the first seed that I'll take out of the pack should be most probably female.

Anyway, I planted the sprouted seed into a small pot on 11 May 2004. I vegged the WR till 11 July 2004 and took 6 cuttings from her. I'm saying "her" because after 2 months of veg she already showed her pre-flowers (tiny pistils).

After 10 days of cloning (rock wool + humidity dome + clonex + love) I got 5 healthy rooted clones (one didnt make it). I placed the clones in my 3 bucket DWC system (2 plants per bucket). I have vegged them for another 2 weeks to get them used to the new environment and based on previous grow reports about WR I waited them to grow at least 18 inches. Later I realised that I shouldnt vegged them that long in DWC because they have stretched like hell!

After extended efforts of tying, pruning, bending, squizing them I managed to fit them in my rather small grow box. I know I have torched them alot but I had to do. Many of the lower buds couldnt even get enough light and here and there I have observed starting of bud-rot.

The smell during veg was not that much but later in flowering it became a bit of a problem but I managed to airate my room frequently and with the help of some car air freshner.

I pulled down the majority of the branches on 30 September 2004 at Day 52 of flowering. I have watched the trichs turn into cloud and some were becoming amber. There were only 50% red hairs but I decided to go by the microscope. I know they could have gone for at least a week but didnt wanted the famous "couchlock of White rhino". I have left the lower branches for another week and cut them down. All of the buds was covered with crystals which I always enjoy and expect from a strain. I had some nice scissor hash after the trimming and manicuring process as a reward!

Anyway, because of these un-planned things I ended up with less weight I was planning but managed to fill 2 large mason jars after drying. They are still under curing process but I've already started consuming them...

Ok, the smoke report; May be its because I pulled the girls down a bit early or may be the phenos I got was a bit sativa oriented (un-controllable stretch!) I avoided the couchlock effect of WR. There is still the body buzz though which I love. The high is really twisting my perception of the environment which, again, I love most. I have smoked many hazes so I know the sativa high, I can say that my WR harvest became "close" to that level and taste. I'm really satisfied with this harvest in all aspects. Really worth the $15. Higly recommending this strain from newbies to advanced growers.

The seeds showed an exceptional germination rate, in 1 day 2 of the 4 seeds I planted sprouted. In 2 days all of them where already sprouted and growing.

The plant grows extremely fast, outperformed my other one by growing 2 times faster and bushier. It was top fimmed when 1 ft tall, and kept fimming until reached a very nice bushy look.

Likes to be fertilized, grows fast, many big fan leaves dark green, looks strong, don't care of being stressed, don't care of underwatering, neither of excess heat.

Mites didn't have much effect on her, almost destroyed my other ones, but WR resisted like nothing, thick leaves, hard to damage.

In 60 days the buds were ripe, pretty nice buds, tight, and long, banana shaped, not very much trichomes but pretty long. The shortest at least 5 inches each, not bad considering I was scroggin.

The bud are extremely sticky and shiny with crystals, strong odor. They have a few leaves in between, with a so sticky bud manicuring is a nightmare.

The smoke is harsh, looks very alike to pure hash, the stone is a bit delayed, and hits you like an hammer by putting you KO on the sofa. Requires very little bud to have great effect... a nice plant, easy and fast growing.

First of all, people say you are getting a bang for your buck when you grow out White Rhino, and BELIEVE me that is so true. The stuff is so strong and clean that you know some great genetics are in there. So I have to tip my hat to Nirvana for making some amazing strains the average grower can afford.

I vegged my two white rhinos for 5 weeks under a 400 watt MH in my C22. The white rhino were great. Very tight internode spacing and they had alternating internodes about a week earlier than my other plants. I topped one of the rhinos and the other I tried a half assed job of LST-ing. I had two phenotypes of Rhino. Pheno 1: was more indica, and the other who stretched a lot more was obviously more sativa.

I ended up flowering for 64 days for pheno 1 and 66 days for pheno 2. I was looking for some amber trichs maybe 10% before I pulled it. Flowering was also very easy. I was hitting them with 4 tsps of tiger bloom every three days or so and then a flush every week. They seemed to eat up the nutes. I never got any leaf burn. Pheno 1 had a club shaped bud structure, and never formed a long cola, more like a lot of seperate bud sites, with heavy nuggets on them. The buds had beautiful crystallly dark green color to them, and VERY DENSE! Nice caramel colored pistils. As they dried they kept this beautiful appearance. Pheno 2 had more christmas tree shped buds and had more wispy type buds, but still very beautiful.

The trichs on these buds are amazing. As they turn opaque they swell up to this massive size. The buds are literally covered in them like a blanket. I guess that is why they call it "white" rhino.

High: Definetly a creeper. You tend to puff on it thinking you aren't getting high and then you blast off. The physical aspect is really intense. Both my friend and I had parts of our body going numb. My hands were so numb that I had to concentrate to hand my menu to the waitress. I didn't find the high intellectual like I have with most sativas, but it wasn't a stupid high either. Its more of a euphoric high, where you are really able to enter a space with whoever you are with and enjoy that experience. It felt liek the noise level in the bar was turned down. Like a television set or something. With the background numbed, it was easier to make desicions or evaluate what was most important to engage in at any given moment.

Smoking this weed was also the first time in a long time that I was uncomfortably high, where I felt like I was too high. That was when I driving on the freeway and was convinced the huge mac truck next to us was surely going to sideswipe us. But that seemd to pass really quickly and then settle into the euphoric high I just described.

It definitely has staying power. A few hits and I was good for hours. This is grade A weed. I think everyone should grow it out.

-One pheno is more Widow in grow characteristics like branching..height..ex...stays kinda short...a little longer to mature...smells knda like widow also...very nice stone...nice mix of body and mind buzz...let it go at least 65 to 70 days to really bust out the resin...yield is ok..nothin amazing

-The 2nd Pheno I call "Peach Plant"..it smells just like ripe peaches when its sitting around in the open..oh yes, when broken the smell feels the room...the taste is supurb..almost blueberry but not quite lol...the high is amazing VERY well balanced...This pheno yields a little better.. however it does stretch alot and nodes are spaced a bit apart at first but fills out quite nicely...rather fast..very strong branches that can hold nice packed tight nugs...I really lone these nuggets...very very nice...I think this is what :WR: should be...60 to 65 is all this one needs...

-Overall they both are currently in my Garden...In the future I might toss the first pheno...not because of anything other then picky-ness...he he

-I love Nirvana...for $20 bucks..who would'nt?

I grew 2 WR plants. One was a monster of a grower. A pure beast that could've, and would've, taken over the cab if I had let it. It had sativa indications and seemed to never want to stop stretching. The other WR was a more indica type plant. It grew strong, and tall, but never really grew beyond its area. Both plants shared space with an Ice plant.

I tend towards underfeeding and the plants seemed to do fine with a light mixture. This was my first grow in a C13 setup and with a proper hydroponic DIY system and the plants fared well giving me few problems. Any problems encountered they quickly bounced back from once the problem was fixed. For some reason my plants didn't show pre flowers even though they were vegged for a couple of months or so.

Both WR plants were harvested with an eye towards a headier high. Harvested when the trichs were more cloudy than amber I have to say the effects are pretty intense. Smoking is very creative inducing and if I can actually get the inerita up to do things I'll tend to find myself getting through long tasks easily and with a smile. I do get pretty tired towards the end of the high, but if I do take a nap, I can be up and about again in 40minutes without a problem.

The smoke is very strong, and after using a water cure method the smell is good tea smell. It burns easily, and so far my girlfriend enjoys having sex on it. All in all I say a very good choice and highly recommended to try for any Nirvana curious.

5 seeds were popped from the pack, all germinated extremely fast and ended up getting 4 females 1 male.

Each plant was different there was extreme pheno variation i counted at least 3 from 5 seeds. I wont complain tho because all but 1 pheno i liked. Unfortunatly 1 tasted like crap. Got a few purple phenos and it wasnt due to the cold as it's pretty moderate temps down here that time of year.

The plants were of average height i could of grown them bigger but was restricted to fence height.

Odor level i gave a 9, this stuff stinks, not a very good stealth outdoor strain.I could smell it miles away as im sure my neighbours also did.

This stuff certainly isn't the most potent bud I've smoked but would certainly does the job nicely for most.Extremly frosty buds i found the widest leafed pheno during veg was the closest to the greenhouse white rhino in final bag appearance and taste.The rest tasted nothing like what i was expecting yet still ok.

For the price you really couldnt go wrong with these beans. will definatly grow this strain again

This was my first grow and I let the plants veg too long so after I let them bloom they got huge! I had heat, humidity, and nutrient issues at various points during the grow. Very bad grow site plus a first time grower. So my yield was pretty low but the quality of the bud that I did pull was excellent. As a true pothead, I can honestly say that the bud that I did pull was some of the best that I have ever smoked. I have worked out the problems that I had and I will update with details on my new grow site.

Fertilized once with Pure Blend veg 1.0-.5-1.0 at around the 6th week in veg, Maxi-Crop .1-1.0-1.0 seaweed stuff about every third watering. Vegged for approximately 8 weeks, 14-16 inches, 4 females, 1 male, however only one or two showed sex before going into 12/12. Phenotype in veg was very similar, a couple a little taller than the others. Nice wide leaves, dark green in color. I thought the internode spacing might be a bit elongated, but I sure saw I was wrong in flower they filled out nicely. I topped 3 and left the shorter one to do what it desired.

Flowering got into full swing maybe 7-10 days after going 12/12. I fertilized religiously once a week with Pure Blend bloom .5-.5-1.0 and the aforementioned Maxi-Crop. The one untopped plant grew into a nice christmas tree shape with a nice fat main cola, wish I had better light for the lower branches. The topped ones were somewhat different in that one had 4 huge main branches that put out some impressive colas, the other 2 ended up being similar but somewhat scrawnier. I was going for 10 weeks on all of them, but wanted to try the recommended final 2 weeks in the dark so I used the 2 smaller ones for that little experiment. Unfortunately I only got thru about a week of that and chopped those 2 at around 9 weeks. From what I saw, I see no benefit to 1 week darkness, don't see 2 making any difference either. The larger ones went a full ten weeks and finished out quite nicely. I didn't keep individual plant yields, but got about 10 z's off the 4 total.

The smoke was pleasing, nice sweet taste with an earthy body, somewhat like playdoh. Not sickeningly sweet and with a hint of spice. The high is quite up and heady, with maybe a little drooping of the eyelids after a couple hours, but another bowl remedies that. The bud cured with a nice "crust" of trichomes that was quite pleasing. I rated White Widow a 7 overall due to the 10 week finishing time and erratic growth pheno's

It was way one indica side, which really surprised me. It reminds me alot of Misty, but is more potent. The high/stone had a alot of great effects. It gradually builds up, like walking up a mountain, it gets harder and harder, and then when you finally reach the summit, you're like wow, this is a very nice feeling. Has a little visual to it, a little rush, a little couchlock, just a little bit of everything. I also found it to be a great party strain, with plenty of laughter in it.

Some people might not like the taste, but it really grew on me. The smell is average in the vegetative and a little more in the flowering stage, but nothing too bad. Also it would make a wonderful SOG strain, and it had very little stretching. Above average yields, with a high trichome rate. Does well topped or not. Flowering time was right around 56 days for me.

I love this plant. Grew quick (in veg) and easily although I felt the flowering time was far too long (10 weeks); I wanted to cut 'em down! Beautiful looking plants in veg and through to flower. For a big grow smell may be an issue but it was fine for me. Careful when moving and checking plants, stems are quite weak and are easily broken. Left the plants to bud for 10 weeks reducing the light in the final 2 weeks dramatically.

This little thing was a by-product so to say of my main grow, grew it from seed and veg'd for roughly 3 weeks under a 7W (yes, seven watts) compact fluoro desk light. After that it was put in with my main batch under a 250W HPS. During veg and flowering the plant was practically odorless, very handy in a stealth setup. I fed it very lightly with organic ferts, mostly fed with plain water all through its life. I wasn't really paying any attention to it at all, seems to be very easy for a newbie. Obviously it had stretched a lot and was looking really pathetic, but still managed to yield around an oz of dry bud.

Now let me tell you, the bud is surprisingly very potent considering how I treated it, its completely covered with trichomes, leaves included. I can see how this plant got its reputation; with proper care this one could give very nice results indeed. Its been curing for a few weeks now, and has a very strong aroma, more so than the bubblegum from the main batch which is pretty stinky itself. It has quite a strong harsh taste, not really to my liking, and well, call me silly but it's a bit too potent for my taste. :) I like to be able to slowly get myself high and smoke larger amounts, this stuff just knocks me off my feet after a couple big hits.

If you're looking for an easy way to get potent stuff fast and don't care about the taste, this is a good choice.

In flowering they start to flower very early. They were very bushy and had a lot of resin, very white and nice to look at.

The smell was high and fill my attic and it was overwhelming not good for a box in the living room. I finished the first one after 60 days and the second after 65 days.

The buds are full dense and full with resin. They were very small bushy plants finished around 20in height and 20in width, I got a very good yield for small plants like that around 2 ounces per plant.

The smoke is very strong and not for beginners, very balance head and body. The taste is not the best, a little bit to harsh. The smell is a nice one with little lemon kind.

I would recommend it to anyone, I will grow in again also. It's very good for small boxes and give very nice yield for inexpensive seeds.

I loved this plant. They grew exceptionally the entire time. I planted 3 seeds and 2 were males. Believe it or not the plant that turned out to be female was twice the size of the males nearly. This girl had a pleasant smell a bit different then most, not really skunky, but you could smell it as soon as the door to my room was open and if it were open for the whole day I could smell it throughout the hallway. I left her in the dark for one week at the end of the harvest and it seemed to increase crystal production quite a bit.

Her buds are powdered with crystals and she is extremely sticky to the touch. She tastes great, everyone who I have smoked this bud with loves it and wants more, unfortunately for me :( I yielded 40 grams off of her under a 100 watt HPS light. Not as much as I had hoped but really well in comparison to this same plant under larger lights.

This garden had only one WW, so my report may not be complete, as I had no different phenos for comparsion.

The plant was tied down in early flowering to assume a more horizontal shape and receive more light. It vegged for about 45 days and started flowering. It flowered for about 55 - 60 days, and I harvested when half of the heads were cloudy, and there were very few amber ones.

I had no problem with growing this plant, it was very vigorous and grew fast. It had few trichomes for a white widow, I think it could be more frosty... It grew just like an average indica. The only problem was some mold on the buds, because it rained a bit near harvest.

The smell was strong, and somewhat skunky (just that typical indica smell, like a northern lights). It grew among sativas and was easily the most strong smelling plant of the grow.

For the taste, it had very little, cant describe well, but it wasnt good. Maybe a leafy taste.

The high was kinda strong, but not a very potent smoke. Didnt had that expansive smoke that the most potent indicas use to have. Somewhat couchlock, will not glue you to a chair all day long.

It was very easy plant to grow, I would recomend it for begginers. But not a first choice for those who like ultra strong potency and taste.

Maybe if you grow a bunch and select a mom you can have better results, but I enjoyed growing it.

Planted 4 Nirvana WW beans in Scotts Seed starting soil & perlite mix 70/30 in 4" pots on 4/8/04. 4 of the 4 sprouted by 4/11/04. I had some beginner problems of over watering. Week 3 I transplanted to 6" pots with Scotts Potting Soil (0-0.01-0) Perlite 60/40 mix. I also added 1Tbsp Blood Meal (12-0-0) 1 Tbsp Kelp meal (1-0-2) 1Tsp Bone Meal (1-11-0) 1 Tsp Epsom salts. I also watered at this time with Alaska Fish (5-1-1) big mistake as it caused some nute burn. The WW IMO were very nute sensitive. I continued in vegetation growth for 40 days. Plants were ~ 12" tall and showing pre-sex signs. Had 3 females & 1 male, killed him. Transplanted the 2 nicest females in 12" pots with Scotts potting soil , Perlite 60/40. I also added 2 oz of Alaska Dry Fish ( 3-8-5). I watered at this time with Alaska Fish (5-1-1) and switched lights to 12/12. I left the other female in the 6" pot.

I let the one WW in the 6" pot go for 65 days. I was feeding her with some chemical bloom fert's since she didn't get the transplant like the other 2.

The other 2 WW I let go for 75 days flowering, plants were looking nice & fat, with plenty of resin glands. Looking at trichs under microscope plants were ~10-20% clear, ~50% cloudy , ~30-40% amber.

Smokes good, half a joint & you & your buddy are stoned.

Would recommend to others & would grow again myself.

This one was started by itself after 2 others and grew very well. It was budded at about a foot and 1/2 tall. It finished at 3 and 1/2 ft. tall. It was stressed and turned hermie early in flowering. Even though it was pollinated early on it was still more potent than the others it was grown with (durban poisons).

I budded for about 2 months and it was harvested premature due to needed space for other plants (skunk#1s) The one White Widow I had grew bushy and stout. See in the one pic I have the White Widow circled. I had the WW raised a foot to stay level with the other plants. To dry

I just hung them upside down with clothes hangers. The harvested herb was very potent compared with the other bud. It was visibly crystallly and smelled like berries. The smoke was somewhat harsh but tasted floral/citral.

It gets me a very hungry high but couch locked so you don't want to get up to make the food you're craving. It was fairly easy to grow as I had no problems with pests or mold. I reccomend this strain for anyone who has sleep problems. It makes a bed so comfortable! This plant isn't normally hermie I just stressed it a lot. (sometimes the temp got above 100! also I messed up the light cycle many times)

Bought a 10pack from Nirvana. Had some trouble in germ, 4 didn't pop at all. Early growth was fast. Had a bit of a Mg problem early on which was easily cleared up with some epsom salts.

Vegged for a month after an early growth period of 2 weeks. Gave them 10-15-10 once during veg, and Earth Juice Grow once.

Flowered for 80 days. These things would not stop. Put a lot of weight on late- last 2 weeks especially. Very icy plants with lots of crystals and VERY pungent aroma. These plants had a strong smell pretty much the entire time I grew them, from early growth on up. Fed with Blossom Blaster (P-K) 2 times during flowering. Finished them off with a 3 day dark period which seemed like it worked very well with these Widows.

Yield was decent. I got 73 grams off 3 plants under a 150w HPS with 2 64w flouro fixtures.

Hung them upside down and let them dry for 3 days before putting them into mason jars and curing them for 3 weeks. Could have gone longer but I couldnt wait ;)

The smoke: Very smooth smoke I must say. Tastes very sweet and makes the mouth water. Easy on the throat for sure. The stone is one of couchlock, and intense body sensation. Quite enjoyable but not exactly a functional high.

Overall I'd reccommend this strain to beginners and intermediate growers. It is fairly easy to grow and for the price you get one or two keeper phenos from the pack- so I say why not. Nirvana genetics are worth your time and money.

Grower Report

May, 2004

The original 10 seeds were obtained from a friend after he made a trip to A'dam and got them at the seeds direct store and brought them back to the states for me to grow, I got 7 starts with 4 females and 3 males of which I took the best male and breed it back to the 3 best females for future seed stock (backing-up). this report is with the seeds produced from the best female from the first grow. all three of the original females were outstanding but one was this 3 foot purple top with buds as hard as rocks and it was the seeds from this female that I decided to grow out for this report.

Outstanding plant overall, I've been growing indoors for 15 years and have grow out quite a few different strains of plants and this one is in my top 5, very easy to grow and it had a very low nutrient requirement, there were some variances in the plants due to them being f2's or higher on the scale but all were great yielders of nice, chunky, very heavily resinated tops and buds with an outstanding heady buzz that makes you want to thoroughly clean the house after a few puffs, purple traits were noted in about half of the plants and 2 were true purple widows, I say buy this one if you can, 4.5 stars here. Good beginners plant in my opinion.

This White Widow also made some outstanding melty bubble Hashish with the Bman's 7 bag kit, and the Kif made from the original mom was also very tasty to, this is a good hash making plant, 4 stars here.

Smoke report: everybody who got some gave it a big thumbs up in the taste, potency and type of high and there still asking for more, very good bag appeal just adds to this plants already outstanding reputation. 4.5 stars here. The Bubble Hashish is the best potency wise I've had to date, the taste is very flowery/sweet and such smooth hits in my bong, 5 stars to the melty Bubble from the Nirvana White Widow.

Let me first begin by saying that this was my first ever grow! And what a beauty she was, easy to handle and not bothered by over/under ferting or typical impatient newbie errors. My setup limited me to grow number and style so this report will aid anyone using the most basic setup possible. Note: I only used two of my seeds for this grow.

I began by germinating these seeds using the paper towel method and they both sprouted within 2 days. After planting the seedling cycle was extremely rapid and both plants had grown to 12 inches in around 2 months using a indoor/outdoor light combo with flouros.

My inexperience caused me to over-fert a number of times and leaf burn was common amongst my leaves. However, even with the burn combined with a "white fly" problem, the plants stayed perfectly healthy and at 14 inches I began their flowering cycle.

Even with my limited setup I managed to continue their photoperiod with ease, as they do not seem to be bothered by stress. Within a week both plants had shown sex, both female.

I was forced to move the plants around my garden more than I would have liked. Moving them for sun exposure and placing them on window ledges after their fluoro session to catch the early morning sun in the east. The plants were harvested at 50 days. Probably a bit early, patience is so hard when you are excited over a grow. The buds were extremely heavy and thick. The resin was extreme, but perhaps this was due to my grow style. I haven't seen widow this sticky before. The smoke was incredible, a large joint would easily have myself and a few friends stoned off our nut. Although I did not regard a tolerance build to my first plant, I did to my second. By the end of the second ounce I had developed a massive tolerance ( daily smoking ).

I would recommend this to _any_ first time grower as the plants are amazingly versatile and resistant to disease and stress.

Well this was my first grow.I did alot of research on OG before I started.It was a great help! Vegged 3 Nirvana White Widow beans for 30 days in Good potting soil under a 400 watt MH. Then switched the lights to 12/12 and used a 400 watt MH warm spectrum lamp for flowering. They all showed sex 5 days into flower. One male two ladies.

Overall awesome plant to grow. Used 20.20.20 ferts twice in veg. Used DNF Bloom ferts in flower. Cant say enough about this plant. Very low smell in veg and flower. I must say there is a hint of cat piss when flowering. That all changes when cured! After three weeks in glass jars it smells like grape jelly and fresh cut grass. A pleasure to smoke very soft and smooth. The buzz is fantastic, nicely balanced and very potent. I will grow this strain again. Highly recommended!!

I planted two seeds directly in rockwool and a little coco fiber to fill-in the hole. Both sprouted and took off like weeds. They were transplanted to 1gal net pots w/ hydrocorn for veg. Even though I let my PH in veg drift way low, the plants continued to thrive.

The plants are identical, true F1 hybrids. The difference in height is due to the use of CytoGrow, as you can see the one on the right has remained much shorter, w/ very little stretch. The bud is also much denser then the untreated plant.

The Valley Queen continues to impress. It is a very sturdy plant, no need for support. They both appear to be on track to finish at about 58-63 days, trics are mostly milky at this point, but I like to wait for about 10% amber before the cut. No more nutes for these girls, so they should start to suck up the N soon, as heavy metal deficiency has already started.

I'll be popping some more of these seeds soon, as they have proven a joy to grow. VQ#2 has shown a few male flowers, but by no means would I call it a hermi.

I can say that this plant is also a joy to trim, took me all of ten minutes to remove all the non-essential leaf and stem. The top cola finished a little over a foot tall of nice dense bud. No idea on dry weight, I'll report back when its done.

Just when things were looking great, mold sets in. While inspecting Valley Queen #1 last night I was shocked and horrified to find, what I consider the worst growers blight of all :) :) MOLD!!!! I hate mold as it rears its ugly head at the most inopportune time, right at harvest. I must say that high humidity has been a problem lately, but w/ good air flow I've kept it in check. Or so I thought. I'm really pissed as this cola could have gone another week and gotten even fatter. In an effort to save what I could, I removed the top cola, trimming away all moldy chunks (I'll make bubble at least) and putting the remaining plant back in the flower room. I was able to salvage about 3 grams of what would have been a very sizable bud. Oh well, I guess that is the one downside to this strain is that it is susceptible to mold. Other than that, it is still a winner

As far as smoke report, initial findings are positive. Valley Queen has a very smooth and creamy flavor, almost nutty. Very little smell and it don't linger long on the pallet. The high is uplifting, like you'd expect from a good skunk cross. A good strain for travel/stealth as it won't stink up you or your car in the bag, like some of my other strains. It won't make the top 5 but it will make a reappearance as long as I have seeds Even without the top cola the plant should still yield at least an ounce, so after smokin a bit, I'm over my disappointment

Well the remainder of Valley Queen #1 met the ax on Friday. I think the extra week (minus the top cola) did wonders for the plant. The smell characteristic has totally changed; the mellow nutty aroma has been replaced w/ a harsh skunky one, a very strong odor indeed. Yield is quite impressive; as I'm sure I'll end up w/ over an ounce from the bottom buds

I was the highest bidder for these 100% female seeds in the JEASt auction.

Out of 10 seeds, 3 were cracked most likely in shipping, and the remaining 7 all germinated using paper towel within 36 hours. Seedlings were grown under 24 hours of fluros for 2 weeks in vermiculite. Plants were very uniform and stable in terms of growth patterns. There was only one phenotype. The two most promising plants were next transferred into the grow box to be grown using deep water cultivation and SCROG trained. (The remaining seedlings found their way into the gardens of a few friends.)

After an additional six weeks of vegetative growth, the two valley queens, nearly 24 inches in height, were put under 12/12 for flowering.

These plants were remarkably undemanding and very easy to grow. This was my first attempt at deep water cultivation, and the plants responded incredibly well. My only problem was with a magnesium shortage or lockout - the amount contained in the Micro formulation did not seem to meet the VQ's demands. The addition of four teaspoons of Epson salts to the res solved that problem.

Another problem I encountered during this grow was low humidity - the highest that I was able to get the humidity (with a humidifier) was 28%. As a result, the VQs absorbed and transpired a lot of water; I needed to add approximately 8 to 10 litres of RO water per day to keep the reservoir levels constant.

The large water consumption lead to swings in nutrient levels and ph - and the VQs most certainly handled these swings in stride. The VQs appear to perform their best at nute levels around 1200 ppm (EC correction .7) and at a ph of 5.5 - 5.7.

During 12/12 the plants stretched approximately 2.5 times their size - with the stretch appearing to slow significantly after 28 days.

The odor from the valley queens through most of their flowering stage was very pleasant, a sweet creamy and nutty smell that could become overpowering at times. It did not smell like any other cannabis that I have grown until the 65th day of flowering, when it developed a decidedly potent skunky piss-like smell that pushed my air-filters to their limit.

The VQs were harvested after 73 days of flowering, they could have gone for another week to 10 days, but an undetected accidental shut-down of the airpumps a few days earlier necessitated the somewhat early harvest. After 10 days of drying the bud was down to 30% of its original wet weight and transferred to curing jars. The dry bud, all grades, totalled 10.5 ounces - with about 6 ounces being premium grade.

At the same time, 1.5 ounces of popcorn and premature bud and all the trim was used to make BHO - providing a yield of 5.5 grams of golden honey and another 4 grams of mid to low grade oil from an alcohol wash.

The bud shot photos track the VQ from 28 days after commencing flowering to 63 days.

The Valley Queens are female seeds from No Mercy - and although they were subject to stress from low humidity and from ph and nutrient level swings as a result of that low humidity, there was no indication of any hermaphrodites whatsoever.

SMOKE REPORT

I smoked a couple ounces of mid and lower grade VQ and all the oil while waiting for the buds to cure. This smoke report is based on the top grade of buds, after 35 days of cure. I stopped smoking for 3 days before doing this smoke report. Four other people including two OGers were involved in this smoke test.

The taste is sweet and nutty and very smooth. My fellow tokers as hazelnut with skunk undertones, though I did not notice this skunky aspect. The smoke expands considerably in the lungs, and it is rare to not cough after exhaling.

First toke - a very mellow progression to the head. Initial hit is definitely sativa. You can feel the hit almost immediately behind the eyes, cheek, and face. After about 10 minutes it starts to move into the body.

Second toke - taken about 15 minutes after the first hit, you definitely feel the rush. The sativa buzz is now in the forehead, you start to feel flushed cheeks, and you begin to feel warmth throughout body - especially in your belly.

Third toke - taken about 20 minutes after the second toke. All four smokers experienced a very intense and immediate sativa hit right in the top of the skull. The third hit was literally painful for a couple minutes as it felt like my skull was about to crack. As soon as the pressure eased, the intensity of the hit melted away, and like water ran down to the back of the head. I didn't really notice that I was in a full body stone until I tried to stand up, and was staggered. The room felt very warm and it seemed that I would break into a sweat any moment, but did not.

Difficult to describe, but the stone seemed to progress from the top of the head to the back of the head and down the neck and shoulders. You could quite literally feel the centre of the hit right between the shoulders - very calm.

Valley Queen is not the most powerful weed that I have smoked, but it has an interesting property in that the high is quite varied and always changing its character. For a while you feel quite social - and then you are just tranced out for 10 or 15 minutes if something arrests your attention.

Fourth Toke - about 30 minutes after the third toke a couple of us decided for the purposes of scientific enquiry alone to see what would happen if we took a fourth toke. The hit was immediate, intense, and blinding. It felt like I had a migraine headache for about 10 minutes before things started to settle. Full body stone set in - total couchlock and essentially turning the rest of the evening into a complete write-off. A very long lasting stone, I was still somewhat stoned and buzzed in the morning when I got up.

The valley queen is great for inducing munchies, but did nothing to ease the arthritic pain in my knees.

As the breeder states on his web site that VQ is not a day weed, and I totally agree with him. This is potent tasty weed with great variety to the stone. Recommended.

I was lucky to received some seeds directly from Switzerland, from a friend of Felix. Some nice little dark seeds. 100% germination rate.

The plants were began indoor in late march with maximum care due to rarity. The plants stems grown deep purple from beginning to end. The leaves and buds became purple only in late flowering time. The weather wasn't cold, but the buds take a nice purple colour in September.

The shape is mostly Sativa, mostly like a Nepalese. Tall will some nice golf ball buds in the long of the stems. I had some mutants, heavy leaves distortions. I guess the seeds were olds, or maybe it's a natural variation of the strain. In this case, I guess it came from Purple Oregon Thai like in Blue Satellite :) but it's a long story :) Purpurea Ticinencis seems to look like very much Flo from DJ Short :)

The plants finish in time. mid September in 45 latitude. Like in south Switzerland Alps, or north Italian Alps climate :) This strain will finish later in northern latitudes, but there was absolutely no sign of mold.

The smell is very surprising :) Between mushroom, berry and chocolate. It's the first time i have a chocolate (cookie) smelling plant !

The resin production is medium (in comparison with actual resinous stuff) , like the yield. But enough for a reasonable smoker.

The potency is good. If you don't need an heavy THC Killer, Purpurea Ticinencis is nice for all situations. Nice balanced. From a day time light use, to an heavy one, before going to sleep without difficulties. Purpurea produce a very nice hash.

Purpurera Ticinencis :) Swiss Southern Purple :) is a nice plant. I'll grow it again. I think it's a nice strain for outdoor breeders, due to performances, and rusticity.

I planted ten seeds and all germinated. Of the ten three were female. All were very similar.

Their growth seemed rather slow, and they did not have the classic F1 vigour that we have all come to expect when buying breeder F1s.

The leaves are pretty small and the plant is very branchy, it was hard to distinguish which was the main bud.

During bloom the stretch was virtually non existent, the plant just seemed to become one huge bud. At this stage I was very impressed with this variety.

I grew the plants in rockwool, using Canna nutes(she was very tolerant to high doses), Superthrive, Cannazym, PK 13/14 in the third last week and then 10 days of GH Ripen, an extremely good flush and the last four days just water.

Even during the last few days the plant kept bulking out.

I took cuttings from the plants and all rooted very easily.

All in all a fantastic plant and a definite plant for a newbie or anyone with very little head room, I started the plant flowering when she was about 9 inches tall and she ended up at 15 inches.

The buds were slow dried for eight days and cured for a month, the result was brilliant, she reminded me of the old, lost Garlic Bud from the nineties. Even though they were hydroponically grown, the taste was still very much there, I would love to try this one organically!

September, 2005

Considering this is my first grow and I did not make a total loser out of myself. I feel confident in giving this information and making this grow report.

I started off by germinating my seeds in a cup of water with 1 Birth Control pill and 1 drop of SuperThrive. I let it sit for 24 hours occ. pushing the seeds down till they all sank. Then putting in a paper towel sandwich for 3 days the taproot came very fast and I was ready to begin.

Its all in the MIX! I started with FoxFarm Ocean Soil with extra perlite and vermiculite. Brings your plants to life.

I used 160w of Flourescents in Veg. I watered them every 2 days during the first three weeks, then I began supplemental feeding. I used Old-AgeGrow 12-6-6, AgeOld Liquid Sea Kelp, and a drop of SuperThrive in every gallon of water. After my girls got a taste of this, they took off like lighting. In about a month & three weeks later, they were already tall enough to be put into flowering. 12" tall! At this point, I transplanted them into large 3 gallon pots.

When it hit time to Flower. I busted out the 400w HPS, and sat back with a smile on my face. The stretch was there. It was only about 4-5", but one plant climbed up so fast in 1 day in got burned. I was very sad after seeing what I have done. I used OldAgeBloom 5-10-5 and a drop a SuperThrive in every gallon. The growth at this stage seemed very slow, like what the hell is going on here? But in time the plants began to bud and I began to smile again. During the finale days the buds really bushed out. It was like the plant was dipped in sugar. I loved it.

I gave the girls a week flush of pure water, and then put them into total darkness for 48 hours. It makes the sugars and starches go into the roots. I clipped in the dark and hung them to dry for about 5 days. I then began to manicure and put in tupperware, for about a week and a half. The Buds were full Blown Tropical Fruity Citrus smell. The smoke was Very very tasty. Berry/citrus and a dab of skunk. Very enjoyable. The High was almost like being high for the first time again. Everything was new and fresh. Very weird UP high. Made me think of Directing Music for porno movies.

In my last words, I would reccommed this plant to anyone. To the New Jack or to the Veteran, you will all have fun with this one. Very easy to grow, Very giving, and worth the time and money.

I got a belladonna-clone from a friend and it kicks ass... I don't wanna hype it 'cause I know everyone has their own favorites. I'll try to objective and try to tell you guys how it was like to grow it and how it came out.

It grew very fast and took good amount of nutes (I don't have any digital meters so I can't give any exact ppms or anything), pH 5,5. I fed it with Bio Nova's Hydro Supermix. I had a self-made hydro-setup which worked out really well! The plant yielded about 170 grams (~5,8 ounces) of dry, quality bud. There was lots of resin and the odor was quite strong! The colas were in 90 degree position when we chopped it down, the biggest was 28,5g! Very easy to grow, takes some abuse but still comes out as a winner!

I cured most of the bud for 1-2 months in a freezer. The stone hits you right after the joint is finished! The smell is toxic-like, extremely herbal and pungent, the taste is sweet but not that special. We also got some hash out of the waste-material, it wast blasting... ;D

Stone:

There's a lot of slight visual distortion; it's hard to describe since it seems like there's nothing even happening, weird thing... You also get sucked into your thoughts and get sidetracked easily, this is great for some serious reasonings, though! =) It's quite strong and covers both sides of it, mental and fysical; you may stumble easily. We've been smoking this a lot but it still surprises me and inspires me to do things, it's like a mental tool! And I warn you, those who haven't smoked much, beware. It's good to know yourself when you smoke a lot of this, this will seriously get you high! =) Sometimes it freaks you out but it also gives you new views. high atm. =)

It's worth the try!! Get a good specimen!

I grew out 5 belladonna seeds. 2 of these were ladies.

I was pleased with the overall vigor and speed at which these plants grew as well as uniformity, both females were very similar, sort of an understated christmas tree. Resin production was also very impressive and the buds turned a very nice orange color towards the end. The potency was also very good, not really racy or trippy though as I was hoping for, but excellent and nicely balanced anyway. I thought the taste was somewhat the weak point as it was a little bland, but had nice undertones of skunk and was liked by everyone who smoked it. After a little but of a cure some nice sweetness also started to come out.

Overall I liked it. Amazing trich production, fast growing, stable, with a strong evening time high, but perhaps a little bland when it comes to taste.

Plants were huge, 1 pound of buds plus on some plants. Beautiful bright orange buds with lots of crystal shining in the sun. Cures to very sticky and tasty buds. Colas needed to be tied up or branches broke. Plants were on my roof, they got full, intense sun. Heat got to 130 degrees so I built shade structure, 22% shade cloth. Ladies used 3 - 4 gallons of water every day. No insect or mold damage at all. I kept plenty of tree frogs and Praying Mantis' in the plants, I think that helped. 5 Lb yield, pure nugget bud, 25 colas (Too pretty to nug up) 16" to 35" long and 2 lbs of bud not to California Medical Marijuana quality, six plants. I produced 75 seeds from one bud I pollinated, Belladonna x Belladonna. We will see next year what happens.

Durga Mata is a very good variety of weed, probably the best strain I tried till now.

It is very easy to grow and provides nice yields of superior quality, the resin coating on the buds is something pretty unique, and there are not many strains out there that get so much resin.

This variety is pretty uniform and grows a big main cola and some little side branches, I'd say that might be a great strain to use in a SOG.

The plant reacts fast to the photoperiod change, it stops growing and sexes early, like after 10-12 days, but one sexed after 5 days.

I'd recommend peeling the lower nodes to produce a little more weight, overall a very easy strain to grow with a more that satisfying yield and an incredible resin production.

It smells like fresh almonds, most of the people I asked about the smell said it was a "medicinal" but then agreed about the fresh almond tones.

The smoke is couch lock.

Grower Report

August,

This is a very potent, easy strain to grow. I planted ten seeds in soil after soaking in water with a touch of B-1 and H202. Eight sprouted. I vegged them under six high output aquarium light flores. They all grew with the classic indica phenotype. I fed them desert bat guano and superthrive in veg. I let them get only 10 inches before putting them in 12/12. Five females. They all grew uniform except for one plant, which stretched, to 2 and half feet. These plants are light feeders when it comes to N. They will let you know by curling their leaves down if they get too much. I ended up \flushing a couple at 4 weeks in 12/12. The smell during flower was spicy and fruity. They clone easy, but due to a mistake with too much heat, only one of the clones survived.

The yield for me was modest. This is partly because I flowered them at a small size and also because they are quite leafy. I do not like to trim fan leaves, but would recommend trimming some for this strain to get more light to the lower buds.

The potency is GREAT. It has a very strong body buzz to it but also has a dreamy almost trippy cerebral edge to it. It keeps the mind active until it makes you want to sleep. The potency and grow ease makes it a keeper for me. The flower time is more like 55 to 60 days as opposed to the seed bank claim of 50-55- in soil that is. Paradise has yet to let me down...

I grow for potency, but the fruity/nutty smell and flavour of this strain made me appreciate some of the other pleasures of cannabis.

My photos are not the best, but I give this strain a big thumbs up...

Dutch Dragon is a very stable and uniform strain with lots of vigour and HUGE growth potential. It can handle loads of nutes, responds well to intense light, and grows super fast. Easily the biggest-yielding strain I have grown so far. If Skunk #1 gets a 7 for yield, Dutch Dragon gets a 9, as the extra flowering time (nine weeks) helps boost the overall product. A very good commercial sativa.

Luc at Paradise Seeds says it is sweeter and better yielding than Nebula, but I found it only to be better yielding. It also looks a little less sativa and less frosty than the original Nebulas I grew out, so in this respect Dutch Dragon seems to lean more towards its Skunk heritage in growth and appearance - but not in high, which is mostly all in the head and quite a bit more uplifting than Skunk #1.

From 10 seeds, all germed and popped, but I killed one by accident. Of the remaining nine, I was left with four quite uniform girls, although one leaned a little more to the indica side than the other three – shorter, with rounder buds instead of the signature fox-tails – and finished in eight weeks as opposed to nine. All four were very sweet to smell, though three had quite a sour-diesel (skunky) undertone. These three were very crystalline up close, with the more indica-leaning pheno being slower than the others but the pick of the stink! The remaining sativa phenos all had nice bushy buds, thick stems and even branch patterns.

One girl in particular smelled as sweet as fresh tangerines – that's exactly what she smelled like! Really nice, sweet plant; not as frosty, but more sticky and sativa. After harvest, this plant and one of the heavy skunk phenos became my favourites. I have summed them up below...

Dutch Dragon (heavy Skunk pheno):

This plant grew larger and denser than anything else in my garden with a tight, heavy structure and quite a strong, oily, skunky (almost chemical) scent for a sativa-dom, although you could only really smell it up close or if you brushed against it (it is still quite a stealthy strain). But it did have an underlying fruity smell too, and has cured into a nice, sweet, almost orange-flavoured toffy bud with lots of crystal and heavy-weight bag appeal (though as my personal smoke it will stay in the jars and won't be going into any bags...). If I was more experienced and a bit more organized, I would have kept this one as a mother plant because she has all the traits one might look for in a great commercial/personal variety: vigorous fast growth, healthy large structure, heavy buds and potent smoke with the only draw-back being the 9-week flowering period (although this is one of the main reasons for the large yields). Sometimes you grow big buds that don't weigh much – they seem to be airy or hollow. Not this plant. The buds are a super-dense, light green colour with brown/orange hairs, thick and glistening with trichomes and sticky as fuck to handle. The smoke is exactly how you would imagine it: thick, dense, strong and chemical – like an exceptional skunk variety with a little added fruit. It is not "lemony" at all. More like overripe tropical fruit mixed with incense oils. It expands in the lungs and will make you cough if you're not careful. After that you'll probably want another... And here's the trick: after your first cone you'll be thinking "This isn't very potent at all" and will load up another bong. Just after the second cone, it will start to hit you... Oops, maybe I shouldn't have had that second cone! Anyway, it creeps up very slowly and subtly until all of a sudden you realise you are fucking wasted! No couchlock, very productive and thought-provoking. Sometimes a hint of paranoia, but this is rare. Mostly it is very up, happy, contemplative weed that's great to smoke during the day and quite reflective at night. Good party weed that doesn't put you to sleep no matter how much you smoke and lasts a good two hours or more after smoking it. Not the sweetest or fruitiest strain, but surprises everyone with its creeper potency and nice heady, comfortable high. Not quite as sweet and potent as Nebula, but it has slightly more head. It would make a great cross with a pure sativa or soaring haze variety, as it has the body and legs to complement the high.

Dutch Dragon (tangerine pheno):

This was the plant I thought would be the bomb but just quite didn't live up to it compared to the plant above. The tangerine pheno grow as fast and vigorously as the heavy Skunk, but after harvesting and curing, the buds were lighter and airier in comparison. The scent was sweeter – as was the smoke – less chemical Skunk and more citrus-fruit oil, but not quite as hard-hitting as its sister. Probably a little more sativa in this one – still a nice heady creeper high – but needs to be appreciated for its sweet taste more than any knock-out effect. I should probably have harvested this one earlier at eight weeks instead of nine, as I think it was a little overdone and lost some of its sweetness as a result. Still my second-favourite smoke and again, great party weed that keeps you up and high for a good time.

If you have read this far, I will tell you that Dutch Dragon is a Durban x Early Skunk variety – and a very well-bred one at that!

I received these seeds instead of Nebula, and what a shock. I turned to 12 hours at average plant height of 30 - 40 cm , and they just didn't stop until 7 foot !!! I needed to do much pruning to maintain a reasonable height, and yet they still kept stretching.

Fast initial bud set, but then weeks 4 - 6 did very little.. kinda just waiting. Even the buddies once formed still kept growing up up up !!! Very large long colas, quite a large output in end. (maybe 1 -1.5lb per 600 watt HPS)

VERY long maturation, I live in0.

... high humidity, so this has added a few weeks to overall period.

I wouldn't recommend it to anyone who grows in high humidity.

Pretty poor mould resistance, even with the stretched airy-ness of the buddies.

Only likes high lights levels, anywhere that received of lower than HIGH light did not mature well at all, high resin levels only within 1.5 feet of bulbs (which was terrible for my tall tall plants!!)

WAY too much stretching, would never do again indoors, however it seems to do very well outside, in ground or in pots. (watch poor mould resistance though)

Over all a disappointing grow experience, I don't like mega tall sativas and these are the tallest I have ever done inside.

I choose 2 phenotypes, 1st was tall vigorous growth, it gave good yield etc, but WAY WAY TOO TALL. The 2nd phenotype was much more compact, but had very poor yield and branching structure, and much slower grow.

Some hermie action, REALLY early in bud stress

The humidity in my area has slowed growth considerably, total maturation was between 10 - 12 weeks, very inconsistent ,. even on same plants. (one branch could be mature, and others were not etc)

I think with some practice this could be very high yielder & great for sativa heads, but not for high humidity areas.

Admittedly I am coming to terms with Coco's high moisture holding content, and did over water a little in first few weeks, maybe they wouldn't have stretched so much if this hadn't happened

I started 1 magicbud seed using the paper towel soak method. This particular seed took a while to sprout, but after 3 days of waiting a little white tail popped. I then placed her in a 16 oz cup with promix. IMO, She vegged pretty slowly and was maybe 6 inches at 30 days. I put her into flower at 12" (7 weeks of veg time), a little earlier then I would have wanted due to obligations. The stretch was very slight and she only became around a total of 18". In terms of feeding, she was not too picky and was able to uptake an average amount of nutes per feeding. I harvested at day 55 and yeilded close to an ounce. Although the quality of the smoke is good, the yeild was not as much as I was expecting. I would grow this strain again, but feel it was thrive more in an outdoor enviornment.

About 2 months veg and 50 days to finish although the clones finished faster by about a week.

September, 2005

I grew Magic bud both indoors and out, and found it to be easy to grow, tasty, potent, and quite stable. 100% germ rate and average clone ease.

Indoors it likes to grow squat and branchy. I grew 3' bushes, but it would be great for SCROG. It has a pretty prominent central bud, so I'd guess it would also do well in SOG. Fairly tight-noded with fat, rounded buds.

Outdoor, it gets 6-7 ft tall w/ Christmas tree form and long side branches. Needs plenty of sun and air movement. I planted one in what turned out to be sheltered, semi-shade location, and it got a little bud mold. Plants more in the open were OK. Would not recommend for moist, humid areas. Started seeds indoors in late March, put outside in early May, harvested in late September.

About 70% of my females were absolutely caked w/ resin...as much as any "white" strain. Smoke is spicy and tasty, but expands like crazy. Best in a vaporizer or bubbler.

Overall, this strain turned out better than I expected, and the pic at Paradise doesn't do her justice (looks more like the "Sugar Babe" pic). I probably won't grow Magic Bud outdoors again, as there are other strains better suited for that, but I will most likely repeat it indoors.

Hello OG'ers,

Appearance and feel:

These buds cured into a light brown with dark green leaves. They are so sticky that you can see resin on the stems. I don't sell anything so I wouldn't be the best judge of bag appeal but these have plenty of it. If you see them you want them (am I right?). The buds are full but not extremely tight. But you break them apart very slowly because you must do a lot of pulling apart; there is some content in these buds.

Smell:

When these plants were growing I said they smelled like limes. Well, after curing they smell like pine. Like a pine cleaner or pine air spray. Smells kinda medicinal.

Taste:

Just like the smell, very piney with a strong spicy exhale. While not as sweet or fruity as some other strains it is a pleasure to toke because it leaves some spice on your tongue. It is a very smooth smoke that you can hold in for some time before exhaling. Very pleasant.

High:

First let me say that I let these plants go long into their flowering period. They went between 58 and 65 days. And they were full ripe. That being said these plants that are supposed to be trippy turned into serious tunnelvision. I mean only one thought could enter your brain while high on this. Let me say this strain is very very potent. The advertisement says "It will take you far beyond your grasp". Well thats no hype. This strain will have you going "Huh, what?" at everything. It is a strong high that is hard to function on because you got tunnelvision. You only see one thing and think one thought. I think it's good for music, but every time I put some on I don't hear it. I'm too deep in my one thought. Great for the movies, think tunnelvision. Not too good for social functions though. This strain would have been trippy if I had picked it early. Now this strain lifts you slightly then drops you over a cliff. If you smoke too much your bed will be waiting for you at the bottom of the cliff.

I highly recommend this strain to anyone. Easy to grow, large yeilding and right there the equal to the best stain that I've ever grown. Thanks for helping me to enjoy this grow. I loved bringing this strain to you because not many people seemed to have grown it. So the interest level was there and it helped me to grow on.

Thanks.
Smokey

Haven't got any pics except this one (three Nebs at the back, three Adventure Mixes in front) taken in 2002 under a 220-watts bank of CFLS. Here is the report from then...

26/7/2002: Of eight Nebulas from 10 seeds (all germed, two didn't pop), I have three Sativa dominant females. One is a bit of a runt, one is a gorgeous girl that's overtaken everything else and putting on lots of flowering weight, while the third is not far behind. These last two are quite uniform and very similar to the three males I have outside. They are both flowering quite heavily. I now have five out of eight very uniform plants. The fourth female is a mutant with weird, fused-together leaves that's growing quite healthily. I split the main stem when I dropped a light on her and she's stitched herself up nicely. Talk about an indestructable plant!

13/8/2002: Everything seems to be fine and the Nebula girls have a lovely sweet pineapple-lime aroma I'm very much looking forward to tasting. In fact, I snipped one small bud the other day which I'm currently slow-drying to test...

29/8/2002: Well, the girls have been flowering for about 30 days now. Half-way there and I'm more impressed with my Nebulas each day as they're already shining with crystalline trichomes! The more Sativa pheno is at the back in the middle - nice, healthy growth pattern - while the slightly more Indica girl at the rear right is a serious crystal producer!

Ah, the smoke report...

Well, I did end up smoking that tiny bud and all I can say is it got me fucking wasted!

Er, OK - I'll try to be a bit more scientific about it. Actually it was late at night, just before bed, which was a mistake because I thought I wasted a good buzz... Or did I? It took a while to come on - a bit of creeper - but about half-way through the joint I really started to feel it. Wavy (hover- ing), clean (hightened senses - especially sound) and then quite a rush with a little paranoia thrown in. The paranoia part is not unusual with strong Sativas - there's always a twinge of introspection there - but it never lasts long. After maybe five minutes, you just sit back and enjoy the ride... It keeps building over the next 10-15 minutes until you're really head-spaced out.

Well, for a small bud off a young plant it was quite a ride. I remember slipping in and out, not wanting to go to bed but knowing I had to because I was tired, then going to bed and just hovering there in a very pleasant state... and then before I knew it, it was morning. I just sort of suddenly snapped awake like it had worn off. I looked at the clock and three or four hours had passed, but I wasn't really sure if I had been asleep, dreaming or mildly tripping. I was probably sleeping

Smoke Report #2

OK, we're at six weeks of flowering now, so I plucked a lower Nebula bud that looked nicely browned and cured it over three days. I have just sparked it up in a joint...

The first things I noticed while I was rolling were: the bud was a bit fluffy and airy, although obviously it was a small, less-developed flower. However, it has a lovely, sweet, pungent pineapple smell to it. It's also so sugary it's like pulling apart spun toffee. Actually, it almost tastes like it. Mmmm.... pineapple.

Well, it took me half a joint to write that and I'm pretty baked already. Yes, it's a half-joint hitter. Things are starting to look a little visual now... expanding and contracting light. I'm hungry... Heh! Heh! I'll be back in a minute....

Yes, quite trippy. I like this weed. A nice cup of Ceylon tea with cream and honey is what it tastes like right now.

(One hour later...)

Well, as you can see I got bored of writing for a while and went and made something to eat. I've gotta fly to China in a few hours, so I'd better start packing...

Yeah, it's that sort of smoke: kind of forget what you're doing and eventually get back to it. Nice mellow plateau after the slight paranoia peak. It's not the strongest shit I've smoked, but it's getting up there. It certainly tastes sweet. And the best thing is, I still have half a joint...

(Another hour later...)

Ha! Ha! Last words... I'm still stoned! Yeah, it's quite chilled now, listening to some Cafe Del Mar and DJ Shadow. It expands in the lungs and mind...

Final Nebula verdict...

N6 (Nebula): This was the first girl to flower, the fastest to grow, forming eight evenly-sized colas on eight branches after finning, and the sweetest, pineapple-punch smelling plant of the bunch. However, she was less crystalline than the other two Nebs and, when it came to smoking, while she tasted sweet, she was not quite as peaky as the plant I'm about to describe. Also, although her colas were large and evenly spaced, they were a little airy. I guess that's to be expected from a Sativa-dominant scrogged plant. Nice growth characteristics, however, and would have been good to keep as a cross mother. She yielded over half an ounce of sweet smoke, a few hand-pollinated seeds, and has been quite a nice, relaxing, happy smoke.

N5 (Nebula): This girl provided all my early smoke reports and samples. As you've probably read, she got me SERIOUSLY STONED! Nice dense crystal formation, slightly more Indica than N6, smaller, tighter buds. Though not as fast or vigorous, she seemed to have the weight there. Had a slightly skunky air to the familiar pineapple Nebula smell: not quite as sweet but marginally stronger and a little more "chemical". She also produced half an ounce of nice sticky bud and about 30 seeds from three different males. I'll probably grow these out with the N6 seeds at a latter stage to see how they fair...

N8 (Nebula): The runt - still growing but will probably yield less than half an ounce when finished. Also very crystalline like N5, but too small and slow to consider keeping. Also seemed susceptible to insect bites (thrips and gnats). Still, what she lacked in size and vigour she made up for in sweet Sativa smoke which, again, was quite similar to N5.

All up, I'd definitely grow Nebula again. They're not quite as uniform as described, but Nebula placed in a Cannabis Cup for Paradise Seeds, produces some seriously strong smoke, and has a nice, sweet, uplifting air about it. In fact, it can be a little too much at times... but it's a delight to grow, scratch, sniff 'n smoke.

Got 6/6 germ - 3 males and 3 females. 1 female didn't make it (the males were tortured and the survivor got to mate with the prettiest Sensi Star lady).

I saw 2 phenotypes while growing, they were more evident during flower. One was more leaf the other had more buddage to it. The one with more leaf had a darker shade of green to it and was the pheno that tasted like the metal lemons.

The one with the buddage looked light green and had the more Skunk flavor to it, both phenos had incredible crystal formation! Both of them finished within 3 days of each other with about 1.5-2 oz each. They were smallish also so I'm sure larger plants would do much better, mine were about 1.5-2.5 ft tall each.

The smoke of the dark one was the one I remember most.

It was one of the most relaxing and tastiest buds I have smoked for a long long time. The taste was refreshing, original, and full. Different than what you get from your local dealer. Really enjoyable to the taste buds. The stone was pure body and mind massage, great for relaxing after a hard days work and some time at home.

I would rate this strain an SOLID 8 (I have not smoked a 10 yet).

The pictures I have posted are of the darker pheno that tasted like metallic lemons.

I grew a couple seeds and got one nice female. This is a very easy strain to grow. Nice vigorous, lush, dark green growth. The plant took 65 days to finish .It grew like a little bush about 2 feet tall and 2 feet wide. The plant was almost all bud, a very good yielder. Towards the end of flower it produced a bit of a skunky smell.

The flavor was kind of spicy, musky. The high is very good. This is a very potent Indica with a heavy couchlock. A nice day ender. The short growth would make this a good scrog or grow cabinet strain.

i do like a nice strong indica at the end of a hard day and that was what i was looking for when i picked sensi star. i took 50 clones from four different sensi start mothers and ended up with ten from each of them. all 4 different phenotypes are all quite different from each other, but one stuck out as alot different to the others it was a much more sativa phenotype than any of the others. the 3 that a quite different to each other did share some growth characteristics, they were all very short christmas tree shaped plants with a little bit of side branching and very nice top buds. The sativa pheno was alot taller(some of them twice the height of the other phenotypes) and some grew loads of side branches, i think they all would have had all the plants not been so tightly packed, attached to a tall thick main stem that had a beautiful top bud.

The high's of the different phenotypes was the main differance between them though, NO1 was the sativa pheno and u guessed it the high was much more sativa like than the rest it still gives that couchlock effect but your heads way above your body high in the sky.

No2 was the classic relaxing strong indica with no paranoia i was looking for when i brought the seeds. i like this one as it is very strong so you don't need to smoke much

No3 was the least potent of the bunch but a nice happy giggly high

No4 has been nicknamed by my friends F**kedup4 because the high is just CRAZY, its as strong as the NO2 but really edgy and paranoid your body is glued to your seat and your heads just fu*kedup. This pheno is only good for when you have nothing else to do but get fu**edup aand sit in a chair or lie down

Sensi Star is a cannabis cup winner. Upon smoking it, one immediatly notices why. Sensi has an intoxicating aroma, powerful punch, and a sweet taste. The bright orange hairs are a trademark sign of this glorius plant. Light fluffy buds add to the potency as you won't find a nook not covered in crystals. One great thing about the SS is that it isn't dense. This gives more surface area, which increases potency. Of course this also decreases yield. SS is not a poor yielder, but no one will confuse it for Big Bud either. The other knock against it is....it's susceptability for Powdery Mildew. Overall this strain will stay in my garden. The pro's heavily outweigh the cons, and after 2 weeks of curing, the room is filled with a wonderful complex smell, from sweetly calm caribbean friut to car oil, my patient's LOVE this strain.

MG

While growing this strain the oder level stays particularly low, as well as the nutrient levels. average finisher at 9 weeks there were a good amout of amber trichomes.

Well I started out with a clone from a buddy of mine ( he got the seeds from paradise seed bank). I started the clone off in a drip feed/DWC setup and vegged for about 25 days or so, and I threw her into flower at 12 inches. About half way through veg I turned the drippers of as it was getting over watered. In veg the sensi liked around 600-700ppm( by the way I was using GH 3 part nutes) and if you aren't careful it will burn pretty easily. I also had to use an extra kick of epsom salt as she liked the extra MG once I put her into flowering I was raising the PPM very slowly untill I got to about 950-1000, anything over that and she would burn. She stretched for about the first 2 weeks then just started to bush out, after stretching she was exactly 24 inches. Unfortunatly I had to harvest her at 54 days, the smoke is still super strong and very lemon/skunky tasting, I think the smoke would be super excellent if I let her go to 65-70 days. I got a little less than a half ounce using a 250 watt HPS in a 4 gallon DWC bucket. all this is an excellent strain and I kept a mom from a cutting and she will stay in my garden.

Sensi star is my favorite indica. Its potent stone is a wonderful day ender. I grew a clone from a pack of paradise seeds. This plant is light on nutes. She fits her breeder description of being "crowned with legendary amounts of resin" The smell curing really finalizes after a moth and a half. Sensi star is a pleasure to look at, break up, and smoke everytime. Its dense nugs have tichomes everywhere. The smoke is a expander in the lungs, and hits real good real quick rendering its inhaler stoned to the bone. Beautiful plant that any grower would be proud to have in their room. Sensi star will always have a spot in my garden =)

Sweet Purple is a three-way cross and actually quite varied and not a stable or uniform strain at all (which I guess is why it's so cheap). It's not particularly potent and doesn't yield a lot. Average on both counts but it has the sweetest, most refreshing strawberry taste you are ever likely to encounter! Think of biting into a fresh strawberry and that's what it's like.

Of 10 seeds, all germed but only four came up. (I've learned a few lessons about root rot and soil mold since then). Of these four, all were different. One was a tall sativa male, one was a short and shrubby indica male, another was a very sweet sativa dominant (strawberry skunk) female, while the last one was a strong, mostly indica female. Here are my reports for the two girls...

Growth/Yield

Both plants were very average growers and yielders, although they did pick up after the fourth week of flowering and put on most of their weight in the last two weeks. They were both very healthy and didn't seem to mind a good dose of nutes (although this made little difference to the yield). Of the two phenos, the strawberry skunk went for eight weeks and yielded slightly higher than the indica, which was finished just after its seventh week. All told, less yield than most indicas and/or skunk varieties.

Buds/Crystal

The indica had very round, golf-ball-shaped buds that grew out in all directions and were covered in crystals. The strawberry skunk, meanwhile, had tell-tale foxtail-shaped buds that stretched towards the light. It didn't seem to be as densely covered in trichomes.

Smell/Taste

As mentioned, the strawberry skunk had the most amazing, sweet (& ever-so-slightly skunky) scent that is just like a punnet of fresh-picked strawberries! It was delicious! And it tasted exactly the way it smelled! It's going to be awesome once it's cured: like pink musk sticks. Smoking it is like drinking a strawberry daiquiri with a sprig of mint! Cool, clean and sweet with a syrupy aftertaste

The purple indica, meanwhile, was still sweet but alot more acrid. It had quite a strong, sour-chemical scent that was more spicy than its sister and more grape than strawberry. It tasted a little peppery, but seemed to be getting sweeter with the cure. If the strawberry skunk is a shiraz, this one's a heavier, spicy, grape-like cabernet.

High

Both varieties are strong, but as you would expect, each leans towards its respective phenotype. The strawberry skunk is (in my opinion) the pick of the two. It has a very clean, happy sativa high that is subtle at first, and after two cones you can hardly feel it, but then it starts to creep up on you until finally you realise you are very "clearly" stoned. It's the type of sensory-enhancing, hovering high that slips in and out so that at times you're not even quite sure you're stoned until another wave suddenly crashes over you with a big, wry grin across your face as you pick up on the groove. Great for late evenings out, socialising or retiring home with the wife/girlfriend for some serious fun! Get's you "up" in every sense of the word...

Having said that, some of my other friends prefer the purple indica for its more "profound" thought process and spicy bite. This one (in my opinion) isn't as strong, but is still fairly serious smoke. It comes on straight away and you know you are stoned at all times. Not as subtle as her sister, she doesn't put you on your arse straight away but you know eventually that's where you'll be headed: either to the fridge or in front of the TV. Relaxing, but thought-provoking at the same time

After a three-month cure, here are my second observations...

Sweet Purple (indica pheno): Nice, very spicy berry-flavoured bud that has cured well with purple hues. The smoke is heavier than anything else and has a unique lime-berry flavour that's hard to describe. This is definately a bed-time smoke as although it isn't knock-out gear like some, it sinks straight into your bones as you drift away. Like all Paradise Seeds varieties it is very sweet, respectably potent and covered in trichomes. It is my personal favourite for relaxing. No pretension or creeper and just gets you stoned from the first toke. Nice, sweet smoke and surprisingly stronger than I first thought it would be.

Sweet Purple (sativa pheno): I was hoping this one would be a bit more potent, but it still smells and tastes COMPLETELY of strawberries and is the sweetest bud I have ever smoked with a clean, refreshing minty aftertaste. However, it also has a very high leaf-calyx ratio, making it leafy and a little harsher to smoke than it should be at time. Still tastes great and has a good sativa high with a little more body to it. The strawberry smell and taste is AMAZING! The buds are a bit light and airy, though, so this strain needs a bit more work. Goes better in joints than bonges because of its leafy nature. Not overly smelly and you have to touch it to really bring the scent out but just a really nice plant to show off to friends who can't believe pot would ever smell like this. The high doesn't last as long as the others. Still, at $20 a pack the Sweet Purple is a good deal.

I germinated 2 seeds in a wet paper towel that was in a tupperware container on top of my DSL modem.

Within 36 hours they were both planted in 6 inch pots using miracle grow. I only have one grow room and decided to throw some more in there with the big ones that were soon going to flower.

They sprouted in a few days, one was strange because I planted it in the middle and it shot out from the side. They grew pretty fast and vigorous. The others were time to flower, so they were growing in 12/12. A few weeks later preflowers started coming out and they started coming up with just one big bud up the middle.

One of them was given to a very good friend, which is doing so much better than my other one right now. It grew for around 35-40 days in flowering before a early harvest. This grow taught me a lot about early flowering and early flowering strains. I would recommend this to everyone. You can grow a lot with one bud just coming up the middle or if you have enough space, you can grow them out.

I am going to try this strain again, but this time I'm going to grow them out and do a lot more stuff more proper. I didn't weigh out what I harvested but It was a decent small nug, the picture of the nug was when It was first getting dried, not cured yet.

Grower Report

January, 2004

I ordered some Sensi Star so I figured I'd pick up some Sweet Purple too since it was only $20 and was supposed to have nice colors and taste/smell like strawberries. I had some germ problems (don't think it was the seeds) and ended up w/ 4 girls. They had very indica style leaves and growth, very columnar and sog worthy but the buds were very Sativa in appearance and resin. They were fairly short and didn't stretch much at all after the initial stretch. I harvested them around 70 days but had some problems with that harvest that affected yields and possibly potency so I'm not sure if that had any affect. The buds feel pretty solid and dense when growing but when you dry them they get very airy. Yield is about half what you would guess based on the size of the buds.

The high... Well when I first tried it I thought it was shit. That was before it was all the way cured and when I was smoking several other strains. At the moment it's all I've been smoking for a few days and I've grown to appreciate the buzz a bit more. The buzz is very heady but not racey at all, very clear, a good daytime smoke. Very little if any body to it. It does have a tendency to cause some munchies tho and doesn't have the sativa influence that keeps ya up at night. It makes it easy to relax and go to sleep at night but doesn't have that powerful indica buzz that knocks you out during the day. I didn't get any that turned purple or tasted/smelled like strawberries, but an interesting and different looking MJ compared to most strains and a good daytime or relaxing evening buzz, but nothing really special unless that's what you're looking for.

Germination was 100% success, 1/1 plants turned out to be female.

In veg this plant is easy to maintain, so I rated it a 10 in ease. The plant has very thick/wide fan leaves and has a beautiful dark-green color to the leaves. The stem in veg gets surprisingly thick and is very prone to stretching out.

In bloom it starts out short but it remains short and squatty in the middle of flowering. The beginning budsites protrude yellowish pistils and yellowish-green calyxes. As it continues to grow the calyxes protrude out like devils horns as the large/thick pistils protrude from the centers. It continues to get wider and a lot more dense at the end of flowering. Right in the middle of flowering you will get the thick/ broad bulbous trichomes popping up on every crevice of the plant as well on the fan leaves. As the plants life screeches to a halt the trichomes begin to slant and the pistils turn a dark amber red and wilt up and die as the flushing commences. At the cut, there is literally no smell at all, just the smell of water emits from the tops of the colas.

As drying proceeds there is an overpowering smell of papaya fruit/avocado skins and almost a dirty cedar woody smell to the product, the smell is extremely hard to describe but it is very pleasant to smell.

The taste is also very interesting but not as interesting as the smell, the taste has a faint cinnamon quality as well as a spicy/hashish texture as I exhale. The waft of fruity hash will remain in the air almost like the Romberry does.

The high is very relaxing yet euphoric, I realized that the high changes every session. There is a pattern which I became very interested in. In a lax social environment you are very energetic and happy, the paranoia of anything washes away after a few bongrips. But if you're alone you feel very goofy and almost in a drunken state of mind if you decide to get up after a long couchlock. Somewhat couchy, but energetic bliss is quite noticeable in this product. I recommend it to anyone who enjoys a very relax, satisfying stone. You will also notice the slight body sensations especially in the facial area in the cheeks and around the eye area.

The potency of this product is very strong, but not as strong as the original g13. I have had the honor in smoking a pallet of the original 5 years ago with a friend of mine, grower extrodinare Felix H., who is a retired CIA agent former jailbird. The potency of the original is cut in half, but its familiar, unique stone is apparent in so many ways it's hard to describe. In spite of the lesser potency it sure does bring back memories, but with a kick of something else I can't quite put my finger on.

I germinated 5 seeds and got 3 nice females. The plants vegged well and displayed vigorous dark green foliage. Not much variation in the plants. These are short, stumpy, heavily Indica plants. They finished at around 60 days and produced solid resinous buds. The resin production was very nice and trailed out onto the leaves. Most of the leaves close to the bud had these funny ruffled edges on them.

The flavor isn't very pronounced, but very soft. Kind of a piney/earthy flavor with a bit of a vanilla undertone. The high is incredibly potent. This is a very couchy Indica. It almost feels like being drunk. I find myself nodding in my chair after a couple hours.

I have no idea about the actual lineage of this strain but is definitely a solid Indica with devastating potency. I've since crossed a G-13 male with a C99 fem and found it to be a good crossing strain.

The 2nd pheno, which is got rid of, was a stretchy plant in veg and in flower. It flowered a little longer than the first pheno, and did not yeild nearly as well. The buds were almost identical, but definitely not as dense and big as the first pheno.

The G13bx is a good plant to have around. It's very easy with the nutrients, and doesn't need any special attention. It's an easy cloner, and grows quickly in both veg and flower. Both phenos also packed on the trichs, making the high a strong couchlock indica one, that would put you to sleep if you smoked too much. Overall the G13bx is a great plant, and will be around in my garden for some years to come. It is completely diferent, in every way, from the Pacifics G13 I have.

They were grown initially in rockwool cubes, started out in 1" seedling/clone sized cubes, then transplanted into 4" rockwool cubes, then finally into enriched soil (All-Mix). From the start all plants grew vigorously, showing strong stems and particularly the branches. Indica dominant fan leaves grew quite large, often encroaching upon neighboring plants, but easily controlled by bending the leaves out of the way rather than any sacrificing of leafage.

There were not any phenotypical differences that I could detect, all plants grew uniform in size, shape, smell and potency....none overshadowing another in any one area. I would call this a stable strain and easy to grow.

The plants finished between 65 and 70 days of receiving 12 hours light and 12 hours complete darkness. They were vegetated under 24/0 lighting for a period of approx. 6 weeks from seed germination.

The odor (from a security standpoint) is mid-range and should be grown with proper ventilation/air cleaning system.

The taste is quite fruity although with undertones of hash plant. The potency is quite high, especially for an indica, and can see many beneficial medical uses with this strain, e.g. muscle relaxant and appetite stimulant.

This plant is amazing. It handled a serious mite infestation during flower, all others plants in flower almost died and they did not touch these plants.

I planted 3 seeds 2 were female, 1 indica pheno the other a sativa pheno. Both plants were about 14 inches in height when switched to 12/12. The indica pheno put on about 10 inches then bushed. The sativa pheno ended up having to be tied down as I could not adjust the rest of the canopy to its height; it just kept stretching (it was as tall as a standard broom after 2.5 weeks flower).

Both phenos smelt the same and tasted the same when dried and cured (3.5weeks). The indica pheno took about 55days and the sativa pheno took 68 days (if I remember correctly -Virus ate my stored info). The indica pheno was a great all-day working kind of buzz. It hit very quickly and lasted a long time. This pheno was good for my anxiety as it made me very content with the world and in harmony; it was almost euphoric.

The sativa pheno crept up then kicked me in the head like a donkey. Comet trails giggles, very heady, unable to focus or really care. Good for after a bad days work. All in all I would say grow this plant you can't hurt it with mistakes (I made a lot -mites, nutes, pH, and forgetting to water and finding them lying down -45 min recovery they rock). I will grow this again and probably mother it .

Personally if grown by a more experienced grower I think this cross has the ability to be a great medicinal and enjoyment strain.

I germed seeds using a paper towel and a ziplock bag. I vegged under my acitinic coral light for a 4 week period which I firmed a few times. These plants didn't ask much of me and were extremely forgiving. This was my first time with some real genetics and it was truly a breeze. I flowered under two 400w HPS lights for 65 days. I used super bloom every other watering. The buds were sticky and sweet. I got about 6 oz from 4 plants. I recommend these to anyone who lacks the same green thumb I do.

This years' outdoor crop will make my third grow of 'Hollands Hope.' It is a hardy, bug resistant variety that practically grows itself. It's perfect for beginners and novices. In other words, 'Idiot proof!'

I have grown Hollands Hope indoors with spectacular results in terms of potency. When grown indoors hydroponically, Hollands Hope quickly move up from a solid 5 or 6 for potency (when grown outdoors) to a strong 7/soft 8 (when grown hydroponically, indoors.)

Hollands Hope is a perfect 'everyday smoke.' Nice clear high that accommodates daily activity or couch-lock. It's your call. If you smoke enough of it, it will knock you flat on your ass. Otherwise, as an 'every-day' smoke, the high has a comfortable ceiling and is more in the head than the body, it permits you to function normally while enjoying a most pleasant and persistent buzz. The high is long lasting.

Although Hollands Hope is an old and stable strain, the plants can show remarkable variety in size and appearance. I 'usually' grow from thirty-five to forty-five plants at a time. Out of those 35-45 there will be a few plants that show their 'pure' Afghani ancestry, while a few others will show the heavily Sativa "Skunk" characteristics of the other contributing ancestor. Hollands Hope is real pleaser for any pot farmer/marijuana maven. A 'must-have' in your stash.

To summarize:

'Hollands Hope'

- 1. It is a hearty, easy to grow plant. Tolerates heavy nutrient feedings well.
- 2. Respectable, 'commercial' sized yeilds. 450 - 550 grams per sq. meter.
- 3. Super fast/early flowering variety. Great for colder (New England) regions.
- 4. Disease and pest resistant.
- 5. The buds begin to turn a beautiful purple-ish hue after two weeks into the flowering cycle. An absolutely stunning looking plant. The buds can display so many colors that it can just as accurately be called, 'Rainbow Weed!'
- 6. Smooth smoke and pleasant taste. Ever so slightly 'heavy' on the lungs but with a flavor that makes up for it.
- 7. A thoroughly enjoyable high that does not cripple. Excellent 'everyday' smoke. In fact, as an 'everyday' smoke I give it a 10! It's perfect that way.

Expect to pay between $25 and $45 US dollars for 10 seeds. Best source is 'Nirvana' in Holland. They ship anywhere and they always have the best prices. I hope you try a batch of Hollands Hope. Indoors or out it's a pleasure to grow and to smoke.

It smells when it cures but I actually think it smelled stronger in veg than in bloom. It has a LOT OF CRYSTALS. If you like white fluffy nuggets this is for you. If you are looking for a shorter potent plant I recommend this one. Why not give the Blue Jack a shot. Take a gamble, the main reason I grew it was because no one else did and it looked like it had good genetics. In my opinion Blue Jack is just as good as bubblegum and SK1.

One female was your text book indica with a nice hard 2ft long main cola and a good number of side buds. This one was almost 8wks flowering on the dot. This plant gave me about 6 ounces.

The other female had much thinner leaves, with the edges of them getting a purple hue. It had 2 huge colas as well as many smaller buds. This plant took another week and a half on top of the first. In the last week the purple color spread through all the leaves on the plant and through the bud (not shown in pics :( ). The smell was a bit more fruity (but similar to the first plant). This female gave me a bit under 8 ounces dried.

Both had an identical smell until the purple one changed. This strain definately has a full body smoke. I smoked a 1.5g joint of this with 6 friends. None wanted to smoke any of the second one I rolled about 30 minutes later.

Blueberry blast was well worth the 50 bucks (cdn) it cost me. Definately a plant which all growers should have in their garden atleast once.

Flowered the other 5 seeds. Only 2 came out as female both showing the same characteristics as the purple one I talked about earlier. Im going to keep clones of one of these for a while yet.

I have been growing these for awhile. I decided to try RM for comparison and all I can say is nice. The flavor is second to none, as I have found with many of RM's strains. These have been grown in and out and really like the outdoor veg. I have found that RM's as the older version I also have can get very bushy bases. They will stretch if you don't keep the lights close. This has always been one of my favorite strains to grow and smoke. One of the best things of this plant is that it vegges OD very well, and the best color has been on the OD veg indoor flower. I have found that this pheno is a slow vegger when cloned so IMO an extra week of veg does not hurt. I have also found with this pheno that a little more veg is a little less stretch. If kept close to the lights they are fairly manageable. The bloom profile is nice quite tight and manageable. Now the finished product is rock hard nugs usually with one big top. I have topped and trained these as well and they respond quite well to it. I have not tried yet but these could go 12 weeks in bloom and from what I have heard it is one hit weed at that point.

It's the strongest sativa I have yet grown and I have grown some beauties. 100% germination from all Reeferman seeds so far.

I gotta say this is the ideal indoor sativa. I flowered at 12" and in finished at 32". I saw some variations in height but nothing outrageous. It finished in 9 wks. Mostly cloudy trich with a few clear and amber. She smells lovely when pinched. Sweet pine and fuel. Mmmm. :) My mouth is waterin'! Rather innocent in the odor dept. if not touched though. A very nice feature of quite a few sativas. The smoke after a couple of weeks jar cured has a good sativa flavor: Fresh, piney & crisp. The smoke is smooth like silk. It looks great too. Shimmering light green. Now for the best part: the high We just had a baby. At 5 in the morn with no sleep I had a bangin' headache and was ready to passout in the garage if I had to. Anywhere. I went outside and took about 3/4 of a jib to the head and felt refreshed with no headache. My mood was definately lightened and lifted. I came back in and happily did dawn patrol. Not the greatest yielder under my 400w, 1 1/2 oz a plant, but that's to be expected with sativas. They like a lot of light. Highly recommended to those that have shyed away from sativas for fear of height issues and the long commitment to finish them. Also to those that already know and love the joys of pure sativas!

Grower Report

April, 2005

First let me say this is my first grow from start to finish and I'm really happy with the results so if my ratings seem inflated to you maybe that's why.

That being said the Burmese was a great plant and easy to grow. I started seeds on April 26 and got 100% germination. Out of the 4 seeds I started 2 were killed by a light falling on them during the first week. The other 2 turned out to be female. One was a week behind as she was planted to make up for the death of the others and she never really caught up and I didn't have the room so she got culled at day 40. This report is about the other female which was grown the full 63 days of flower.

in veg she grew quickly and vigorously without problems. The Burmese has very fat leaves and squat growth pattern for a pure sativa. After 1 1/2 week under daylight CFL's and another 1 1/2 weeks under the 150 watt hps the clock was switched to 12/12.

She responded by an immediate stretch that lasted two weeks - she was 4-5" tall at the start and nearly 15" tall when she got done stretching. At this point (day 14 of flower) the males were culled of another strain and this Burmese was fitted with a super simple scrog. This was not the most gentle of actions and the main stem bent pretty badly - but she was strong and recovered in a week filling in the screen well. She also went into DWC at this time.

Trichomes became visible at around day 21 and she really got super frosty and stayed that way.

The DWC bucket dried out in week 6 and resulted in some light/heat burn on the leaves - this plant will scorch under intense light easily if water stressed. (with 150 watts over ~2 square feet the light is intense). But again she recovered well.

the smell was pretty strong after the fourth week of flower - very exotic and intoxicating - like nag champa incense mixed with potpourri - as it went on later and later into flower a piney fuel smell became also noticeable.

So she was chopped after much sampling at day 63 of 12/12 on July 18, for a seed to harvest time of less than three months - producing a whopping 46 grams of super dense crystal covered nuggets of pure exotic love.

so the smoke report - she's very sativa with a clear heady high, it's not a creeper but it does build over time. Very good up buzz with low low anxiety/paranoia. Even without a cure the taste is also exotic and spicy with strong herbal incense flavors. She tends to leave a slightly greasy feeling in my mouth. After 4 weeks in the jars a really musky aroma sorta like body odor is present - not the part of the body odor smell that is gross but the part that's kinda musky.

Nice potency - 2 packs of my one hitter and I'm soaring for 2-3 hours and I'm a pretty chronic 4 times a day smoker and so far no tolerance to this stuff..

Out of a vaporizer the Burmese is very tasty with all the flavors she had during flower. Only issue is that the buds are so dense extra care needs to be taken to break it up for the vaporizer.

Now I've smoked alot of stuff and I must say this weed is right up there. I had my doubts as it was an IBL but as you can see in the pictures it is very crystallized - better than most.

Truly lovely ganja that I will be growing again and again.

And the best part is she smells like nothing else - pull this out and people will want to know where you got it!

The Cherry Bomb II has two distinct phenotypes.

One phenotype has wider, more indica-looking leaves and a columnar structure. The smell of the indica pheno is slightly cherry with a spicy side. Flavor is all out spicy. The high of the indica pheno is stony in nature and leaves me groggy afterwards. After the initial grow I pitched the indica pheno. It is a nice plant, but not what I believe Reeferman was after when creating the Cherry Bomb II. This phenotype goes the advertised nine weeks.

The second phenotype has skinnier leaves and has a branching habit. It will grow nice fat stems, but still not enough to support the bud weight. Although the flowering time is a little long, the yield and flavor makes it well worth it. Staking is a must for this phenotype. The branching habit would make it ideal for SCROG. This phenotype has no smell in veg. and early flower. Late into flowering, around week 7, the cherry smell starts to kick in. The smell is best described as artificial cherries, think cherry cough drops. The smell gets stronger as flowering commences. I have been harvesting this phenotype at week 10.5 from cuttings. This is my keeper phenotype and what the report is based on.

The high from the sativa pheno is a balanced high, more in the head than the body. This smoke makes me happy. It has a nice come down with no after effects. After a 1 month cure the flavor is awesome. Sweet cherry on the inhale with an interesting cherry/skunk aftertaste. This is the tastiest, sweetest strain I have smoked.

This is a cross between a California indica Cherry Bomb and Mr. Greengenes Cherry Bomb with Maui Wowie origins. To get the best cherry flavor select plants with the most red in the stems. Mr. Greengenes has mentioned this in his Cherry Bomb, and I have found the same correlation in Reefermans Cherry Bomb II. The red striping is variable throughout both phenotypes. I recorded the degree of striping before flowering and compared the flavor and smell after. Just as Mr. Greengenes had said, the more red striping, the more cherry flavor and smell.

I was quite skeptical when I started growing these out as I have been let down more than once when it comes to taste. I really didn't think Cannabis could taste like cherries. I was not disappointed. Reeferman's Cherry Bomb II will have a permanent spot in my grow for years to come.

I grew several Reeferman strains - summer 2004- , I was very fortunate. Out of the dozen plants grown, nine were female. Growth was consistent and hearty throughout veg. They all had a wonderful smell throughout their lives that I have experienced with Cannabis. It was erotic. The flowering cycle for these plants is quite explosive, much faster than any other plant in the garden. At day 10 they were already taking good form of full branching colas.

Perfect plant for anyone at all. Not the most potent plant, it is a fabulous medium 'high' and is a great all day smoke. Beginners will love it because you really cannot go wrong, the plants just take whatever you give them. Herb-heads will love picking out the special pheno's, I had two beauties!

First Pheno was very earthy, old skool smelling herb. Got everyone I knew and then some high. 5 plants were picked at day 42 of flowering, could have gone another week for something extra special. Yield was about 2.5 ounces off small/medium plants topped once. Lost about half ounce from each to mold.

Second Pheno, was a BEAUTY! smells like lemon citrus candy. Tastes like it too in a vaporizer. Great clear high, fully functional. I work out with this herb, good for dates, wont burn you out, just keeps you high for about 4 hours. Appetite stimulator. Would have gone for 55 days i'd say, but still at 42 it was very nice.

I loved this strain. It is no longer available, except perhaps in a cross. I will continue to grow my cross, as well as Reeferman's updated versions. It's a keeper!

G-SUS produces sum seriously fat, sticky colas. It is also extremely potent. But due to it's stocky nature, a long veg period is necessary to fulfill its' yield potential. This was some of the stickiest, gooiest bud i have ever grown. It was very sappy, i suppose would be a better description. A smooth smoke, and a voracious, hunger-inducing high to follow. The calyxes reminded me of the tops of arab mosques, and palaces. Very beautiful, exotic qualities to the appearance of the bud. The taste wasn't the most pleasant that I've ever experienced, but it was a strong flavor. It tasted very earthy, and spicy with hashish undertones. I imagine a lot of hashish could be produced with this strain. This plant finished in 60 days, to my tastes(25% amber trichomes). I only vegged it for a week, so it yielded about 2 ounces. Like I said though, give it some time, and the fatness and density of the colas will give you immense budz!

February, 2005

A beautiful plant from a marvellous breeder. Reeferman's creates fresh crosses with classic and rare genetics and helps to keep the canna gene-pool alive and improving. I ordered these seeds on a whim because I liked the description. Luckily for me they turned out to be even better than how they were described.

I initially had some problems with germination but Reeferman sent me replacements, plus a pack of a strain worth more than the Potent Purples because there was a bit of a wait. Reeferman looks after his customers and pretty much guarantees high germination rates. 90%, I think. I had no germination problems with any of the replacements.

This strain is an F1 cross of Oregon Purple Thai (OPT) mother and a secret Father. The OPT has some lovely traits and one rather peculiar one: up to 30% of seedlings may be mutants. I only had 15% mutants overall so I did well.

The seedlings grow strong and loved my blue envirolite (highly recommended). Once into veg stage, they grow so fast that they totally dominated my garden and after 7 weeks of veg I had to begin 12/12 for fear of running out of space, even though the rest of my girls could have done with another week or 2 in veg!

In 12/12 the buds packed on and on. Nice and dense. Very resinous.

About day 40 they began to turn lavender and continued to purple towards the end.

After 55 days of 12/12 they had reached 52 inches and had grown a lovely set of maroon buds. The smell is the outstanding thing: It is truly the best smelling strain that I have yet grown (and I have grown some!). The main aroma is a sweet and sour grape with a touch of pine, honey, lavender with a slightly fresh smell of meadows and sweet spice.

This gorgeous smell is directly reflected in the taste hence the 10. No argument. Sometimes I would keep picking up the Jay out of the tray to respark it, just to get that taste in my mouth again.

This procedure caused over-indulgence on a number of occasions and I had to hold on tight through the astral journey I was sent on. The high is electric, trippy almost but strangely calming too. Moderation is needed here or you could end up quite dizzy as I did once. If you keep the dosage within normal limits then this is a delicious and uplifting herb to cherish.

Very pleasant to grow and smoke. Got a 5/5 germ rate , 3 females , no hermi at all. Grown 100% organic in soil

Plants were very vigourous, 1 got 2 pheno a squat one and a lanky one. The high is quite the same , the harvest was way better for the lanky one but the odor and taste was stronger in the squat pheno.

really easy to grow, they even survived to my freind taking care of them for 2 weeks

They took about 8 weeks to be ready for harvest . The flowering smell was medium , sweet and floral.

The high is strong ,maybe 7-8 on 10 , but mellow at the same time, its well balance so you're not rush in your head or sleepy, only really relax. Good for muscle pain . Type of weed i like to smoke on a rainy sundy afternoon or to chill with 1 or 2 friends listening to music and talking ...

The smell and taste is really floral , especially after a good curing, i really enjoy the taste . I usually only enjoy sweet tasting weed but like this one a lot , and so did my freind , i'll give a 6/10 for the strenght of the smell/taste and a 8/10 for the quality

I got the seeds from seedbay. 80 bucks for 10 seeds which was a lot for me because until then I had never paid more than 50 bucks. Reeferman could easily charge twice as much as he does for these seeds. The product description is balls on. This is some bad ass shit. Planted six, six popped in a matter of days. Nothing overly eventful during veg. Plants grew steady although surprisingly short. Not picky about nutes at all. They take what you give them and keep on going. Vegged for almost a month. Switched to 12/12 and about 2 weeks later all plants were sexed. 3 males, 3 females. Very consistent plants with all 6 looking identical in size, shape, and color. Culled the 3 males and flowered the females under 1000watt Hortilux for 62-63 days. Once again, nothing eventful in flower. These things just take nutes and continue to grow. No deficiencies at all, and I don't think you could over fert them if you tried to. Short in stature. 3 feet or less. Not very branchy at all. One main cola and a few side colas and thats about it. What she does grow is very dense, resin coated buds with an intoxicating aroma that makes it very hard to do anything other than smell them for hours at a time. Very hashy with tropical fruit until you open up the bud. Thats when you get that distinctive fuel smell that just makes your nose burn. The taste is just as complex as the smell. You get an initial hit of pine followed by the sweet, hashy taste that coats your tongue. Very smooth smoke. Very easy to smoke too much because you keep pulling on it expecting to choke and it just doesn't happen. The high is immediate. Right to the head, behind your eyes. You won't finish the exhale before you realize that you are about to be fucked up. But you have to take more hits because it tastes that good and it is so smooth. The high is a hot faced, head rush that lasts for hours. My entire face turned bright red and it felt like my ears were on fire. It was such an intense head rush that I had to lie down just so I could chill out. No body stone at all. It just keeps building, you keep getting higher, and then 3 hours later you are no longer high. But there is no crash, no letdown. It is gone as clean as it came on hard. Very unique experience. I don't know about the rest of the diesel varieties, but if you like an extremely trippy, heady high, this one rocks.

Wakeford was truly a pleasure to grow, classic Christmas tree shape plants which liked their nutes, the six seeds I started gave me six females, large heavy leaves needed to be constantly tucked in during flower to facilitate light exposure to lower bud sites. An above average yielder with a mighty top cola and very decent lower buds, they were grown in 16" pots and were very thirsty plants needing watering almost every day even in that size pot. I didn't take any clones which was a big mistake as I'd have liked to have kept them going. I'll definitely be doing another grow with this strain sometime in the future.

- 'Buddahs Sister'

Previously called Soma Skunk V+, this variety was renamed Buddha's sister to suit her tendencies and advance her appeal to Amsterdam coffeeshops. What's in a name? Directly after this deliciously good weed acquired a more intriguing name, she regularly sold out at the coffeeshops, and remains one of the best selling weeds available at De Dampkring. This sibling of Siddhartha is tall and lanky. In the cross with Afghani Hawaiian, she has a considerably increased yield, but less sweet taste than her other half, the Reclining Buddha. Buddha's sister has a flavor like a tart cherry candy, and the scent is similarly tart rather than sweet. The buds have a slippery, silky feel, which means an abundance of greasy resin to make into fantastic hash. She even gives a lot of finger hash that you won't want to wash away after grooming plants. As with all of Soma's varieties, Buddha's sister is medicinal quality cannabis, therapeutic for many conditions. The high is powerful, creative and cerebral in its effects. A mostly indica variety, Buddha's sister tends to make lots of side branches, so she is better to grow as a multi-branch plant instead of in a sea of green. She will still thrive using a sea of green method with some attentiveness. This variety does well hydroponically, but Soma's totally organic soil methods also deliver great results. The more fluffy, loosely packed buds give this plant a resistance to mold while still delivering a pleasing yield.

Started out with 10 beans of Soma's Buddah's Sister (Afghani-Hawaiian x Reclining Buddah), out of those 10 ended up with 5 very similar looking females .

Growth--

VEG) BS grows very short & squat with lots of side branching, much like a pure broad-leafed indica (largest leaves I have seen indoors). All 10 plants had nearly the same identical structure & smell. Preflowers came early so it was easy to identify the males/females in veg.

BLOOM) BS has a rather long 9-10week flowering period for such an indica dominant plant. Minimal stretch during flowering, buds are average sized with average calyx to leaf ratio but are fairly dense & completely covered in shiny resin glands (one of the most resinous strains I have ever grown!). The smell is very aromatic , like funky tart cherries.

SmokeReport--

Appearance: Buds are small, dense, spiral shaped with many firey red hairs covering the super sticky resin encrusted calyxes.

Smell: At 1st whiff you get a strong funky sour odor, then it quickly transends to a sweet, fruity cherry smell.

Taste: The flavor of BS is down right mouthwatering.....slightly tart/sour & very sweet like a cherry coughdrop.

Effect: BS smokes very light for such an indica dominant strain. The high is mostly felt in the head(sativa) with just a touch of relaxing body but not enough to make you groggy or tired. Its one of those mild, creative, feel good type of highs good for socializing with friends.

Overall I'd rate Buddah's Sister a solid 7.5-8 . Although the high is rather light & the yield average..... the unique smell & flavor still make this strain worth looking into for those who enjoy fruity cannabis varieties.

This plant is a must have for anyone who likes a full body high. It's a short Indica with massive foliar cover and super dense rock hard buds. We were able to get 3 separate females, all with the same phenotype. Short squat Indicas with wide shark toothed fan leaves. We vegged these plants for 25 days under 500W of MH light. We grew them in an aerated water hydro setup using GH nutes a touch of Oxyblast and Super-thrive. They were 20" tall when we flipped them. We transplanted into a WaterFarm cell, under 2200W of HPS light with a nice 1200PPM CO2, 45% humidity and 85 F environments.

The buds formed quickly, with this plant generating four large colas. The calyx to leaf ratio was above average and they took up minimal amounts of space.

Potency - Buddha's Sister is above average, in fact, way above average. I am a daily smoker and I can't finish a joint. I get about half-way through before I forget what I'm doing.

Effect - Full body high, my friend described it as being dipped in a pool of warm water, the stone creeps up your legs, torso and finally settles in the back of your head. It's akin to a strong muscle relaxant.

Medical Use - I suffer from chronic back pain, sore muscles and bad feet :) Buddha's Sister makes me forget I have feet :) .

Garden Yield per Plant – We yielded 6.4 ounces off two plants

I like this plant quite a bit and have 10 nice fat clones getting ready to hit veg in about two weeks. This one has taken a permanent spot in my stable.

In veg all plants showed extreme indica traits....Fat stems, short structure, Very wide fingerd leaves....There appeared to be two phenotypes from the start with the only real difference in leaf stem length, otherwise pretty much identical....I veged for a total of 40 days from the seed breakin the soils surface....

Upon flowering I had 7 females and 5 males....The Best lookin/smellin/vigorus plant in the garden turned out to be a Male that I used heavily for makin hybrids...The 7 Females fell into what I would consider 2 phenotypes...

Phenotype 1 was what I considered the Reclining Buddha (having grown RB I knew what to look for)...these plants had a larger yeild and slightly fatter buds but the high was more of the sweet cherry flavor with a fairly standard indica high.....there were 3 females worthy of keep-ing but i knew what flavor and high I was lookin for and that wasnt it.....these finished in 55 days....

Phenotype 2 was the AfghaniHawiiian pheno that is what I had in mind when growing these out....It took me four months to choose a keeper mom from this pheno....but the one I kept is amazing.... Much better bud formation not so dense but more calyxed out so there is more area for resin to cover...smaller connecting buds but Much better Quality pieces all the way to the bottom of the plant....

The flavor on these phenos were out of this world....Tangy/tart is an understatement these buds are Tasty...Lemon and grapefruit zest that just overwhelms yer sinus's and palate....Everyone that smokes the Keeper female I have Instantly says "Oh my God, I've never tasted herb like that"....with a lil smack of their tounge to the roof of their mouths....real smooth and pleasing...

The high is first class...Very heady and cerebral for an indica....I made the mistake of having this as my "indica" while on my sativa safari in the dam last year..didnt help me sleep at all..LOL.....Social due to its giddiness, but real powerful.... all my "hard-core" smokin buddies think this strain rules due to the laughing high and real facial numbness it causes....it also sits in my chest quite a bit which helps with the overall relaxation....

flowering took 63 days for these phenotypes.....I prefer to grow this strain as a single stalk Tall plant, flowered at 14" will finish at 36-40 with a very impressive top on the main cola and a nice crown of surrounding lower branches....I normally get about an 1 1/2 z from a plant grown like this...where a "bush style" BS may only yeild 21-28 g.....

Veg Stage:

The germination rate was 4/5. The male to female ratio was 3/4. Clones of all phenotypes grew very healthy and strong.

Phenotype #1- This phenotype in veg I thought would be by far the strongest. WRONG!!! As far as Veg went this phenotype was ridiculously stout and extremely dark green. The vigor of the phenotype was nearly unbelievable. I had great expectations for this one. The plant needs a long time in veg. if you want a bigger bush. At least 9-10 weeks (60-70 days). It ended up being horrible in bloom. It got tall and took on characteristics I did not like. The smoke was much less potent than phenotype #2 as well. It was killed due to undesirable traits and its sister being such a better smoke.

Phenotype #2- This phenotype was also very vigorous, and was stout and dark green as well. The other phenotype seemed to grow a little faster (believe it or not) than this one. The veg period for this one was about 8-9 weeks (55-65 days) for a fat bush. It smelled in veg which I did not notice with her sisters.

Phenotype #3 - Killed due to lack of vigor compared to her sisters.

Bloom stage:

Phenotype # 2- It ended being an excellent phenotype. This strain is great for indoors and outdoors. The smell was deep Indica and Afghani. Don't expect a quick bloom though. This is a lager for an Indica dom. phenotype. Expect 10.5-11.5 weeks (75-80 days) for fully matured buds. The smell can get strong so if that's a problem here is you're warning. You can expect a 3-4 ounces yield (no co2). The leaves are covered (I MEAN COVERED) in crystals. I have never seen a plant with such a large THC resin production in any strain. The calyxes get very thick and ap- pear brown due to the intense resins all over the buds. The buds are only hard because they are absolutely caked with trichomes. The plants color takes on that deep dark green Indica color.

Final evaluation:

It's a very nice strain. I have always been a fan of Afghani. White Rhino is one of my favorites. So I knew I would like the AD. Not to mention the fact that Soma has some of the finest genetics in the world. So you can always expect a winner with his stock. The high was not overpowering though. As an Indica lover I expect super hard hitting smoke from my Indicas. The high is nice though, this strain is more about the taste and how long the high last. If you love that thick deep flavor from the Afghani then you will love the AD. The high is not strong, but it does last for quite a while. If you love Afghanis then I would definitely recommend the AD. Also if you need a bubble hash producer this is my number one candidate for it. AD was well worth the money.

WARNING: DO NOT SMOKE DURING THE DAY (AD is also known to me and my friend as the sleep weed) It is excellent for sleeping.

(mother pheno)- This pheno was 5 weeks in veg for a nice size plant. Also very easy to make clones from.

Bloom Stage:

Hope you have some patients because your going to need them on this strain. Like I said before about Soma's strains good things come to those who wait. Well hope you got a lot of time. This is a great strain though. The smell in bloom is very unique. The yield is less then you would expect for the long wait. It yields 3-4 ounces (no co2) per 4-5 foot plant. Give this plant room because all phenos you get will need it. Grows exactly like what you would expect from a dominant haze plant. Flowers dont really even form till 4-5 weeks. Maturation is a very slow process. If you watch it day by day it will drive you mad. Its best just to forget about it being done anytime soon. The last 7-8 weeks if bloom trichomes start to cover the buds everywhere. By week 10-11 the nugs are completely coated with trichomes. They glisten when you look at them. The calyx finally start to swell at about week 10-11 too. By week 14 they really plump up. Then finally at week 15 the plant is done.

Final Assessment:

The apperance of the bud is very dark almost golden. The nugs glisten with trichomes. The smell is very distinct very hazey with hints of the mountains and tropical fruit/pine. A very hard hitting haze straight to the head. Does not last all that long , but is still very strong. It is a great strain , but will test your patience. The yield may be a issue too, because you will have to leave it in bloom much longer then other strains. If you got the time and room its a great grow.

Big Kahuna is a good plant for first time grower's, it doesn't branch out too much and has a very large top bud. The smell is very skunky and needs very good smell control in your growing and drying rooms. The flowering time is 8 to 9 weeks. It needs good ventilation as the top bud is very dense and can get mold on the inside, with proper ventilation it does just fine. Strong skunky aroma and flavor. Mellow high.

Grower Report

February, 004

This was a replacement. Thank you Soma for sending me new seeds. The first ones didn't germ. I had a low germ rate again. One out of 5 sprouted, and it was a female. It vegged for around 4 weeks. Towards the end of veg, I had to kill a plant to make more room for flowering. It was either Big Kahuna or my trusty NL. I kept BK because I really wanted to see what it was all about.

At the onset of 12/12, this plant was about 4 feet tall. It looked like a hemp strain. I pinched it several times, but it wasn't looking like any other strain in the room. It was extremely tall and lanky, and my friend and I kept joking that we were going to be able to make plenty of paper once it was mature. Soma describes this strain as having one main cola, with little side branching. This plants characteristics could not have been further from that description. We renamed it "the wreck" because it was completely out of control. Weak, lengthy brances all over the place. We used 4 or 5 stakes and who knows how many feet of tying material to hold them all up. Soma also says Lavendar does little branching, and while my Lavendar isn't stretchy or a mess like my BK was, Lavendar DOES branch out a lot. In fact, I crossed it with another strain specifically to GET more branching, and it worked beautifully. In the case of BK, the branching is a problem. With Lavendar, the branching is within control and really adds to the yield, so with THAT strain, it's a very cool thing.

Prior to flower formation, I almost regretted not killing it. But then the flowers began to form. I could tell right off that this strain was going to be EXTREMELY resinous - more so than any of my other high resin strains. It began to look like some amazing bud was forming on this girl, and the buds were everywhere. While they were growing into rather tight little nuggets, I don't think any of the colas were more than a few inches long.

We pushed the plant to about 65 days, but it could have been taken at 50 or so. I waited for a more amber color in the triches, hoping for a more relaxing medicine.

The plant smelled wonderful. Soma says "smells like a dead skunk"... and while I've smelled meds that are far more skunky, it did smell like skunk - the sweet kind, not the pungent kind. We anticipated that this would be the best tasting smoke in the room. It was up against Soma Lavendar (another on that didn't turn out like Soma says... NO purple in any of them at all - but the best tasting smoke I've got growing for sure!), NL, Green Giant, and an NL x Lavendar hybrid. I thought surely it would knock them all out in flavor. I was very disappointed. Have you ever smelled a food that was so aromatic you could not WAIT to taste it, only to have it taste bland and nothing like what it smelled like? Well, that's what I got. I will admit that I only did a short 10 day cool air (hanging plant in the dark) cure. I know that a 4-6 week proper cure would improve this strains flavor... but none of my other strains need a 4-6 week cure to at least have a great taste. Sure, the proper jar cure makes any strain improve so many different ways, but good smoke always tastes semi-good (even in a short cure) providing you don't heat it to make it dry out. Big Kahuna just didn't taste like much. It is smooth, and pleasant, but it's really hard to decide what you are tasting. It's just bland - that's what it comes down to. I cloned the flowering plant to make sure I didn't lose it, but now I'm not too worried about holding on to this strain. Bag appeal is A++++, LOTS and LOTS of resin, and the smell?? IT KICKS ASS. But again, the flavor just isn't really there. The yield was decent (about 130 grams dry), but not so great when you consider that this plant took up the space of two NL's in order to get that 4 or so ounces. I wonder if BK is just an unstable strain, and I got a wierd pheno. Ya never know. I've always wondered the same thing about my Soma Lavendar... Soma says that one doesn't branch out much - wrong! it totally does.. and everyone else's looks totally different from mine and usually gets the purps. My other strains look just like other people's work, so this is not a result of bad gardening. I know what I'm doing... trust me. I will give this more cure time and see if it get's better, but I doubt I will ever grow it again.

Kahuna from Soma Seeds

From: Soma Seeds

Source Description

One of Soma's favorite strains, Kahuna is a 4-way cross that brings together a wide set of influences for a complex high. Soma recently renamed his Soma #9 strain Kahuna, which is a Hawaiian title for a religious or spiritual leader that literally means "Keeper of the Secret." The Kahuna variety has both tropical influences in its parentage, and spiritually attuning effects when used. A medium-sized plant, Kahuna produces few side branches and a top bud that will impress you with its length and density. Due to the big, tight buds, conditions must be tended carefully for this variety. For indoor gardens, attention to humidity levels is key for mature buds that are mold-free. While recommended for indoors where variables can be controlled, outdoor growing is possible in reliably dry climates, although an unseasonably rainy season could ruin the promising look of these thick buds with insidious mold. When Kahuna's proper conditions are met, the yield potential is fantastic, offering a harvest of up to 500 g per square meter in a standard sea of green. This variety has shaken a little pepper into an otherwise sweet-tasting puff. . very sweet smelling variety with a powerful cerebral high that invites creativity. This is great daytime pot, complementary to most introspective activities, and comfortable for socializing with colleagues and friends. Kahuna offers medicinally valuable properties for many conditions without interfering with quality and clarity of one's thought.

My Kahuna grow consisted of three hermaphrodites that were apparently the result of an f2 feminized seed experiment. Note that these seeds were donated and created through pollination by an OG member and did not come directly from Soma Seeds.

Oh well, these things happen in our world and as a result I feel it is impossible to accurately and fairly evaluate this strain based on this grow. With that in mind, I will comment on areas that I feel qualified to report upon.

Shared physical traits:

Although all three plants seemed uniform in height, structure, node spacing, etc., they all produced uniquely shaped and colored leaves and buds.

Two phenotypes appeared that looked very different. One had dark orange leaves and purple buds late in flower, and the other had light green leaves with copious red hairs emerging from burnt orange colored calyxes. The finished bud smoked and tasted quite different as well.

The three plants were fairly compact and were easily the smallest plants in the room despite a very vigorous period in veg and all the pampering I could give. For four-foot Indica doms, there were relatively few side branches and the majority of the bud sites were focused around the enormous colas that exceeded 20? in height.

Node spacing averaged 4-6 inches for both phenos. Due to the large colas and limited branches, this strain is a natural for SOG style grows and therefore I would recommend against topping this strain. The plants reached sexual ?confusion? at 4 weeks from seed, and were the first plants to show sexual maturity of the four strains.

During 12/12, they stretched an average of 34?, so plan your flowering photoperiod to start when they are relatively short. I flowered at 11?, 11? and 17? and the plants finished at 44?, 46? and 49?.

This strain did very well in hydro, showing stress only when transplanted into the bubbling buckets. After recovering, they did exceptionally well with no further problems other than nutrient sensitivity.

Germination/Vegetation

Germination was 3 for 3, and I had vigorous taproots within 24 hours using the paper towel method. The seedlings seemed sluggish and I worried about losing a few of them initially, but they picked up steam and eventually caught up and passed the others in maturity.

Of all the strains I grew this time out, the Kahunas were by far the most sensitive towards nutrient over/under feeding. I lowered the nutes twice to prevent further leaf scarring and they seemed happiest at 450 PPM for veg and 600 PPM in flower. Because of this and their sexual orientation, I moved them to their own environment and was able to tailor their nutrients to their specific needs. Keep this in mind if you plan to grow this strain with other less particular strains.

Watch them closely during the seedling stage or you could easily cook their fan leaves.

Highgrade's Formula was a bit too much for these ladies.

Flowering:

Initially I plucked all of the visible ?appendages?, and was able to prevent mass seeding of the bud. Still, there were several seeds that appeared in all three of the plants. Due to the seeding I will not include the yield, as I assume that it would be much, much higher, especially when considering the size of the enormous colas.

Phenotypes:

There were two phenotypes, both were Indica Dominant and similar in shape and build. One however, was initially much more vigorous and finished with the highest yield.

Pheno #1:

The first pheno was the tallest and turned a very pretty orange color late in flower. The buds were light ? dk. Green, and were very small.

Odor was strong throughout and I enlisted heavy-duty odor containment in the final month of flower. The smell is hard to describe, somewhat spicy, almost pepper-like. Bumping these plants late in flower will shower you with an eye-watering stench that will really bowl you over. Man, what stinky girls they were, not for the meek of heart..

Yield was the best on this pheno, which says little, considering I harvested them about ten days early and they were seeded hermies, to boot.

Color: dark green leaves that turn red and orange late in flower. Moderate standing resin on buds.

Beauty: 10, Very pretty, fall-like leaf coloring late in flower. Buds are dark green with bright red hairs.

Ease of Grow: 7, touchy nutrient wise, best to keep it in a one strain grow (if grown in a shared environment - hydro).

Smell: 9, very stinky. Early on like a wet litter box, later peppery and spicy.

Yield: N/A

Smoke Report:

This is the most unusual tasting and smelling bud I have smoked in a while. From the moment you unscrew the jar, you know this isn't your run of the mill, typical herb. After smoking nothing but fruity strains for the last year, it was nice to try something different ? a lot different..

The nugs are very attractive and are medium in density. The smell is very chemical with a faint pine/spice smell when smoked. The taste is fantastic! The smoke is very smooth, almost like a Sativa. The sweet peppery taste is very unique and pleasing. The after taste is unusual as well and will lead you to find some liquid refreshment in a hurry. Cottonmouth city, this one..

Totally cerebral, superhero high with a motivating and inquisitive buzz that will keep you thinking out of the box ? for about 4 hours!

Potency: 8, good for daytime activities.

Taste: 8, very unique and a good change of pace.

High: 8, excellent daytime or wake-n-bake buzz.

Desirability: 8, A great MJ strain, period.

Social Liability: 0, no physical impairment.

Paranoia: 0, none.

Friend Maker: 8, Very fun weed that encourages depth of thought.

Pheno #2:

This particular plant had light green leaves and reddish-purple buds. The buds were immature on this pheno, more so than the previous, so any comments here are superficial in nature.

Although there was a seemingly endless amount of bud sites on this plant, in the end it yielded the least, due to seeding and immaturity. Because of this, I am unable to predict what a realistic yield would have been from a ?straight? female.

The buds were very pretty with dark purple and red hues throughout. I wish I'd seen them at full maturity, as I'm sure they would be breathtaking. The buds had lots of visible trichomes and they were very sticky as a result.

Beauty: 10, flowers start out pink and gradually turn dark red, curing to purple.

Ease of Grow: 7, as above, don?t over do it on the nutrients.

Smell: 9, stinky, stinky and stinky.

Yield: N/A.

Smoke Report:

Very airy buds that burn up quickly to a fine white ash. Smell is like incense, very sweet and enjoyable. Not for public consumption, however..

A delicious tasting herb that really doesn?t remind me of anything in particular, but there is a definite tropical influence added to an overpowering earthy/spice flavor that will keep you smiling.

The high hits fast and is much more mentally taxing than the previous smoke. Not really distracting, but it tends to make you scramble to achieve basic solutions to even the least complex of problems. Not a good choice before competing on Jeopardy, or calculating a tip for that matter..

Potency: 7, keeps me from getting much accomplished..

Taste: 8, interesting, yet strangely familiar.

High: 8, 2 hours of mostly harmless confusion.

Desirability: 8, Not too bad at all.

Social Liability: 5, a pounding high with medium to high mental impairment.

Paranoia: 0, none.

Friend Maker: 8, Fun, yet confusing and time wasting. Energy vacuum.

Summary:

I was very disappointed with the hermie outcome and honestly feel like I need to do another grow to get a good look at this strain. I was impressed with the uniformity and consistency. All of the plants looked identical until the last month of 12/12. The coloring on both phenos was very attractive and the finished bud smokes great and looks very appealing.

I am sure Kahuna will become a favorite of whoever grows it. The unique appearance, smell and flavor combine to make a very high quality bud that offers a good smoke in a small to medium sized Indica.

The plants were harvested at 56 days, which was approximately 10 days early, in my opinion Figure on 63 ? 68 days for maturity.

Conclusion: If you are looking for a unique change from the fruity type strains that seem to dominate these days, this is a good choice.

*can shoot to tall heights when allowed an extended vegetation period before being placed into the flowering phase. If grown in a sea of green, Soma recommends a shortening the veg cycle in order to control the height. This strain will also do well as a multi-branched plant. Outdoors, this variety can thrive in a most temperate zones, although arid climates known for their rich agricultural promise are of course optimal. Soma #10 has a flavor that is similar to Afghani hash, producing a captivating high that circulates through every chakra. This strain will stretch out on you if you're not careful. I veged with 1000W halide and bloomed with 2000Ws sodium. Most of my room was filled with NL. This was an experiment. My first SOMA Lav seeds had a low germination, but I was given a replacement from SD. New ones did much better. I only grew two of them to maturity out of the 7 that sprouted, both female of course. One male from the seven was used to collect pollen, the rest were let go. These two females looked nearly identical, with one putting on a little more resin. Overall a super smoke. Flavor and smell were top notch. I prefer short, bushy plants and Lavendar is NOT one of them, but it's a must if you love great flavor and relaxing body medicine.

One note, none of it turned purple. Most leaves turned bright yellow a couple weeks before harvest, quite the opposite of what I expected in that area. It was hotter than hell in my town during this crop, and I had to use lots of AC to keep the room cool. I have a hard time believing there was any N problem, but I suppose it's always possible. I take a lot of time to mix my organic soil with lots of good stuff so I think it's likely that the cool temps were to blame for no purple. I could very well be wrong though. I'll be trying again this winter when it's not important to cool the room off so much.

Overall, I'd say get yourself some Lavendar, it's great smoke.

TOP NOTCH!!!

Germination was 5/5. 4/5 was the female to male ratio. I had to different phenos one that seemed more indica dom. and one that was very sativa dom. I choose to keep them both. Even though after blooming them I prefer the Sativa dom. Pheno. The fastest veging strain I have ever grown. It even smells in veg. . The vigor is ridiculous. It is they most healthy plant I have ever seen Veg. next to only the Afghan delight and Free Tibet. In 5-6 weeks you should have a great plant that should yield well. I could not be more happy with this plant in veg.

Bloom Stage:

People say good things come to those who wait. Growing many Soma strains you will learn that. The NYCD is no different . It is easily a 10-11 week strain. Depending on phenotype even longer. I choose to use the Sativa dom pheno as my mother. It is very strong and vigorous. The nugs are HUGE. You will need to support the plant due to the weight of the nugs. It yields 5-6 ounces (no co2) on a nice size 4-5 foot plant. Be careful to give it space it grows decieveingly fast. If smell is a issue might want to be careful, because this strain smells. The smell is odd though smells real sour not real dank smelling.

Final Assessment:

The taste is super top notch. This was one of the many high points of this weed. Smooth and sour/tangerine taste. It is quite unique. The Smell of NYCD was the best smelling weed I have every smelt. Wonderful smell of sour Tangerines. Like a sour tropical candy. It looked very good as well. Sugar coated nuggets. Very nice looking stuff. The High is very intense and strong. One of my favorites and will always have a place in my garden. The NYCD is one of the best strains I have ever grown. Many props go out to Soma for his stellar genetics. The yield of the plant when grown fully mature is very good 5-6 ounces (no co2). The Buds and smoke are top quality. I recommend this strain highly.

NYCD is a cross of a Mexican Sativa and an Afghani. I germed 4 seeds and got 2 nice females. These plants are a breeze to grow. They do get a little top heavy and may require some staking as one of mine did. This is an excellent yeilding strain. The buds have a Sativa look but they are huge and dense. I harvested at 75 days. The high is excellent, a little more to the Sativa side but very potent. I love the flavor of this stuff. It's kind of like lemon pine-sol. The hash is also excellent.

My baby's momma was raised in the swamplands to be a hearty & vigorous grower. She apparently passed these traits onto my little girl. While I witnessed the Diesel in varying degrees of indica/sativa mix, I chose the Indica dom to be mine. Out of the 10 beans germed, all 10 popped with only 2 males.

During veg growth, I kept her short & squat, trimming & FIMming as we went along. Veg growth was approx. 45 days of quick & vigorous growth. She had a nice odor during veg. Very mild but nice indeed. A snap to grow & she seemed to like her soil very dry & heavily ferted. I used a mixture of chemical & organics during all stages but for veg I used a tea from seaweed extract, fish emulsion & alfalfa meal in Hydrogen peroxide coupled with Superthrive & a dash of Peter's 20 20 20.

The transition was sketchy for me as I tended to under do the N & Ph, hence encountering issues. With a full flush & repot complete with super triple phosphate & blood meal, she turned around within a couple of days. Leaves began to regain color & all looked well for her. The hairs sprung up nicely and in the last week to week & a half, she really packed on the bud weight. As the lights go off, you may need to double up on your carbon scrubbers if smell is an issue. She tends to exhale big and really stink up the room with lemony sour goodness. I pulled her @ 74 days to maintain a bit of the head high while still getting the couchlock I need for the pain.

Overall I would suggest this plant to anyone, especially a novice grower. I have tried many strains and, user error aside, this was a very easy, low maintenance plant to grow. It yielded well (127g wet, 95g dry) grew quickly & kept me really really stoned for quite some time.

The NYCD that we have used for the last two years is one GORGEOUS lady!!!!

The odor is pretty out of control, so BE PREPARED. The smell is like that of lemoney and fuely... As it should be! This particular pheno also has some skunkiness to the odor as well.

Another benefit of this particular pheno is that it is all mature by 60 days. This being JUST before ambering ON the plant - post harvest they seem to "amber" up .

The growth style for the buds has been described as "dragon tails". They are usually tall spires of calyxs that "string" off the main stem. The stems CAN be rather thin on some clones that we've done - so occasionally tying is needed to support the mature buds.

We used an all-organic feeding regiment consisting of metanaturals complete line of ferts, as well as Liquid Karma, and MonstaBud. PH was consistantly around 7.

The overall ROOM TEMP and CO2 saturation was responsible for the excellent results - in addition to the MonstaBud.

This smoke is sitting on the top of my personal list of favorites, unknowing to readers - that says quite a bit!!!! I've smoked many of the finest available, and this diesel is just straight up EXTREME!!!! Enjoy!!!!

P.S. If you need to remain SMELLING clean in public - hold off on smoking these ladies... They're quite pungent.

August, 2005

I had three seeds, 2 sprouted and both were female. Growth was very slow, but plants were very strong, resisted heat well. Vegged for about 4

weeks total starting from seed. Had two phenotypes

First pheno: Yielded way less , pieces were smaller and tighter, didnt start to spiral or as I like to call it "Nipple". Plant was a lighter green, and was more sensitive than the other. End result tasted amazing.

Pheno #2: Very stong beautiful uniform plant. Dark green leaves, very resistant to heat and pests, towards the end the buds got so heavy that they were all leaning over. Very spirally buds, beautiful to look at and to smell. While it was on the plant I thought to myself "This is the one!"

End result: Buds were much looser than expected, really didnt seem like they would of been from looking at the plant. Also dried out alot darker than I thought. still tasted ok, but a little dry I found. Im going to try 1 maybe 2 plants next time under the same wattage (400). It was still a pleasure to grow and smoke.

October, 2003

VEG: 18 hours on 6 hours off

Germed two seeds in damp tissue . 100% germination , both were female. vegged in soil with 20 % perlite under 110 w compact flores . The seedlings remained nice and compact during veg with very short internodal length. when topped the side branching goes crazy. This strain is excellent for scrog . Took 2 clones off each plant which rooted easily in 1 inch plastic baskets filled with soil/perlite mix, in a small propergator, took about 10 days for roots to show. Clones vegged easily , although i noticed they showed more sativa traits due to genetic maturation and were therefore more open in structure than the seedlings. not a problem, once topped the clones bushed out nicely.

Flower: 12/12 (250 w hps)

both plants looked Very similar pheno 1:slightly longer internodal length and a shade lighter colour, the leaves on this pheno were slightly wider during veg and early flower . This pheno was faster (i harvest this one about day 45 -47)

pheno 2: darker, shorter internodal length, slightly longer flowering.

both plants developed buds that were small initialy but heavily frosted, even the lower buds are loaded with frosty trichomes. The bud leaves are also covered , especially at the edges, i wish my camera could pick this up better. stems can be thin and bendy and mine needed supporting under the weight of the buds, a screen would be ideal.

Smell increased during late flower to a light sweet citrus aroma.

smoke report :

both phenos produced crystally buds with an intense citrus taste the difference was mainly in the highs...

pheno 1: what struck me about this high was how balanced it is....like certain high frequencies turned to full volume , with no distortion ...if that makes sense...im prone to parania , but there was none of that going on , although i realised loads of jobs i hadn't done , worked out the best way to do them and did it! very creative and energising. Potent..and Low tolerance ..was busy for weeks pheno 2: As above , but with a slight spacey stoney edge to it , a little skunky....a little parania sometimes .

Smell during flowering is not bad at all but kinda like sweet flowery smell.

From seed expect to wait at least 50-60 days to maturity.

From clone I can get her done in an easy 40-45 days of 12/12 with about 80% cloudy trichs.

All in all she is GREAT daytime smoke that never has a come down and is kind of like a cup of coffee.

Joints taste like juicy fruit gum and are tasty all the way to the roach.

Bubble hash is a must with this plant as she will have trichs on some larger fan leafs all the way to the tips.

Very easy to grow! Took a LOT of abuse. Over/underfed everything about her. She kept going every time. I would have clones but inexperience in cloning crushed that aspiration. Lower branches actually reached out for light! Very Christmas tree looking. Excellent for SCROG. I was very squeamish about nutes as I burned her early, so I was light on nutes the whole grow. Overall, very easy grow, again. She grew herself really.

SMOKE :

WOW! One of those wake up, smoke a bowl and everything's all good until lunchtime. Very productive high. Came up with some very good ideas on Apollo 11 G4! Tasted like some kind of fruity, airy... Stuff! The hash I made from the trim was out of this world!

Seeds popped easily using the paper towel method. Transferred to propagator for a week - then transferred to 3 inch pots and put under 110w fluorescent lights.

Plants were all short and stocky with the nodes coming so tightly packed together. The stems and stalks are bendy and will put up with a lot of punishment and so are ideal for training ruthlessly. I had to as I was growing in a cupboard. Good for cupboard and general stealth grows. Vegged longer than planned (7 weeks), still hadn't shown sex by this time so put all 5 plants into flower. A week later 2 showed female signs, the rest were binned.

The girls were trained heavily and topped twice during growing and have to say they showed no negative signs at all

Smell was only minimal even when flowering - but don't knock them, they'll stink for a bit.

I was impressed with the rate of flowering. The buds were quite impressive after just 1 month of flowering, they filled out nicely with the second month.

Ideal for curious minds & even better for curious minds on road trips & the appeal of this craft lies in her ability to be profoundly energizing without the jittery discomfort of paranoia or the paranoid discomfort of being jittery.*

Ideal for finding your car keys or figuring out where your life went wrong, the utility of this plant is so vast that it is virtually uncharted. Brainiacs & severely impaired bongheads & mortals & demi-gods alike will be forever changed after experiencing the happy glow of her touch. If the immaculate, long-lasting and one-of-a-kind buzz isn't enough to whet your appetite, consider the *absurdly* short 50-day photoperiod. Still, because of its profundity, once growers have a taste of Apollo 11 G4, they, like the rest of us, will ache for an even shorter time on the launch pad. Welcome to the club.

Apollo 11 G4's were extremely easy to cultivate with little maintenance needed. A11 took every watering/feeding without showing any sign of losing health. If you can keep the Ph stable this plant will be one of the easiest to grow. For a sativa the 55-56 days to flower is awesome. Yield is average to above average I would say. I grew in some what SOG style setup (didn't push the apical dominant growth in other words I left them branch to their desire filling in all available space) using 2gallon grow bags with the entire line of Fox Farms fertilizers. I narrowed my selection down to a very sweet lemony girl with insane branching. No need to top this strain at all as it will provide branch after branch and fill in any space given to it. The clones off this mother yielded a good 60-70 grams per sq foot and it had to be some of the most tastiest and potent bud I have had the enjoyment of smoking. Find a vaporizer if you can as the taste is outta this world right to the end of pack.

These seeds were given me by Rezdog, a Brothers Grim Apollo11 crossed with Dutchflowers Apollo13 TRIP brings and excellent combination of Haze, and an euphoric-like high.

They were grown out of an organic/soiless mixture consisting of perlite, worm castings, fert-release soil (sams choice), bark, blood meal, bat guano, dolomite lime and bone meal was used in flowering. The growth was very strong in the first week of flowering, right in the middle of flowering they shot up like rockets. The plant can be very lanky, like a heavy sativa, but the bud structure is very dense and compact like an Indica. The leaves are very sativa like in structure, very long-style body with long branches and healthy stem size. In the middle of flowering the colas can be very large and pear shaped, full of crystals and a dark-green calyxes covers as a background for the shiny-white trichomes glistening all over. The plant can smell very strong, so I suggest an ionizer or some sort of charcoal filter to cover the smell.. it has a very strong haze smell, kind of a chronic fruit smell in late flowering.

All plants were pretty much the same in size and structure overall, very little characteristics between plants. Overall I would say this is a stable strain with few phenotype characteristics.

The first time I smoked a 11 x a 13 I instantly knew that it was special, the quality of the high automatically heightens every sense (smell, taste, sound, visual etc.). Like a high quality haze would, this ultimately has sativa qualities, I sense very little Indica dominance in this strain. Before this strain I have never had the opportunity to grow the Grims Brothers Apollo 11 or any cross breeds of Apollo, so this high is new to me. I never felt this high impact of quality potency before in a strain. The high is very relaxing, VERY energetic, like I said before it heightens senses in every way. I wouldn't classify this as a medical strain, more like an upbeat party high, like with any sativa strain. If your looking for a HEAVY, heady stash.. go for the Apollos Trip!

If you're a rookie smoker there is not a doubt in my mind that if you take one hit, you will instantly feel high and start to peak very fast after a few more. This is the thing i like about apollos trip, you know with some indicas it takes 15 minutes for the high to kick in.. we call that "creeper bud" which is really shitty bud if you ask me. But apollos trip is far from that, it acts very quick and hits you powerfully, if your a rookie stoner or a vet..

Once i took one bong rip, it was very clear that my body is TKO but my brain was racing with ideas and visuals hard to describe. The high can vary from mild couchlock to trippy, in my opinion it all depends on enviornment.. i found this facinating when on heavy doses of haze plants from silver haze, super silver haze, aussie bush, dutch sativas, and overall heavy haze dominant strains.

I hate to use the above format because it cannot clearly describe the phenotype I have. It grows in a very indica pattern, short and bushy, but when flipped, can get rather tall, yet still yield decently well.

If given more light, they would've surely been shorter and yielded much more. However, with little light, the worst of the 2 yielded around 2 ounces, at around 24" tall. They appear to take a long time in flower, but around day 40 they start to plump and turn, quick.

Mine went from solid white to done in around 10 days, and oh man was it done. Possibly could've gone longer, but I actually found male bananas, telling me that it was time. I had to keep the ppm low because some of the widows were getting toasted, but this lady was asking for lots more. The pistils aren't really brown or red, more of a pink orange and the bag appeal is phenomenal.

Under fluorescent light, these nuggets shine like pearls. The potency, as far as I have sampled, is the strongest. However, it does not stick you to your recliner. All senses are heightened, and a sativa head high soars in, all the while with the indica body numbness. Thought processes are accelerated and things seem so clear, so obvious.

-Started from clones from a healthy mother with smaller size attributes but very sturdy growth pattern.

-very fast growth in Veg, vegged for 3 weeks under 400 watt metal halide in an aeroponic setup. averaged an inch per day growth, little to no smell in veg. loved nutrients, easy grower without problems. used distilled water and pH stayed balanced without adjustment.

-Leaves were long sativa like in appearance, this strain showed sex in 3-4 weeks of veg before I cloned it. Internode spacing was not to my liking on this strain or pheno. But it is after all a sativa dominant strain.

-This plant is beautiful, and a hardy grower. Good for stealth grow, when I switched to 12/12 HPS, smell was fruity and dank but minimal.

-After the switch to 12/12, flowers did not begin to grow for 10 days.

-Buds looked fat and beautiful while flowering and trichs got cloudy after 45 days, I could have let them go longer but I am impatient.

-Cut them at day 45 and hung them for a week, after the dry I came out with 6 oz dry weight from 5 scrogged plants or 1.2 oz per plant at 400 watts. Not a great yield, but okay for a 400 I guess in my experience.

February, 003

Some background on this strain, it is BCGA Killer Queen X Grimm's DTC99. Which makes it a Cindy99 dom cross (yumm) with a little G-13 and Thai thrown in ta boot. Now there are a few reasons I picked this pack for my next grow -

1. I had a very good grow with Rez's Willie 'D'.....so good in fact that it was the first new strain to make it into my Top5 in almost a year. So I knew that Reservoir Seeds had good strains from my previous experience

2. I need more Sativa in my diet I've got a lot of hard hitting Indy dom crosses in my collection, I'm looking to add more Sativa kick to my rotation.

3. I am a big fan of the original BCGA KQ.....

Anyway enough with the back-story....on with the show. I broke open my pack to find that it was like two packs in one, as 16 seeds were contained inside I picked 1/2 dozen of the best looking seeds (they were all dark and uniform in size so that was easy) and germed them using the paper towel method. 48 hours later I had 6 visible tap roots showing. I planted in RW starter cubes w/ coco fiber used to fill in the hole.

5/6 sprouted (the one that didn't come up did show about 3 days later but was culled for being slow). 1 more was dumped because it stretched like mad, leaving me 4 sprouts to put into veg.

One month in veg (Veg started on 6-23) and they are looking very good. One more plant was tossed as it lacked the vigor that I require. So I have three BR's left to choose from. BR's #1 & 2 are similar phenos showing great hybrid vigor, and a sativa dominate leaf structure. BR #3 is more squat and compact, w/ a bush like appearance. BR #1 is still my fav, although #2 looks like a carbon copy, #1 had more vigor out of the gate. #3 looks like its on the way out It developed some type of stem mutation. The stem which was quite thick started to flatten out, and then divided itself into two tops. I've had this happen before and the resulting plant has been a male 5/6 times. The toxicity caused by the CytoGrow is all cleared up and new growth is nice and compact, just like I like it. I'm guessin another week or two and I'll have 'um sexed, cloned and ready for the flower room. These puppies moved along quickly.

BR No1&2 I guessed were girls and No3 I guessed male due to the stem deformity. Well I was right on No1.. she's a lady and my pick for a mother should I choose to keep this one around. No2 is a male.... a very handsome one at that.... but alas I have no need for BR pollen, so Chop-Chop-Chop, "Timber" and No3 recovered well from the early runtism and stem split, filling in nicely. She was the first to start alternating nodes and is clearly a different pheno than No1&2.

A few caveats to consider if you grow the BottleRockets;

1. You need some space..... The only reason I might not keep the BR around is that it is huge! Not a good plant for SOG as it is a true bush, growing as wide as it is tall, I'll have to drop some other clones to make sure they have enough room.

2. This strain stinks!!! BR is one of those rare strains that start to produce odor as soon as the plant matures (in veg), just one week into flower and I can already smell them outside of my flower room. I have half a dozen OG Kush less than a week away from finishing and they don't smell nearly as bad. If the final smoke is good, this won't be an issue for me... but for others it could be.

Other than that it has proven that it is easy to clone and not to picky about what you feed 'um.

Good news.... my eye for early sexing seems to work pretty well..... bad news..... BR #3 is a male leaving me a lone Bottle Rocket to flower. Now that would be sad news, if she wasn't such a beautiful girl The smell has sweetened.... not as BO'ish, can't wait to get a wiff when in a couple of more weeks. If she grows more than a foot more, I'm going to have to take her out of the table and rig some DWC bucket for her on the floor.... needless to say her clones will be flowered much shorter.

Well doesn't look like I'll have to do anything special for the Bottle Rocket. She finished her stretch at the 4' mark, so I didn't have to move her off the table. Lots of lower branches.... had to prune a few so I don't end up with a bunch of stems.

This girl is a beast, and moving her in and out of the tray is no easy task. I was able to wrestle her out of her hole and snap a few shots. I can say this for her.... she likes to eat..... I had to change my rez a week early as she sucked the nutes right up, not to mention the water. She has done very well considering the heat issues I've had as of late... my flower room has been averaging 85F daytime temps and only 80F night now that that has passed she should get huge.

Well my Bottle Rocket is firmly planted in my tray. Root mass is too large to allow me to move her till harvest time, so I'll have to make due with some flower room shots taken just before lights on. She is really startin to pack it on, gettin nice and thick. Very thick stem, no problem holding itself up, I've added support just to keep it from leaning over in her small net pot (1gal). I've also strung the lower branches together to make her a little more compact and get some of the lowers closer to the light.... it seems to be workin well. She is a very easy sativa dom to work with, best I've had in years, I had a Humboldt Haze that was easy to grow, but tasted like shit, I hope this taste as good as it looks.

I'm happy to say she finished inside of 65 days with a very impressive yield. I'd say just shy of 4 OZs when all is said and done. Very easy to trim, with very dense colas, and very little scrimpy popcorn nuggets.... sorry to say I won't be gettin much bubble hash out of this strain. The smell is very exotic on the dry buds (dry only at this point, not cured) a very spicy, rotten tropical fruit smell, that hangs heavy in a room, you won't forget you left the jar open with this stuff. The uncured buds still pack a heavy punch. Very sativa head slam, sending the plus racing. Very good day smoke as it doesn't have too much comedown. I'd rate the high at a 8 on the potency scale, with a duration of stone lasting about 2 hours or so. I'm going to give the buds in the pic a few weeks to cure and report back on them, to see if my opinion has changed.

The beans were acquired via Seedbay. With a 100% germ rate, they were in good condition when they arrived. They were germed in paper towels and then transferred to rockwool, which was placed into soil. Clones were run in DWC.

Two phenos were exhibited, the typical sour fruit tall sativa (grew to be 6 ft) and a slightly bushier, leafier, and squatter skunkier smelling variety, which was labeled as the diesel pheno. The diesel pheno seemed to be ready almost two weeks earlier, around the end of week 9. Both phenos took nearly 3 weeks to show sex from seed, and were almost two weeks faster by clone.

The Sour pheno exhibited a larger column of up to 2 ft in length and was the better yielder, although the quality and buzz of both varieties were nearly identical, only varying noticeably in taste and smell. Second grow was solely clones of the sour pheno, which responded extremely well to an accidental topping early in flo, and would greatly benefit by proper topping in veg for bush style.

The taste in glass is smooth piney sour fruit, and with a cure gives yield to a hint of diesel skunky goodness. When entering a room with a zone, or even a few gees, the occupants immediately react with quips of "Who the f**k didn't shower", etc. Very strong smelling stuff, opening the jar will compromise entire level of house.

The buzz is a heady thought provoking sativa that takes the rider on a wandering trip with an element of body to it. Good for planting on the couch, while not restricting daytime functionality. Not 100% sativa, but damn good and some of the best to come through here for a couple of years. Bag appeal is phenomenal as the frost covered white nugs stick to the inside of a bag; putting them inside a bag is indeed a crime in itself.

stems. The plants stayed extremely healthy throughout the grow.

They were cloned at 8 or 9 weeks and vegetated till 11 weeks. Despite the vigorous growth the plants didn't stretch unmanageably. They were easy to grow and probably would be decent for hydro. They took from 63 to 70 days.

Phenotype #1 stretched the most and had the least odor in veg. At finish, it was earthy and grapefruity, and it is the one I gave away. Pheno #2 had the largest and airiest buds, and stretched the least. It smelled like pineapple candy, tasted very piney-citrus and has a clear, speedy, spacey stone, that can be slightly paranoiac. #2 yielded the best. Phenotype #3 was a cross between phenotype #1 and #2, less stretching than #1 and more than #2. Smelled more sour citrus than phenotype #1 and more grapefruit and earthy than #2. The taste is complex very fuelly with a hashy citrus fruit taste, sometimes like tangerine.

It comes on fast to the head, very euphoric and motivational. I have a hard time sitting still after smoking it. I find myself wandering around the house not knowing what it was I was looking for. All were fairly long lasting in stone and my new favorite daytime smoke.

Sour Diesel BX 1.5

I started 5 seeds and all germinated within a day. Culled one random plant due to space limitations. Veg'd for about a month in the veg chamber using PBP veg formula and some calmag+ at 500-750ppm (.5 conversion). No major issues not many noticeable preflowers at this point so I put them into flowering at just over a foot high.

Ended up with two females. Flowering continued at 700-900ppm PBP flower formula for a few weeks and then switched to soil formula for less N. You can see from the pictures one pheno started out a lot faster (I'll call it the fast plant even though they finished about the same) while the other stretched and stretched, didn't pack on many pistils until the 5th week of flower. Tapered off the nutes weeks 8,9 and straight water week 10.

Both plants had a light sour fruity / diesel fuel smell starting about week 5 and it grew slightly until the end of the 10th week when they were chopped, never massively smelly but could be due to poor growing conditions (a bit hot, 85F+), rated 5 for smell due to this. I cant really describe the smell better than the description in the title, its sour fruit (I thought mostly tangerine type smell) with diesel fuel, the fuel part is like the vapor from a fuel at a gas station, not sure that it smells exactly like fuel or diesel fuel, but its got that vapor appeal, like menthol, ie vics vapor rub.

Rated 5 for ease of growing just because I could never get the plant dialed in, im not the most experienced but can diagnose most issues. Never got the feeding quite right I think, plus the env issues I mentioned, a bit hot. All in all still had a great yeild, the plant just seems slightly picky like most Sativas.

Both plants were harvested near the end of the 10th week, with about 50/50% clear/cloudy trichs. Probably could have went longer.

The faster plant yeilded 3oz and the other 3.5oz. Not bad for 2 seedlings under 400W. You can see from the pictures the bud is very trich laden, but I find it different from say the Cindy I recently grew, its trich laden too but not as sticky. This stuff is stickier than usual and it dries differently then im used to, rock hard rough outer texture.

Dried bud shots are of bud curing about 3 weeks now. The smell is basically the same as when it was growing but there is a hint of spice mixed in there as it cures out it seems. I've dried and cured it quite slowly and its still a bit moist, but very smooth and potent so im ready to give the final smoke report.

Im not going to differentiate the two phenos other than to say what im calling the slower plant seemed to pack on more trichs and hits a bit harder, that is, rushier sativa head hit to start with and very discombobulating the first few sessions (maybe this was due to me being in xxx mood, whatever). Otherwise the taste and high are quite similar.

The taste is basically as described above, same as the smell. Mostly its sour and coats your mouth with this sour fruit type taste for quite a while. Its pretty easy going down, nice and smooth, look out, pretty expansive. Taste level is certainly a 9, im willing to bet I'll edit that to 10 after I grow the clones.

The high has been hard to get a handle on. Im pretty sure the problem was lack of tolerance, coupled with the amazing taste and you want to smoke the stuff all day, not adviseable. Anyhow, there is quite a rush at first when you smoke this weed, sativa energetic rush to the head, this balances out to a nice euphoric head high. Very potent for sure, I give it a 9. Just a few hits keeps me high for many hours.

Hopefully you can tell what pictures are what, ill put up some early flower shots (pay no attention to the short plant on the right it's a blueberry that didn't grow for shit, the other two on the left are: Front: slower SourD, Rear: Faster SourD), some late flower shots and some bud and kiff shots.

A very nice TALL plant, easy to clone, mold resistant, Taste and smell is outstanding...cant really think of anything bad to report.

LOOK at that calyx to leaf ratio...trimming is a dream! Another thing I really like is that resins are really sticky so the gland heads stay attached to the trichomes and dont fall off during drying

Smokes very nice...tastes sooo good down to the roach....VERY POTENT...should come with a WARNING on the seed pack to go easy the first few times...I think because of the great taste I smoked too much the first time and completley forgot about a pan of grease I had left on a hot stove and damn near burned down the house...its funny now!.. but really could have been a bumner in more ways than one. I have been puffin for over thirty years so that is really saying somthing for the potency.

This was my first time working with Sour Diesel genetics and I can now see what all the fuss is about Sour Diesel = Killer stuff .....I can only imagine how killer the original ECSD clone mom must be.
We like this variety so much we bought another pack of SDbx1.5 and a pack of SDbx2.5's to see if we can outdo this particular bx1.5 clone.
This clone won our local Hot Tub Cup 2004 and stands proud in our garden/medicine chest next to Super Silver Haze and Trainwreck.

This grow was a scrog done in promix and perlite with mostly organic ferts (Earth Juice + AN additives). I grew out 5 sour diesel bx 1.5 clones from a mother I grew from seed. She came from a particularly disaster struck pack and was the only survivor.

This strain has a propensity to grow straight up. With plenty of training and the scrog screen she took to multi-cola well. I was very happy with the yield.

The buds packed on a lot of weight late. Very high calyx to leaf ratio. Somewhat orange mature calyxes. Plenty of trichomes and bag appeal. Very firm and dense nugs. Light green color.

The taste was somewhat strong initially as I didn't flush (The clones finished a little sooner than expected). However, a few weeks in the jar and she was magnificent to vape. Grapefruit, sour cream, and sugar or something like that.

The high is very up and motivating. This is an all day smoke for me.

Rez's Sour Queen, is Double Sour Diesel crossed with Killer Queen. Now based on genetics this should be a sativa dom cross, but growth structure makes it appear to be more indica. I'm sure this is a result of the DSD which has a leaf structure straight from the Jurassic period. I germed 6 of these puppies, and I got 6 sprouts... Same as always with Rez's seeds I culled the first up, and the last up. Don't ask me why I do it, but it has always worked for me in the past to give me the most uniform seed plants. Early growth was a bit slow, and I thought that maybe this cross wasn't going to work for me, but I gave them a couple of weeks and now all but one are flourishing. The Sour Queens have taken advantage of their increased space and have really branched out. This plant would do very well in SCROG as it has branches everywhere. They seem to be doing a lot of veg development but not much on the flowers. I'm guessing they should start kicking into production soon. SQ No1 is mammoth. I hope she puts out.

SQ turned out to be a big surprise. I didn't think much of her through the first few weeks. It looked very bushy with small bud sites throughout. I started to think that trimming this plant would be a pain in the butt. But, after removing the fan leaves I was pleased to find rock hard nug formations underneath. The Sour Queen No1 had a dominant central cola and nice smaller buds as well. The No3 was a bush of uniform buds all sugar coated. The last week brought on a change in the smell and appearance of the plant. The smell which had been weak through week 7 took on a strong musty aroma, with more than a hint of chemical smell. I'm thinking this is the DSD taking over. The leaves also turned from dark green, to a purplish-blue color which really makes the trics stand out. These two plants alone almost filled half of the dry room. I really wish I hadn't lost the No1 pheno of this plant, but at least I have more seeds

Sour Queen Smoke Report

I finally made it back with the Smoke Report on Sour Queen from Reservoir Seeds. It has cured for a couple of weeks. Smoking was done over the course of a few days, as it is really hard to write a decent report while high on the SQ. Consumption methods included pipe, bong and vape. Testers included my wife and me (with some of O.G.'s comments as well).

Appearance -

These are some great looking buds. Dark red hairs against a background of dark green to blue leaf. The resin coating is easy to see and makes the buds shine, can you say "Bling-Bling". In the middle between dense and fluffy a quad of the SQ does a good job filling a bag. I'd give it an 8 on bag appeal.

Smell -

Overwhelming, nose busting, stench. Very strong smell of skunk's ass, mixed with rocket fuel, and a hint of pine. Cured buds stink! I brought some to a buddy in a Smelly-Proof bag, and this is the first strain that stunk through the bag. Smell gets a 10.

Taste -

Thank god the taste doesn't match the smell or you couldn't smoke too much of it. Taste is piney, with a dank earthy finish. Somewhat strong tasting, the flavor will stay with you for a while. It gets a 7 for taste.

High/Effect -

Sour Queen is strait up loco weed. You've heard the expression 'Smoke yourself stupid', well one bong load of the SQ and you're there. I don't know if it is the DSD or the G-13 but something in this bud will sap your mental capacity. More than once I started a session with the intent of writing this report only to finish my bong load and zone out for an hour. Not couchlocked mind you, but brainlocked. A lot of scratching my head going "Fuck.... what was I doing?" Effect is quick, and the duration is a solid couple of hours, before your mental faculties return. Needless to say this one is up there on the potency scale, I'd give it a 9.

Overall -

Sour Queen is no joke. It should come with a warning label about operating heavy machinery while under the influence. Not for the novice, or casual smoker, but for the hardcore stoner who doesn't have shit to do.... for a while. Very introspective, may be helpful for those with ADD/ADHD. Other than that can't think of any medical use for this bud; it is strictly recreational. Fantastic yielder, combined with great smell, and devastating high earn this one an 8.

I bought A pack of Reservoir Seeds Speedball from Seeds Direct.

There was 16 seeds in the pack. I lost the first 10 due to mold. Planted the last 6 and 4 were males, 2 females, all six varied in height and growth characteristics. These plants had the most numerous bud sites of any plant I have grown. On the down side, the branches are spindly and weak, and need supported to hold up numerous buds. They expressed great vigor in veg from seed and clone, amazing! The plants showed immediate sensitivity to nutrients and PH, once controlled ,they grew fine.

They were vegetated 11 weeks all together and cloned. They flowered for 55 and 56 days. They were cut down dried for 7 days, jar cured for 2 weeks. It smokes well. The indica phenotype is very rich tasting and when you open the jar it smells like a dank basement{not mold}.When I first hit it,it goes strait to the head and comes on pretty speedy, then creeps into a body numbing stone, with tons of gravity. Very relaxing and pain effective. The Sativa phenotype breaks me out in a sweat on the first or second hit every time. Very speedy and a little paranoiac. Both phenos were super resinous. The high is long lasting for me about 2-3 hours and I smoke every day. There is a lot of diversity in these plants and I can see that it has a lot of potential.

This strain grows fast and hardy. I was worried about internode spacing during the early days, but those internodes turned into complete buds that formed a single large cola, about 3-4" inches X 18" inches in size. The whole plant was only about 22" inches in total, most of which was bud. Overall, this plant has the ability to produce huge buds with a good/very good amount of potency. FireCracker would be an excellent choice for any production line strain without losing the quality status.

The buzz FireCracker produces will last for a few hours and offers an energetic experience. This is NOT a couchlock effect. The smell is a sour and earthy mix, with a touch of citrus. The buds it produced are very tasty for a Sativa and enjoyed for large amounts of smoke. The after effect is very small and, physically, does not leave the lungs and throat feeling charred after a long day of heavy smoke. I really enjoyed growing this heavy producing strain and will do so again, in the near future. Even though this was more of a test run for me, the next time, I will allow more time to be spent for the most optimal yield.

WD is really starting to fill out nicely. It is amazing the amount of bud growth in the last 5 days, and I still have about 30 days left. I'd say the growth structure is a little more indy dom, but the top bud looks just like NYCD, I'm anticipating a very good mix of flavor and high. I can't wait to give it a try. Willie D showed her sex at about 6 1/2 weeks veg, about 4 days after nodes started to alternate, can't ask for any more than that.

There was very little stretching overall. Plant was flowered at 18" and is only 26" at its final height. It looked like a lot of leaves in the first 3-4 weeks of flowering, but now sticky flowers have engulfed most of the leaf leaving a very solid bud structure. When I first inquired about this strain from Rezdog, he assured me that it would yield in the neighborhood of an OZ based on my environment. I'd have to say he was very conservative in that estimation as this plant will easily give me a couple of O's

Smell is comin on strong now. Carbon filter is necessary! Not an overpowering stench, but a very strong smell of lemon pledge is unleashed when brushing against the plant.

I actually made a few mistakes during this grow and the Willie 'D' keep on truckin. I only deal w/ hardy varieties and this one is a lumberjack Not a heavy feeder, not picky about nute levels or PH, and considering it has had to deal w/ some high humidity, I'd also say mold resistant.

Wilma was cut down this morning (day 58)... kinda mixed feelings, I didn't want it to stop growing, but I also want to smoke it All trics were milky and full, w/ a very small percentage going amber. This is the largest single cola I've ever had on a plant - 2.7oz of wet trimmed bud, should be about 25-30g dried That is not including smaller buds which should give me another ounce or so. The buds are dripping resin, had to change gloves twice, because I couldn't let go of them

Ok, buds have dried and cured up. Only problem is I don't have a big phat pile to show you because... I SMOKED IT!!!! Willie 'D' is by far, hands down, no exaggeration, some of the finest weed I have ever toked on. Period, end of story. Willie D did not produce very dense buds, but it was a far above average yielder. I'd have to say that my plant, grown SOG style and finishing at less than 30" produced just shy of two ounces of trimmed, manicured bud. Very respectable, indeed.

The smell of Willie is strong to say the least. In flower odor reduction is necessary, as they will put off a pungent aroma. Smell is very lemon pledge, w/ a sour nose-hair burning finish.

The flavor is unique, although the NYCD taste is very apparent in the smoke; the Williams Wonder adds a slight lemon citrus hue to the pal-ette. Smoke is very smooth, even on freshly dried buds, but also very expansive. You'll have no problems getting it in your lungs, just problems keeping it in. It also does not linger, no ass mouth, like some strong flavored strains leave after your done smokin.

The high is fantastic. Very good mix of indy/sat. The rush of the sativa high hits almost instantly, leaving me a little flushed w/ a racing pulse. But then the Indica kicks in and brings ya back down, but not locked to the couch. It is a very energetic high, I never felt tired or sleepy, even after extended session of WD. It also has no upward limit to the high, each hit took me to a new level of stoned. I'd say this is a very good strain if you have a high tolerance due to extended smoking. Great all day smoke, although I wouldn't toke it if you are planning to go right to sleep, it could keep ya up, with thoughts of "Damn I'm sooooo high".

Overall this is Top5 pot, hell maybe even Top3. Very balanced in all aspects. Head stash for sure, I found it very hard to part w/ even the tiniest morsel, no matter the offer I received. This one has found a permanent home in my garden, you should all consider adding it to yours as well.

The stone is about the same on all. It's a nice strain to be around people on, or watching a game or movie on tv with. It's not a real couch locker for me, but a really nice smooth ride, which makes everything simply wonderful. But definitely smoke made for hangin with friends, and keeping everything sweet & mellow.

Yield did vary on them, some were of course better yielders than others, but most were only average yielding plants. Some were really sativa looking, while others were more indica dom looking, but again the high was pretty much the same all across. Flavor took on a sweet and smooth flavor with a hint of citrus, just very smooth, and not hard on the throat at all. I prefer this smoke in the afternoon, or an the evening when I want to stay up and still do things, but have a nice stone going.

It was fast flowering at 53 days after sexing. Vegged most for around 8 weeks, moderate stretching, nothing that can get out of hand. They're not the tightest nugs, but they do have a nice covering of trichomes. Also they clone easily as well. If growing this strain, and you plan on keeping it, just look for the biggest yielding one, mine happened to be the more sativa looking one for yield anyway.(9 long slender fingers on the fan leaf). Also they clone easily, and do alot better in flowering when from cutting. I should note, give this strain at least 2 grows, one from seed, then the other from cuttings. The cuttings knock it up a notch, and their true potential comes out.

Also was grown in MG potting mix, mixed with castings/perlite. Very easy plant to grow, but not really for commercial growers. Didn't really find any keepers so to say, but I am happy I got to grow it out, overall I am happy with the finish product. Probably a 7 out of 10 all the way down the board on this one, with the exception to the taste, which is an 8.

Overall I was very pleased with this strain. I purchased 1 pack of 10 seeds. I germinated 8 seeds 3 males and 5 females. They're slow vegging and branching. Sagarmatha recommends flowering between 4 and 7 nodes. Would probably yield well is SOG. It took 8 to 10 weeks to show sex under 18 hours of light. Large leaves, thick stems, hold up large dense cola buds. The more Grey Mist pheno seems to be more sensitive to nutrients and Ph fluctuations. It is a pretty easy plant to grow. Forgiving, roots fantastic, 5 gallon pot, root bound in 5 weeks.

They flower between 53 and 63 days depending on the pheno. All phenos have large dense cola buds, they don't need to be staked. Leaves are coated in crystal, huge trichomes. The high varies in the phenos. The more Tundra phenos have a creeper couchlock stone. The Grey Mist pheno comes on quick to the head without paranoia. All phenos have body numbing high which my friends and I prefer for medicinal purposes. It keeps me alert but takes the edge off of the back pain. the pictures labled 1 are the Grey Mist pheno and the pictures labled 2 are the Tundra pheno. I gave the potency a 9 for medicinal qualities that the plant demonstrates.

Matanuska Tundra was not the best looking plant in the garden. It was kind of lanky and had willowy stems that didn't break but did want to fall over. Most plants had knobby heads for buds with not much under bud-- the buds had very large exaggerated calyxes reminiscent of some Thai I have seen before.

Resin production started early but then kind of tapered off, they had nice resin but not gobs of it. The plants grew fairly easy and I didn't really have any problems from them other than they wanted to fall over and droop onto other plants. I had one pheno that had nice long thick colas and was the best resin producer also with the best buzz and I am still trying to reveg that one as my clones from it got mislabeled and lost, but it was definitely the cream of the crop. This stuff makes up for any lankiness and moderate yield with it's potency-- very good shit, absolutely everyone who tried it clamored for more.

February, 2003

Wow! A great indoor Sativa that, with some work and pruning can be managed for an high yielding indoor grow. Only noticed two phenotypes in my pack of seeds. One was lankier than the other, with fluffier buds. Overall a great yield and works well in soil and hydroponics setups, with both organic and chem ferts.

Cloning is about average and there is no need to veg, as light will always be set to 11-12 hours. Bud production starts and continues building up over the long flowering period in true Sativa style. For a Sativa, a finishing time of 10-11 weeks is pretty good with no veg. One problem was the major branch tying required as the lanky stems and branches are no match for the heavy buds. You may also need to prune the tops in the first 4 weeks since this plant wants to grow to 6-8 feet if it can.

Cure buds to maximize the spicy smell and taste. The smoke is smooth and very fruitylicious. Fairly potent, especially if grown with Chem ferts but better taste and flavour from soil+organic.

Last thing, Girls just seem to love this strain! (pssst...it's the part about smoking and having sex). Girlfriend not into pot you say? Grow some WW together and enjoy the pleasures of life.

Typical of a White strain, these were very sensitive (read tempermental) little girls in veg. By day 35, I was so aggravated with them, I almost ripped them out. First feed came at day 20, less than 1/4 strength FF Grow Big. Little brats got nute burn, and looked pathetic. About the same time, they decided they didn't need as much water, now they looked twice as sad. At this point, they stood on the threshold of The Valley of Death. I granted a 2 week reprieve, and denied everything til they begged for it. Suddenly, signs of improvement. Two weeks after that, it was time for flower.

Life got much better at this point. Suddenly, they wanted nutes, and lots of water. Very little growth spurt in flower, though.

Early buds were round as can be with white hairs everywhere. Frost started showing about 5th week and gradually advanced til leaves were covered half way to the tips. In the last three weeks, the tops exhibited a bizarre growth spurt, shooting little tendrils of bud in every direction. A very slow finisher, though part of this can be blamed on some ventilation issues in this grow. One finished after 80 days of flower, the other went 92.

Buds have been curing for 3-5 weeks now. Very, very, strong high.....nice blend of head and body. You don't go far after a bowl of this. Both plants were 35" at completion and yield 1 1/2 oz each.

Guava no 1 is a fun plant to grow, though it's variety of phenotypes may not be to everyone's taste. I have grown out six females, that ranged from an Indica dom that had no stretch going into 12/12, to a LPS (god bless her) influenced pheno that may have tripled in height upon the onset of flowering. The Guava I have in the mother room leans toward the Indica and Mrs. U swears by it for period pains, I don't like it but taste is subjective.

As a plant, I found it forgiving, though it seemed to be a bellweather for flying problems that would spread, ie thrips. Not a gross feeder, though seemed to enjoy a dose of epsom salts around four weeks into flowering, and don't we all, vicar.

I have grown several Seeds from the Igloo, and would say that I knew Aussie Bush and Guava no 1 is no AB, (nor LPS come to that). But if you fancy a sort of un-dutched tropical treat that may be good for period pains, and don't have thrips in your space, this could be your holy grail.

Indian Haze-- Kerala x Original Haze, 100% sativa --

This strain was a bit difficult to grow because of the strong odor. I have never grown anything with the smell like the Indian haze. It has the most amazing fruity smell, but it has a sweet odor while on the plant. It packs loads of THC 14-20%. It's a good strain it's fairly hearty. The bud is very light and fluffy, so it looks deceiving when you put it on a scale. The light buds are the best for rolling with. It will give you a good strong head high. it also makes you a bit tired after you come down. I am going to grow it again, I was very happy with the yield. it takes a long time to become ripe enough to harvest. The plants grew to be tall and pretty lanky. I had some problems with two plants...they were males, but 2 out of 10 isn't bad.

Once I put it on 12/12 it took a while for the buds to bulk up, I got worried for one plant after about 2 weeks when I didn't see any real changes. The plant grew in size but didn't add any real bud size, but it soon caught up. Each one of the larger plants gave about 4 zips, and some of the smaller ones I got like 3. It took almost no time to dry out once I got it hung in a room with a HEPA filter. It took a couple of days max. I figure it might help get rid any chance of mold.

Smoke: After the harvest I hung the buds in a room to dry, then in a cardboard box for final drying. I then cured it in jars for a month. Once I opened the jars the fruity smell came pouring out. The sweet taste was even stronger than before. So I rolled some and had my friends over and we all smoked them. Indian haze gave us a different high, it started out as a strong cerebral high, very trippy. Then the high moved to the body after about 15 min. That effect was interesting you get the best of both types of highs, indica and sativa. I think it's strange that we got a strong couch-lock because it was 100% sativa. Overall everyone liked the bud and I was quite happy with the results.

All of my friends went mad as soon as they saw it and smelled the fruity smell. All of them wanted seeds, but there were hardly any. Which is good for some people and bad for others. i kept the few that i got for my next grow, because the seeds are somewhat expensive

Seedsman - Breeder Information

The Seedsman works directly with the original pioneering breeders from Sacred Seeds and Cultivators Choice to bring you original true-breeding strains and F1 hybrids. We also work with other breeders to bring you the best pure-bred strains from around the world. This ensures the quality and integrity of the plant's genetics, and results in standardized plants with predictable characteristics.

Much of the breeding efforts that have gone into producing the Seedsman range, have been concerned with acclimatising high-THC strains of equatorial origin to different regions whilst preserving potency. Selection is extremely important within the breeding process. All our seeds have been acclimatised in Europe.

Seedsman breeders make selections and crosses based on the favourable characteristics of the plants. The following characteristics are considered particularly important:

General characteristics, Flower characteristics, Size and yield, Shape, Vigour, Colour, Resistance to pests and Disease Maturation, Taste and Aroma, Root production, Sex.

CONTROLLED CONDITIONS

All the seeds we list are produced 100% organically and have been grown in absolute isolation to ensure that no fertilization occurs by strains other than that selected. The seeds are collected from fully mature female plants, which have been selected for being exceptionally early, and healthy growing plants. The seeds have not been chemically treated in any way.

All seeds are from the most recent harvest to ensure freshness. Viability of any seeds should be maintained for up to 3 years, if kept in a cool, dry, dark and airtight place, or longer if frozen.

Swazi x Skunk is one of the best weed I ever smoked. All my friends where really impressed of that special taste and the really incredible high. It has 75 Sativa and 25 Indica due to Skunk No1.

I grew with a 400Watts MH Venture Sunmaster in vegetative cycle and with a 400Watts Osram Plantastar for flowering. I had no problems at all, but due to the high Sativa type of the plants they grew up to 150cm in 7,5 liter pots. They grew more than double in height, when switched to 12/12.

The leaf is thin and bright green, not that dark green, like many Indicas. I fertilized with alga bloom and harvested after 60 days of flowering. I now it could be longer, but it was ok for me and the yield was also very good.

Swazi Skunk is a very different to average 50/50 hybrids and it's something for growers who want to grow something very special. The high is very clear and long lasting. I think the skunk part is very important for yield and gives them a shorter flowering time compared to 100% Sativas. I love this strain! But I believe that they get more better in a greenhouse or outdoors.

Afghani#1 from Sensi Seeds is an IBL which means that it is very uniform in growth. The reason why I choose this strain was two fold. I wanted to grow a true landrace Indica with limited hybridization and I wanted lots of resin. If you are looking for an original Indica that produces a body stone effect then Afghani#1 is for you. Afghani#1 has some of the darkness leaves you can find on any Indica strain. With higher levels of N the leaves turn a dark green and begin to look like bat wings. Afghani#1 is extremely easy to grow and highly recommended for the novice grower. It is very hard to actually fault this strain as it can grow in the most harshest of conditions and survive almost any nutrient problem or pest attack. Novice growers are highly advised to give this strain a go.

The downside to this strain is that it is only an average yielder and the smell is simply one of strongest you fill find from any strain. If you plan on growing Afghani#1 you will almost certainly need to use a carbon filter. The smell is much stronger than most skunk varities. Afghani#1 does not have much vigour - a result of its IBL stability but it does produce some of the most resionous buds I have ever seen. The resin oozes everywhere causing the pistils to curl up into balls. The overall effect of the cola growth is like clumps of goo at every node region. Afghani#1 is a prime candidate for hashish extraction. This strain also forms the bases for many other Indica strains available today.

I have grown this strain several times and let the harvest time finish a little later than 60 days to increase the body stone effect. The high is a total body stone with a light head buzz. If you leave the strain flower longer it will produce a very strong body stone effect. It tastes like hash.

Afghani #1 is a short bushy 100% Indica, with very dense compact buds, that produce shit loads of very sticky resin, definately a scissor cleaner!

I've grown Afghani #1 twice now, and nearly all of them were short and bushy, apart from 1 plant which soared BIG TIME! I vegged them to around 9" tall under 400w MH, then triggered them, all but 1 plant stayed short, and finished up around 25", but that 1 plant soared to 43" tall, triggered at 9", so if you do notice a pheno, keep in mind it could out grow your room.

Yield:

The yield from Afghani #1 isn't very good, but after a few times growing you can build up the yield, my best is 3 oz per plant finishing at around 35" tall, I suggest tying down (LST) and trigger flowering at least 12", depending on the size of the grow - room to get better yields.

Smell:

The smell wasn't that much of a problem for me, but I do have good odour control, so keep in mind that the smell isn't particularly strong, but could easily go out of control and stink out your house if you grow more than 4 without odour control, but it is quite a nice lemon smell, that turns hashy at harvest time. (55-60 days)

Flowering period:

Afghani #1 is a short flowering Indica that goes from 45 - 60 days, or perhaps a bit more for the major couch lock stone. If you want a laughy/giggly stone, then chop at around 45 days, trust me, your ribs will near collapse, then 3/4 hour later, it will be hard to keep your eyes open, but around 60 days will just put you to sleep.

Overall Afghani #1 is a nice smoke, either sociably, or not, it will put you on your back if you are not careful, it isn't an all - time great, but well worth the effort.

I got 2 seeds from a friend that went to Amsterdam. Both seeds germinated and both where female. Both grew as mothers in GH Waterfarms with BC Technaflora nutes. Clones where took and rooted in an EZ Cloner 30 under a 400w MH. Rooted clones where moved into a GH Aero-flo36 under 1000w MH, vegged for 3 weeks, and flipped the switch at 12" (typically I would veg for 1 week and then flower at 7"-8", but due to lack of space I had to wait to flip the switch). Room is sealed with a AC unit, and blowers on all the lights venting to the roof. Temps are 72F with lights and 68F in the dark with a RH of 60 in day and 80 at night. Flowered with a 1000w and a 400w HPS with full line of BC Technaflora nutes, added GH Floralicious bloom at day 20. Flowering went 56 days, and the trichs where 50% clouded. ( I like to harvest a little early, when the trichs are about 50% clear and 50% cloudy, then after a dry and cure, the rest of the clear trichs change to cloudy, more of an "UP" high for me). Growth was VERY vigorous throughout the entire grow, this strain liked to branch out, so early trimming of the secondary branches are necessary for a SOG grow.

Cut and dry came to almost a pound and a half. Yield was decent, but would have been better if I flowered at 7-9 inches. Drying took approx. 7 days and everything is curing now. Nuggs are indeed ready to smoke even though they have not fully cured. Piney-fruity smell that's very pungent, soft smooth smoke that reminds me of a pine tree with a hint of citrus at the end. I got 15 grams of bubble hash from the trimmings and under developed bottom growth, and its some of the most potent blonde hash I've ever had.

These Black Domina's were from an original breeders pack we purchased over two years ago. The germination rate was 8/10 seeds with 3 being females. The phenotypes were all nearly identical, deep green color with great node spacing and a high calyx/leaf ratio. Tall and lanky. We had been growing these plants in an organic soil mix with solid results. We decided to change our setup to hydro about 6 months ago and the results have been amazing.

The first hydro Black D took 77 days to finish and in the end was 6ft. tall, bushy with huge buds. We harvested 4.5 ounces from this one plant. She was very easy to grow. We kept her Ph at 5.2 and fed her a steady diet of General Hydroponic nutes. We would mix in 4ml of Oxyblast and a dose of Superthrive. The results have sold me on hydro.

Wow what a big Bitch with a nasty attitude to boot! But not when growing, she couldn't be more of a pleasure. Very easy to grow. Loves Nutes but needs lots of room and ventilation due to the density of the buds.

I took 10 Sensi Seeds and they all germed within a week. All Survived until we introduced Metal Hal. Which 5 died and I ended with 2 females. Not easy to sex at first. No real pre flowers until 1 week into flowering. Switch 12/12 after 5 - 6 weeks veging. X-fered to final 15 litre tubs 50/50 soil/ coco. Canna through out.

Extremely smelly plant and very big if left to grow. Finished at 6 an half foot at 55 days!! Not bad for pure indica. And the Yield. Well under 1 400 watt HPS, 2 Black domina gave me 15 ounces Dry. A beautiful plant. A must for any garden. Lovely smoke and very deep, deep stone. A bit like a couple of Valiums and a can of your strongest beer. Not one for light smokers.

Beginner grower, so a number of things went wrong, including all but one of the C. Indica (Cindi) seeds dying. However, the one was a female, which sprouted and still thrives under 200w of flourescent light. She is prolific, and as a small gardener, I find I am pruning and discarding a lot to keep her manageable.

Six cuttings rooted easily with cloning liquid, in an Aeroponic system under the same flourescents as Mother. I used Formulex at about 1-1.2ms, ph 5.5-6.2 for both Mother and Clones.

I transferred them to a 40litre NFT system under a 400w and 600w light side by side. I used Ionic Grow at about 2.0ms, with some Rhizotonic, and a few drops of Superthrive for 3 weeks of 18/6 lighting. I used a shower extraction fan and clip on fans in the room to keep the garden ventilated.

After 21 days all plants were the same height, about 50 cm. I switched to Ionic Bloom & Boost, and switched to 12/12.

After 1 week pistils were visible on all plants. After 2 weeks buds and pistils were forming. On advice, I added advanced nutrients Big Bud according to their website calculator.

Lots of sticky resin was forming after a week of this.

After 3 weeks of Big Bud, I switched to their Overdrive. Both are flowering boost additives to the normal Bloom solution. 3 days before harvest I used a flushing solution. At harvest they were about 80cm to the top of the biggest cola.

I think towards the end the roots were so dense they impeded flow, so I increased the steepness of the flow and added a bigger pump and spreader bar from the aeroponics tub I have.

6 plants yielded 2400g of trimmed colas, about 400g small buds, and about 1000g of trimmed off sticky leaves. Which ended up as 800g trimmed dry bud plus 400g dried skuff.
Even the skuff is quite a potent smoke.

I grew it in a big 10gal container with two other plants, a test grow for a fellow OGer, so the Durban was not my main priority, I just grew it to take up space. With that, I kept it small, it was a bud on a stick.

I have grown Sensi Seed Early Skunk over the last two years both indoors, outdoors and under glass. I would recommend this strain to anyone growing outdoors where plants may be susceptible to mould, as it is highly resistant and to growers indoors who require a faster finishing Æ&agrave;Skunk' strain. My only concern with this strain is the poor germination rates I encountered.

I germinated in Sowing and Cuttings compost half a pack of seeds (x8) both years and only achieved a 5/8 successful germination rate both years. During the first year all five plants were grown in a greenhouse resulting in two females. During the second year the five germinated seeds produced four females, two of which were grown under glass and two outdoors.

After two months of vegative growth cuttings were taken from the greenhouse grown plants and these clones grown indoors under artificial light. Although there was a spider mite problem these clones survived and produced rock hard buds in around 50 days.

The greenhouse grown plants also produced some lovely solid bud sites and were not affected by mould later in the season, as was another strain that I was growing beside them. These plants finished around early to mid October (location SE England).

The outdoor grown plants also finished around the same time with one of them producing pink buds from the early flowering stage.

Overall I think this strain is easy to grow, produces clean, hard buds when other plants are being affected by mould and yields above average with a Æ&agrave;balanced' smoke Æ&agrave; RECOMMENDED.

This report is limited on my experience with a Half seedpack (half was from a friend).

I made it because Sensi's Early skunk (Early Pearl x Skunk #1) is a lovely tasting outdoor variety with huge grow-potentials.

The seeds were put in moist and ph tested soil. After germination they were moved on a sunny outdoor location (44N), it was late April.

This strain is very easy to grow. It simply grows bigger & bigger if the conditions are fine* this means high quality soil and lots of sunshine.

Its also a very mold resistant variety and so overall recommended for outdoor growing in areas where the late season gives high humidity.

On the other side, all animals love this Skunk hybrid! 2 plants disappeared (in one rainy night) at their very early veg. period... I'm not sure but I think they were eaten by snails or a roe... However they were food.

The other 3 that survived this attack were growing extremely fast, tall + bushy with lots of secundar branches... But Mother Nature was again not nice during a night (early June). Rainstrom + heavy wind destroyed an E-skunk. The center trunk was down but 2 side branches were still alive... I supported one branch with a stone (later with 3), and with the time, this beauty was becoming a main stalk-branch. This plant was small in relation with the other 2 healthy E-skunks that were living only a bit away. They were big, strong plants with a living mix inside* medium fat spiders tacticaly hunting small insects. A lot of relative big insects in the shadow of the leaves, also a few snails on the lover parts of the plant...

Early Skunk is a magnet for all kind of wild, but of course it depends on where you grow ; country/ecosystem/local conditions. Greenhouse, garden, balcony, guerilla...are not similar environments and will sure give differend results.

- 1 was a male...RIP

So my situation was 1 healthy, fat female plant in the perflower stage and 2 branches from the other E-skunk that also turned out to be female. The supported branch was longer and much more thick than the non-supported.

I was wondering what a huge branch will mother Nature give if I support only 1 branch of the big female plant with a stone or even remove the main trunk.

This was not the only strain growing outdoor in that season and I'm also indoor active. This means that I don't care for as much outdoor yield as possible... I rather make experiments because for me, experience & variety is the quality of live.

In early august, 1 branch (from the fat lady) was supported with a big stone. This supported branch was growing & pushing the main trunk away. In late August I cut of the center at node 3 and removed 2 side branches that were growing to the north. The result with supporting was an 2.5m (over 8ft) tall branch!

Overall, its a good cross with nice skunky tasting buds and also the yield can be fantastic... but the High is not so good. It can get interesting if you smoke much in a relative short time... but nothing special. The taste & appeal is after curing lovely sweet and fine for skunk lovers. Fast tolerance build up.

Smells strongly of citrus during flowering.*

Harvest: I got a little under an oz per plant which is not bad considering they were only 2 "½ ft tall. Very frosty and smelly.

The High: This is daytime creeper weed. I smoked a joint with a few friends before driving. We all ended up geeking out at a traffic light about 10 minutes later. The smell and taste is fantastic. Sort of a menthol, lemon, and skunk flavor. It cures very well.

Crossed with the Hash Plant™ it produces one of the best indoor hybrids that, unfortunately, was last available in the late '80s. Several years ago the Sensi Seed Bank was very proud to put this hybrid into production again and to bring it on the market labeled as 'Mr. Nice'. This is in honour of Howard Marks, an Oxford graduate, who became one of the biggest Marijuana smugglers of our time. After spending 7 years in an American penitentiary, Howard released his autobiography Mr. Nice and now spends his time promoting the normalisation of Cannabis. If you like a solid and resinous bud with a 'double Indica' hashish taste and aroma, it is time to go for the Mr. Nice G13™ x Hash Plant™.

Several years ago the Sensi Seed Bank was very proud to put this hybrid into production again and to bring it on the market labeled as 'Mr. Nice'. This is in honour of Howard Marks, an Oxford graduate, who became one of the biggest Marihuana smugglers of our time. After spending 7 years in an American penitentiary, Howard released his autobiography Mr. Nice and now spends his time promoting the normalisation of Cannabis. If you like a solid and resinous bud with a 'double Indica' hashish taste and aroma, it is time to go for the Mr. Nice G13™ x Hash Plant™.

I was given a few really healthy G13 x HP clones from an OG friend, and they were definitely the hardiest plants I had in the bunch going into flowering. I did find them to be the most susceptible to disease in the bunch (I had 5 other strains going in the same room).

For some reason these plants got really hairy, and so I'm not so fond of the look. But the stone is there! Really good high; manageable, yet heavy, I would compare it to the buzz you get after a beer or two and a joint.

I didn't keep any clones of this strain, as I have no plans to grow it again. But I don't want to stop anyone from trying it, as everyone has different tastes and this very well may be the strain for them!

The most amazing cannabis strain I've ever seen! Even grows crystals on the stems. High Times Magazine claims that this plant was tested at 27.2% THC (see January 1999 Issue), probably by Trichome Technologies.

In my opinion this strain produces one of the most exceptional highs I've ever encountered. The high is very strong, energetic and almost trippy. Since I'm a chronic (arthritis psoriatica) I swore to this strain for it's painkilling effect.

In garden I use clones which I vegetate for about 6 days before I pull them into flowering. I never let these clones vegetate too long because it's takes 2 to 3 weeks for them to start flowering from the moment you put the lights 18->12, otherwise they just grow too tall for my closet.

i gave sensi's hash plant a whirl with my last grow, planting 5 seeds, three germinated, two of which were females. as seedlings, they had fan leaves larger than my other strains which were in flower... literally, leaves which were wider than the plant was tall. not only that, the stems for all three were between double and triple what i would expect for a plant that size. and, despite the large stems, two of the three cloned very easily - the third, not at all. this third plant, one of the females, also exhibited unusually broad fingers on the leaves, and was quite a pain in the ass as far as nutrients went. basically, it was in a constant state of new growth, with the old growth dying. but, she had other redeeming qualities which i discovered in flowering.

the "normal" hash plant female had a pretty good internodal distance, and extremely heavy branching. smell was a pepper-like spicy smell mixed with hash. when flowered, it showed very little stretching... basically, it just started building up buds. unfortunately, it was a magnet for spider mites. i had read from another's experiences with the strain that it was "mite food," and surely enough, they showed up as soon as i started flowering. by organic means, i kept them at bay for the duration of the grow...

this plant was fairly slow at starting flowering, but packed on weight rapidly around the third and fourth weeks. not only that, but as i approached the fifth and sixth weeks, it started pouring out new calyxes everywhere. before this, the calyx-to-leaf ratio was excellent, afterwards... it was damn near insane. at 50 days, i had to chop it due to the mites, but it could have gone at least another week.

the super broad-leafed female was very compact, but not that heavy of a brancher. it basically ended up as a dozen or so branches which were perfectly upright, each 30-60 cm in length. this girl started flowering significantly faster than her sister - she looked at least a week ahead as far as maturation went. not only that, this girl put out tons of trichomes very early in flowering, and kept stacking them on until the very last day. this plant was also very sweet and fruity in scent, as compared to the spicy, hashy nature of the other. it also resisted the spider mite invasion for quite some time.

yeild on this one was much, much lower than her sister... quite leafy, but insanely resinous. also, no double stacked calyxes... eh. the smoke is also a bit sweeter, and definitely more potent. it also had a head-high component to it which was missing in the other plant. this girl was also a bit faster in finishing - by 45 days, it was ripe for the pickin'!

i was surprised at the obvious differences between the two plants, as it's certainly a commercialized strain. but, as both plants were magnificent, i'm not complaining! if you're looking for a solid indica to add to your collection, look no further. the price of the seeds might seem a bit steep, but they're worth every penny.

Grew a number of Hash Plant seeds from Sensi. Was trying to replicate the NYC HP, which in fact the g13/HP from Sensi.

Easy plant to grow. Not sensitive to pH problems or issues with over nuting. Can easily eat up anything you give it. Though expensive seeds, would be appropriate to the first time grower as it is so easy to grow - showed a huge resistance to pests and to mold. Very impressive.

Grew with one large central cola until trained. Double, triple calyxes. Very impressive the amount of growth that got put on from day 40-day 60. Not stinky at all but as always you can tell something is growing. Impressive trichome production. Sensi rates the strain as being ready at 42 days - not even close to accurate.

Would respond well IMHO to a scrog or SOG methods.

Lovely strain but I do prefer it when the G13 is thrown in as it has extra flavor. Long cure in jars. Finished the last J about 2 years after harvest. Flavor got better and better over time.

This plant is real easy to grow. Nice plant for starters. It has a sweet smelling aroma. Very resilient. Had a mother that suffered root damage but managed to come through during flowering process.

Once you grow this you can recognise the smell instantly... Otherwise it leaves you wondering what strain you smoking.

It grows significantly well indoors. Has an early flowering period. I pulled on 6 1/2 weeks with a good yeild and good potency.

It also has a decent look with lots of nice cyrstals all around.

4 week vege tipped on the 2nd week. 6 weeks flowering.

Needs a little pruning during flowering period as the leaves get a little busy.

Advantages: Easy to grow and its short flowering period with decent yeild. And it also has nice look with its cyrstals.

Disadvantage Im not too sure whether it was my technique but the buds werent huge but decent size. But still the quantity was there. Good luck happy growing...

The seedling was under the fluros for 2 weeks, as usual, then it went under the 400w MH.

Veg:

As this was my first time tying down, (LST) I wasn't sure just how big to veg it to, so like a couple of other strains I was growing at the same time, I vegged it to around 8" before tying it down, then I carried on vegging until it was(majority of the plant) around 9 - 10" tall, then triggered it.

Flower:

The Jack flash was the last plant in the entire grow that showed sex, and luckily it was a female.

It is a very skinny plant, and prior to triggering I really thought it was going to be male, as the nodes were very far apart, not very many nodes at all, I'd say at full stretch, on the main stem, there were only about 13 nodes and the stem was 34" long, as a result of that, the yield isn't very good at all.

On the up side though, this strain REALLY pumps out the trichs, BIG TIME. The whole plant looked as if a sack of sugar had been dropped on it, totally coated, and smells pretty rank/bitter.

I never experienced any problems with the nutes, although I didn't use full strength any time during flower, as it was the only one, and I didn't want to fuck it up.

I chopped this plant at 60 days, which was just about right I think, then tied it up for 14 days, chopped all the bud off, and cured it for another 7 days.

High:

The high of Jack flash is very nice, take 4 or 5 tokes, then you have to put the joint down and get a drink, as the taste is SUPER STRONG, very bitter, then have a few more tokes and you are pretty fuckin hammered, it hits you hard, but the initial WACK of the Jack flash doesn't last long, it just hits you, then spaces you out BIG TIME!

Put it this way, I was due to go to the hospital to see someone(major blag in itself) so I rolled a joint of Jack flash, then my mate came round to pick me up, he only had 5 tokes on this spliff, and thats all it took.

I was wasted, and my mate was pretty spaced out when we left the house....3 hours later, we were both wondering when it would wear off, we were still spaced out to fuck!

Overall the Jack flash is a nice strain, but the yield lets it down badly, I only got 1oz off this plant, if it was better, then this strain would be top notch.

It has been my favorite plant to grow (up to this point), and it has been very easy to clone and grow with consistent results (assuming you attain a plant with a good phenotype). It is important to note that out of 10 planted seeds, 5 were female, but only 2 of those held up to the "Jack Herer" name (hence the rating of 5 for "ease"). If you do get a good one, it is worth every bit of time and money you put into getting it. Not all of the plants, but the one that I chose to clone off of was very slightly hermaphroditic.

Very picky during veg for ferts (hence the 6 for ease of growth), budding was a charm. When I cut and started the cure for these ladies, I did not think much of them. It was well after harvest when I realized the true potential of these babes. Totally recommended for those looking for a little something special (have the experience and patience) in what they pack in they bong. Jack was a bit picky with ferters at first but when I adjusted the dosage things went OK. The smell of this plant is fabulous, I really enjoyed it. This plant does not like too much ferts during vegetative grow, in fact she's a bit picky. During the first week of 12/12 she stretched a lot, and then the flowering process goes on. Trichomes appears after something like 18 or 19 days of 12/12. This plant was not a huge yielder, far from it, but it was one of the whitest weed i've ever grown. Covered trichomes...

One was cute at 85 days of 12/12 and another at 55 days (i did have some problems i had to cut all my plants.)

Odor during the flowering is not very strong compare to some other strains, but it still smells very good :)

This variety produces so much resin that even the branches bristle with stalked glands. Grower Report

June, 1999

I received this strain as a clone from a friend. The friend had started it for seed. I grew for a while in soil next to the rest of my plants. Recently I did a garden of completely Jack, and it was sure impressive. I vegged in DWC for 30 days followed by 70-75 days in flowering. This was under 2000 watts of hps and CO2 kept between 1000 and 1500 ppm. 70-75 days because it took me a few days to trim. I had previously harvested early, and had been unimpressed with Jack. The rest of my strains were 45-60 days, and I'm impatient. This strain must go a little longer. The phenotype I have has very thin sativa like leaves, and the plants are unimpressive until week 6. At that point the buds got HUGE. It produced GIANT calyx's that seemed to creep outward from the center. It seems to have very few budsites at first, but the whole branch becomes a giant bud. It puts on most of its weight around day 55-65, not doing too much before that. The trichomes are weird in that they are sort of sandy feeling, not super sticky like other's I've grown. But they get covered. I recommend it to anybody as a great strain, but I feel the high is not motivational like some other sativa's. It would be a great medical strain, because this strain rockets you to the moon. I have never felt any anxiety or paranoia while smoking Jack.

This plant was surprisingly ease to grow considering I had heard several reports before how it was very tempermental to grow. Thru out the grow it was easily the most lush densely populated, tallest growing plants. The also surprised me in I had heard these were average yielders and yet they were my best yielding even better then Big Bud. Trichome developement was fairly dense and crystally with short stalks and bulbous gland heads. The smell and taste is unlike anything I've had before. So odd that at first it's almost a turn off but I found myself quickly enjoying it. Very nice, deep, long lasting high.

I started to grow an hybrid with White Rhino provided by a breeder for me to test.

The beans were fresh so 100% of them sprouted, but i kept only 3 females, one of them was discarded since showed too much indica pheno, but the other two were growed in my growroom: a somewhat small like hell box with a 150W hps and a nice hydro setup.

One of the plant overgrown the other one, and i took some clones for keeping the pheno.

They didn't show any particular request in nutrients, normal soil nutes in hydro setup did the job perfectly, the plant were grown with 1100ppm nutes and showed no nute burn neither any parasites.

they were tall and i needed to scrog them under a net, my poor 150W lamp was not enough for them but was perfectly sufficient for getting 3oz out of 2 plants, they can't certainly compare with the 4-4.5 i usually get out from white rhino but Wr can adjust to small spaces much better.

The plant were left in flowering for 70 days, the nutes were stopped approx 3 weeks before the harvest and only R0 water was added to the reservoir, the ppm slowly dropped till 200 ppm in the last week.

The result was nice, nitrogen deficiencie in the last time gave the buds a wondrful taste, sweet and herbal, maybe didnt give me a very big yeld but high quality for sure.

The buds were dried for 4 days, they are completely resin covered, and the smell is very flowery, they burn pretty good with some pops, and the effect is almost immediate, 2 hits give a nice heady high very very cristal clear.

I know i am high but i can think clearly, i can't express is differently than the high is like cristal clear spring water.

No couchlock at all, and medium to short duration at low dosage.

At high dosage some nervousness shows up as well as a great appetite....

the cross with white rhino gave it a boost in bud production as well in potency, the pheno i got almost completely lost its indica pheno, showing mainly sat smoke, however still grows like an indica sativa mix, plants were 50cm tall when harvested.

definitely a strain i will keep in my collection.

recommended for beginners.

Jamaican Pearl from Sensi was a nice treat but not my idea of a keeper strain. There was quite a bit of diversity amongst the girls. I had 7 females to choose from and only two were worth trying a second time. Incredibly frosty, it lives up to the "pearl" in the name. The Jamaican influence is a fresh hazy taste and smell that borders on paint... the smell of a room after a bowl reeks of Sativa in all its glory. The high is heady yet mild. Friends said it had a slight trippyness but I never experienced it, but then again, I have the highest tolerance of anyone I know. Organically grown she finished at 65 days which is quick given the sativaness. I wouldn't recommend this strain to anyone serious, but it's a fun easy Sativa for newbies of ganja.

I grew Sensi's MapleLeaf after yearning for the flavor I experienced in Amsterdam a few years back. Out of half the Package (7 seeds) I had one worthy female that turned out to be a good representation of the line. Organic soil, 4 gal bucket under 3K. I harvested 3 1/2 oz's from what I would consider a smallish plant. Others in 5 gal containers are twice as large. Very tall for a total Indica which makes me question the "Pure-ness". Whatever the heritage the genetics are very familiar as I can name four or five of Sensi Seeds strains that have a similar flavor...

Sweet and skunky with a heavy Afghani dank flavor. I can say this strain should not be attempted by anyone with smell concerns. I can smell this strain over all others, which is a concern when there are more than 2 in the garden. The high is more of a low sleep inducing and extremely relaxing. The unique aspect of this strain is its abdominal relaxation. Meaning if you have issues pooping (due to meds); this strain will have you on the potty shortly after smoking a bowl. Good for relaxing not good for hanging with your bro's. I don't enjoy a line at my bathroom. I am going to put away the other half of the seeds as I feel I have a nice mom to work with.

Sensi's Mexican Sativa was one of several seed packs I obtained from the Sensi Museum Coffeshop while visiting Amsterdam 2 years ago. They were grown outdoor in South Australia.

excellent germination rate 100% (always with sensi) even after 18 months in the freezer. paper towel method. Seedlings were grown under a 130w compact fluro until about 10 inches tall.

Once in the ground, seedlings grew quite vigorously. They were planted late in the season, and so never reached their full size (2-3m). They finished at about 6 ft.

In flower, I would say this strain had a very fast finish for an almost 100% Sativa. Plants packed on a lot of weight in the final 2 weeks, but still the yield was rather low. Long, fluffy spiraling buds which did shrink a lot once dried. High calyx to leaf ratio. Not a lot of hashable trim.

The aroma and taste of this strain were outstanding. Very complex and unique. On a fresh plant the smell is rather fruity and funky, a little sweet and with a hint of anise. As the buds are cured, more of the sweet anise character comes through.

Good potency and excellent effect. Not devastatingly potent, but not mild either. The effect was the most positive I have ever had. Happy, creative, alert, a little trippy at times). Not very narcotic at all - not a medical strain. People loved the effect. A few people said it was the best weed they had ever had. (and those guys smoked a lot a bud). Amongst my friends its still a special treat when I pull out my jar from the fridge. A rare treat.

Genetically stable. A little variation in yield and bud structure, but effect, smell and taste characteristics were very uniform. Uniform height as well.

Plants caused no major complications or special needs. easy to grow. No issues with pests, disease or mold.

Fantastic for personal stash, but not much commercial potential due to low yield. The top pic is of some cured buds from my stash. These are some of the finest buds out of the grow and have been curing in a jar in my fridge for the last 6 months (they only get better)

Overall this strain is excellent value as its one of the cheapest seed packs you can buy (from any breeder that is). If you are not after a huge yield, but want top quality buds for personal stash, this is a great choice.

The second pheno looked Sativa in appearance and finished at 4' in 56 days. The third pheno has more Sativa influence and finished at 5' in 70 days. The dry yields ranged from 2.5 to 5 ozs.

The plants in the photos were the most compact of the females. The short plant is the 50 day pheno. The other plant is one of the 56 day phenos.

The phenotypic expression was wide and varied but all were very obviously sisters and brothers. If I had the space they would have kept a few of the males as they were big and handsome with already enticing stem smells.

Out of 12 seeds, 7 were female, all were large and liked to branch, all continued to grow in height well into budding and 5 of them had running tips. One, which they ended up calling the Jack Herer pheno, had tips that ran by up to eight inches off the main bud mass (although this could have been compounded by the tips getting too close to the light and stretching from heat stress).

One lady was finished in 50 days but the taste and high was not what I was looking for and it didn't clone well. Three of the ladies were still going strong at 65 days and were cut because of needed space, so it is hard to report accurately on their true high and taste. One looked and smelled like Thai, was very lanky and needed at least 3 more weeks in bud so the high of the dry bud was not developed. The same can be said for the other 2 that needed more time but they were huge with massive loose broom like buds that also needed a few weeks to finish but would have finished alot larger than the Thai pheno.

The 3 that came down on 60 days were the contenders for keepers, the JH pheno mentioned before was out because of its running tips and one had a crazy paranoia inducing high and not much taste, so that was out.

The pheno I kept had fully developed trichomes at 60 days, didn't have running tips, had the taste and high I was looking for (although I didn't know it until I found it) and cloned well. the absence of running tips meant the bud had a much closer structure than the others and much better dried apperance. The initial nose is of astringant citrus with a creamy after note, the taste has a Haze type then citrus bite but maintains the creamy after taste of the aroma. The high seems to have a very high ceiling, so you just get higher and higher, very cerebral very though enabaling. If you smoke loads you end up on manic speedlike missions but in no way is this unplesant as the high seems very reassuring and safe.

All this in a sixty day mostly Sativa plant, can't be bad, thanks Sensi and the Dronkers.

Grower Report

October, 2003

I grew out one and a half pack of Mothers Finest, as I knew this strain had 3 phenotypes and I wanted at least a couple of "Keepers"...Out of 20 seeds I ended up with 12 females, 3 or 4 of each pheno..and one Exceptional example of each ..there were quite a few other females that were worth keeping, but why bother when I had a definite winner, and I am quite picky in choosing moms to keep...This is a multiple hybrid strain and the three represented were: Haze pheno (#11 for me) JackHerer Pheno (#5) and the "secret Juicyfruit realitive" which by all accounts is an(#2) Indica dominant Mapleleaf hybrid...Sensi was looking to bring down the haze flowering time while keeping the haze flavor and high.. (how many times have they tried this?)..and the succeeded..

#2 Indica Pheno was a straight grower with no branching...Mine had extra buds forming at every leaf junction which made the plant look really filled in..From seed she finished in 65 days but I have been told clones quicken by as much as two weeks....Of the three phenos this one had the most perfect balanced high...Very Sativa, calm,soaring, exuberent, while the body was powerful and uplifting..the flavor was the lightest of the three reminding me of the "oldfashioned" hard candy I'd get at grandma's house during the holidays....

#5 the Jack Pheno was the largest yeilder of the three and the smelliest...she was done at 75 days ..and had the nicest haze flavor (same as the other two) but more of a jackherer twinge...the high was much speedier than the other phenos but not as pronounced....of the three phenos, this is my least favorite, but many of my friends love it...

#11 Haze pheno 90 plus days..this is not what sensi had in mind when they were producing this strain...much too long of a flowering time and absolutely no yeild...but quality is what this gal is about...I consider this pheno a find as many others who have grown MF have seen the Haze phenos but none have looked as beautiful and crystallly as the one I seemed to have found.. she got overlapping light from 3K and even though the buds were crazy dense for a sativa there wasnt more than 40g on the whole bush...that hurts..but I wouldnt dream of lettin ANY of this bud out of my grasp...flavor was same as #2 and #5 old fash mint candy but this one is the sweetest of the three...there is more of a pine/ menthol twinge to it also but you really only taste that in the first hit...the High of the haze is the strongest in the head but does have a lil energetic body high..but the headiness of the high is first class, clear,soaring and very calming and pleasing....my new favorite strain...

This was my first NL grow and, since I don't have the green thumb, I'm glad for the ease of this plant. No problems at all with pests, just a little nitrogen deficiency. I grew indoor during seedling and flowering state, outdoor during vegging.

The odour is very low but this doesn't affect the potency! Smells good and tastes good too when smoked. The high is mostly a couchlock but sometimes I have a nice, pleasant trip all in the head. Btw, no paranoia. A very pleasant and relaxing high.

Since it was my first grow, I started with only one plant, which was a female. Germinated in a paper towel, sprout in 48 hrs.

During flowering state I put the plant under 10/14 (10 hrs light 14 darkness) instead of 12/12 because I had to finish early. So I didn't have a big yield, but the taste is good and potency runs well too.

Grower Report

April, 2004

I am actually halfway through my second grow on this strain, but this report pertains to the first. One of the advertised benefits of this strain is the ability to flower as soon as clones root. I tried this as an experiment with my first grow on this, with two small rooted clones supplied by my partner. They were about 2 inches tall with @4-5 nodes when I received them, and transplanted into a soil mix and placed them under a 400 watt hps in 12/12 mode. Flowers appeared within 10 days on 1 plant which became quite shrubby. The other seemed to stretch just a bit but also looked lanky, and did not show flowers till about 15 days (both clones came from the same mother, so I was a little surprised to see the difference). But quickly both had a nice onset of thick resinous bud with almost no leaf. The shrubby plant definately looked more like a NL type, very short and stocky. The other had a long main cola which needed support in the end but side buds were not as fat. I pulled the indie pheno at 56 days, because it had about 60% brown pistils. Also, I just couldn't wait another minute. I picked the sativa type at 68 days but I would have let it go another few, however I noticed a couple male flowers appearing. Average hieght was about 20 inches. The yield from the indy type was 26 grams dry and the Sat was 25 grams.

The quality of the herb was tip top with a great cerebral Haze high, and also an appendage numbing body stone effect. The taste is not really Haze or NL like, but a citrus sweet sour Tangerine theme. On exhale it's somewhat skunky. The smoke is smoothe but very full bodied and expansive. Very delicious.

Wanted to add that odor wise, this strain really does not smell until about 35-40 days of flower. After that it smells a little skunky, but ONA block gel seems to do the trick.

I started by germinating 3 seeds (March 20th, 04) by soaking them in h2O2 and h2O with dish liquid soap (few drops to 8 oz of water). After 12 hours I added them to a moist paper towel to sit over night on top of my PC. After sitting over night I returned to find 2 out of 3 germinated. I then placed them into their own 20 oz cups filled with a 60/40 mix of pro-mix/perlite; moistened with warm water, tap root down and placed under 120 watts of CFL's.

After 12 hours 1 pushed threw the medium and a few hours later the 2nd pushed threw. I added a 10" fan to blow across them after seeing their 1st set of true leaves, After 3 day's I removed them from under the CFL's and added them to my main veg area under a 1000 watt MH at 4' away from their canopy. 16" oscillating fan and 12" oscillating fan's were used and the grow room was cooled with a AC unit.

1 was removed from the soil-less mix and added to a DWC system with grow rock's feed with BC Technaflora hydroponic nutrient's. This turned out to be male, I cloned it and used it to seed other plant's. Both were misted with Ortho's Funguside.

The 2nd plant after 1 1/2 weeks was topped at around the 4th node then at 3 weeks old cloned as well was the male both for sexing.

Feed with MGro 4-12-4 Starter fert and Thrive Alive B-1 (red). I used the rule of 3rd's water, water, fert..pH of 6.5 I alternated mistings of Ortho's Funguside and week foliar feedings every few week's threw out veg and flower.

To 7 gallons worth of (pre mixed) medium I added Blood/bone meal about 1/2 cup each, 1/4 cup Epsom salt.

At 2 months old I repotted her into a 2 gallon pot with the same ratio of mediums..threw veg I feed with several types of fert's including MGro 4-12-4 transplant/seed starter, Schultz 10-15-10 veg, Hydroponic Special 5-11-26 (tomato formula), BC Technaflora Hydroponic nutrient & Thrive Alive B-1 (red)

Threw veg the plant stayed quite short but grew very quickly, I continued to train by fimming to bush it out. This plant is easy to clone and responds well training.

I switched the lighting back to 12/12 and once she started to flower about 10 day's or so I sent her out doors to finish. The stretch finished about 2 week's into flowering and once outdoors she started flowering very hard. I placed her in a sunny spot about 6 hours of full sun a day and it received 10 hours or more of dark time.

I feed with Schultz bloom 10-60-10, Hydroponic Speical 5-11-26, Thrive Alive B-1 (red) threw flowering. Little water was needed as it rained plenty. pH was stable threw flowering at 6.2/6.5

She responded well out doors, I misted often with Ortho Funguside and Ortho's Bug spray both safe for fruit's and vegies. The plant had a few wolf spiders that laid eggs in it's leaves but I did not bother them and the plant had no ill effect's.

The plant grew 3 main fat colas and even all the under growth produced 2 to 4 grams worth of bud. MEDIUM TO MEDIUM HIGH YEILDER.

I harvested a small sample to check for Trichome maturity on September, 20th to find a nice mix of 60/40 amber/clear and decided to bring her indoors and continue to feed plain water till harvest time.

Sept 26th, I harvested over 3 oz of premo bud at 108 grams and 72 hours later after hang drying in a warm closet I use for seedling's and clones I placed it into a wooden box to cure. Dry weight was 80 grams (so far)..

The bud to leaf ratio was very nice meaning little leaf to bud and trim is being used in ISO hash. A mix of 50/50 indica/sativa as for growth, flower time and leaf structure. It could have flowered a week or so longer showing it's sativa side, indica side showing threw it's short stature.

My digi cam busted mid flower so I don't have harvest pic's but the bud's are tight nug's, extremely smelly & sticky, black and purple with some red threw it. Trichomes are eye candy for sure. They don't cover the entire leaf mass though.

Smoke..Very nice! Pleasant both head and body. It has it's medical values. I say it's not a commercial bud at all. Taste was smooth, piney and spicy. Some hashy/peppery flavors at times.

High was clear, no couch lock, no munchies and lasted for a good amount of time. 3 hit's off a bowl lasted over an hour.

This plant was very easy to grow. 100% germination, I had 9 females out of 13 seeds. No hermies out of this pack and the plants grew at a very good rate. Took a strong PPM level of about 1500 all through flowering. Buds were very big and tight, biggest bud was 23.5 grams dry on a 1.5 feet tall plant. When nearing the end of flowering the leaves turned a light purple showing its Indica traits. The buds became more dense in the last 2 weeks of flowering. No pests, no mold, no disease's that I encountered.

I germed 12 seeds and all 12 sprouted my m/f ratio wasn't as good as I was expecting I had 4 females I also have to say I culled very early, because I needed the space. That all varies from seed pack to seed pack. I grew this strain in a c13 cab with a 250 HPS, Dayton 265 cfm blower. The soil used was miracle grow soil, fertilized in veg with 5-1-1 Alaska fish emulsion, for flower I used Neptune harvest 2-4-1 -- organics-- I let them grow to 12 inches tall under 18/6. Then switched to 12/12. Almost immediately they started their stretch, they did do a lot of stretching so much I modified my light to suit their needs (I bent the reflector) that is why I reported their stature as indica/sativa for me they had a long stretch for an indica. I grew this in a basement where me and my friends hang out alot and drink... none of them had any idea that their were plants growing in that room. So my odours were very subtle. I had a very excellent yield and plenty of nice bag appeal, lots of crystals. They grew very straight with very minimal branching the branches I did have SHOULD have been cloned!

On the seedbag , 14/16 germinated in 48h, all were indica pheno and I kept the most vigourous female (few day after germinating she was looking like a big male, and few day later like an sensi hashplant...), and I had given the others to a friend, a sensi fan.

Very easy to grow, to clone, to heal:

Good for beginners - cause of the EASE - both indoor and outdoor (but can mold outdoor,depend on the weather ).

Also a beautifull medium sized plant with large leaves in vegging and blooming stages .Heavy yielder in bush style, -my first SOG try wasn't so happy-, the pictures' plant yielded 130 g.Heavy trichome formation in blooming stage , as dutch commercial strains, very dense flowers.

Very good for indica lovers. -shivas' strains had lot of fans-

This smoke gives you a heavy body/heady stone for hours.(too strong for my wife !) The taste is very hashy with unripe undertones.( the garlic bud genetic perhaps )

This is not my favorite smoke, too indica for me, I prefer sativa/indica hybrids(shiva shanti 2 for example), but it was fun to try a such fun and easy to grow sensi strain .

The Shiva Shanti "® is a 3 way hybrid which consists mostly a Afghani strain that we call Garlic Bud because of its characteristic aroma .
The Shiva Shanti II"® contains a smaller proportion of this Garlic Bud and is added with Skunk and another Afghani. It is a less stable 4-way hybrid but quality-wise very nice.

I soaked half the seeds overnight in filtered tap water, then planted them in 1" rockwool cubes. After a few days growth they all had grown two sets of moderately thick leaves. I added 25% strength 5/5/5 chem + org nutes and half of them promptly died of nute burn. So ease up on the nutes, These plants grow just fine on plain water till they're a really decent size.

I put a few of the remaining cubes in soil and the rest in larger rockwool cubes. The plants in soil both took off while the rockwool plants continued to struggle with nute problems (the ICE from Nirvana and Lowrider x Blueberry free seeds from Planet Skunk both were having no trouble in the same situation)

I don't know if it's the rockwool, or the chemical nutes I was using or what but the once the plants were rooted in soil they shot off, overtaking the other plants in size. The second grow of the second half of the seeds is having no trouble with just water and foliar feeding till this stage. Keeping up with the soil plants too.

All the plants which I have topped have responded really well. This plant also takes really well to low stress training. A few of them grew just like vines too. I'm currently revegging one of the girls to grow her up a lattice.

I think this would be a good strain to use for a screen of green grow too.

Half of the harvest was water cured and half was air dried. The water cured stuff was ready in 8 days and tasted beautiful. It was mild garlic and citrus flavours and left a pleasant aftertaste. The air dried marijuana was harsh after a slow drying over three weeks. Two weeks of curing brought out similar mild garlic flavours with a beautiful smooth aftertaste.

The high is well balanced, with strong body and head effects but with little couchlock.

I germinated 3 beans and had the seedlings on the windowsill for the first 2 weeks. As you can imagine these little beauties stretched like *"$%$...

Then - under 400w MH "Sunmaster" (Venture) - they recovered and became nice little trees.

However, I had 1 female. She stopped growing at final height of about 33,46 inch / 85 cm. I tied her down.

The buds grew very dense, rock-hard, but would not smell too intense while alive. Flowers and leaves covered in a nice (but actually average) resin-coat.

Her stature and coloration extremely reminded me of an Afghani... (well.. Northern Lights)

My Silver Pearl was harvested after 50 days of flowering. I could have given her 10 or even 20 more days... Thank the flies.

Skunk#1 is one of the few essential must-have cannabis strains. It is an IBL and very stable. You will probably find that it is one of the cheapest strains available. The cost of seeds vs results is like buying a vintage bottle of wine for a fraction of the price. This is the #1 skunk for all skunk lovers. If you have never tried a skunk before or want to grow a skunk or are new to growing, then Skunk#1 gives you all that you could ever want from a Skunk strain. Once tried, never forgotten. I continue to grow this strain to this very day. It really is that good and sometimes produces huge colas. It is highly recommended that you prune and top this strain. I have found that topped skunk#1 perform better.

The odor levels of Skunk#1 are a lot calmer than one would expect although the Skunk aroma is evident from the moment the plant starts to flower. The real results are in the harvest. Skunk#1 produces some of the finest skunk buds you will ever likely enjoy. The high is mostly in the head but there are some residual body effects. There is nothing quite like Skunk#1 buds. The buds are the real reason for growing Skunk#1. The taste and smell is A++

The downside to Skunk#1 is the huge internode lengths. Skunk#1 tends to stretch a lot more than a strain should. Not all the node regions grow dense amounts of bud. There are large gaps between bud sites making the strain look somewhat like bamboo in parts. The picture with the blue background shows these over-internode lengths in the early stages of flowering.

An old timer skunk strain with lots of vintage elements. I always have Skunk#1 growing. Its the kind of bud that you miss when it is not around. Grow it for the taste!

Grower Report

February, 2004

I have smoked cannabis for 25 years and have always wanted to grow some myself to see how it compares to the stuff I normally buy so here goes:

I decided to take the plunge and purchased a pack of Sensi Seeds Skunk #1 as a first time grow for just "£12.99. I chose this strain because I like Skunk and the seeds are really cheap. I had also heard of Sensi Seeds on trips to Amsterdam, and was told it was easy to grow. I did not want to spend lots of money on expensive seeds only to totally mess up by making mistakes on my first attempt. I thought that mistakes were inevi- table so I was being a bit cautious.

I decided to germinate 8 of the little beauties. I pre-soaked the seeds in PH7 balanced warm water for 12 hours before planting in Seed Compost approximately 1cm below the surface and gave them a good watering. I covered the seeds with a clear plastic propagator lid and placed in a warm dark place. I kept the soil damp by topping up with water twice a day. After 4 days, 4 of the seeds had clearly emerged and a fifth could be seen trying to escape. One of the seedlings had its seed casing still attached to the top of the shoot and I decided to remove this with a sharp pencil at a later date if it didn't dislodge itself. I then turned on 4 florescent lights at 20W each totalling 80W for 24/0 and waited to see if the remaining 3 seeds would emerge, but alas they did not so I gave up on these three. Germination rate was therefore 5 out of 8 = 62.5% The seedling which had the seed case attached eventually was killed when I chopped off its head by mistake trying to dislodge the seedcase from it? Ooops!

This only left me 4 seedlings out of 8 so for some strange reason (probably greed) I decided to germinate the remaining 8. This time I pre-soaked for 24 hours instead of 12 and had a much better germination rate of 7 out of 8 = 87.5%

I now had eleven plants on the go at once and was soon to realise that my grow space was only big enough for about 6 plants! Doh! When I put these into full size buckets it was soon very obvious that I had about 5 too many plants but I decided to persevere anyway. By the end of the third week, the first batch attained a height of about 5 inches high and I then switched from flouros to my 600W HPS Growlux Lamp making sure it was at least 3 feet above the baby plants to avoid any sort of frying. I fed the plants with Miracle Grow once per week during vegetation and it seemed to work a treat, except care should be taken not to pour any of the water/miracle grow on the leaves when watering as this kill leaves within hours! (Oops again!)

One point to note here is that the plants started to smell after 4 weeks of vegetation! The smell soon filled my room and smelt like I had been smoking the stuff. Although I had a huge fan making lots of ventilation, I had to rush out and buy carbon filters, loads of air fresheners and a truck load of other products to keep the odor at bay so prevent my female lodger from becoming suspicious. I live in a small flat in a block of 50 flats, so odor is a big concern for me. This was even before flowering! Definitely not for the stealthy grower. I did love the smell though and spent ages each day in the grow room with my nose in the plants.

By the end of the sixth week, the 4 oldest plants had reached an impressive 10-12 inches height and I decided I would switch to flowering in just one week's time. To prepare for flowering, I switched lights from 24/0 to 18/6 for last few days of vegetation, with no feeding other than plain ph7 water. Total Vegetation time was 7 weeks and at this stage, all plants were very bushy in appearance and nearly as wide as were tall. They mainly looked very healthy with only a couple of stragglers, but did need some urgent pruning as they had almost overgrown my grow space and I was urgently wishing they would show their sex so I could get rid of any males to make more room. All plants were very similar in size, shape and appearance, although some had thicker branches than others and one even collapsed even before flowering and needed support due to its weak main stem and a couple were runts and feeble looking. I could not see any real signs of sex during vegetation. I think that vegetation could have been speeded up by at least two weeks as I am a beginner and I under watered for the first 4 weeks due to the perlite in the soil drying out really quickly, and also started flowering a week too late. Next time I grow Skunk #1, I think that 5 weeks would be plenty enough for vegetation from seed, as after seven weeks my grow space was far too overcrowded and the plants just looked like one big sea of green. I did not intend for this to happen and next time I will set a limit of 6 plants in my grow space of 4x2 feet. One point to note here, is that the 600W HPS bulb is very bright just like the sun and can seriously damage your eyes when working in your grow room. I thoroughly recommend that you wear dark sunglasses whilst working with your plants for any length of time.

At the start of flowering, I switched the lights to 12/12 and gave the plants a small dose of Terra Flores (approx 1/2 teaspoon per liter once per week, gradually increasing to 1 teaspoon per liter and two doses per week). After two weeks of flowering I could at long last see their sexes and discovered I had 6 females and 5 males. I was desperate to get rid of all the males to allow the females to breathe again as they had not much space for expansion. The males were cut, dried and vaporized and I was left with 6 beautiful females. After 5 weeks I gave the plants a dose of PK 13/14 and just flushed for the last two weeks of flowering with just plain old pH7 water.

I harvested a fraction over 7 weeks of flowering (51 days). I cut the plants off, trimmed and hung to dry upside down for 8 days before putting into glass jars and curing for a further 14 days.

Smoke Report

Wey Hey! A fantastic smelling Skunk. Brilliant taste and a great buzz, lots of laughs. A very smooth smoke with a nice uplifting/stoney high. I would definitely grow this strain again as it is unbeatable good value for money and miles better than any of the commercial stuff I have bought and makes me wonder why on earth didn't I grow my own for the past 25 years!. Highly recommended for beginners and experts alike. Very easy to grow, delicious! Must vaporize some more hee hee!

Skunk #1... What can I say? Ill try to start off at the top.

Despite all the drawbacks I had with the plants, they still came out better then what I thought I would end up with. Everything that went wrong with the plants (you can pretty much see the effects in the photos) was totally my fault, I left town for 2 weeks and I thought I had a good system of watering set up, but apparently I didn't. Also had a small problem with some nute burn early off, but they bounced back after everything I had done to hurt them. Witch made me very happy to see.

Just a few weeks into veg you can smell the strong skunk smell of these plants. It only gets fruity as time draws closer to flower. If I had to think of one bad thing about this strain I don't think I honestly could. One downside is the nodes tend to be more spaced out then usual I found, so space could be an issue, either that or a lower yeild if the space isn't available.

Overall, the strain was a pleasure to grow, I think id still stick with the AK47, but this strain has a long lasting great flavor, and is very easy to tell apart from any other, truly amazing. I'd recommend it for anyone just starting to get serious, since the seeds are just so dirt cheep for some reason, still trying to figure that one out... But hey im not complaining.

Just another small thing about this strain, I could be way off on this... I found that this strain likes more water then usual, the pots were still pretty moist and they were acting as if they were still thirsty, sure enough I watered again and they perked right up... not sure what this was from or they were just water whores... Who knows.

Overall good, classic strain.

Skunk #1 was very easy to grow. I had virtually no problems. She ate whatever I fed her. She was resistant to pests and she was definitely resistant to mould. During the last week of flowering it had rained a few days in a row with very low sunlight. But she was a champion, not a trace of mould could be spotted.

This plant was flowered from seed. Yes thats right....no veg time. It was flowered for 51 days, but could have gone longer if I wanted a more couchy/narcotic-like buzz. It was harvested with mostly cloudy trichomes.

My Skunk #1 was topdressed with homemade kidney bean ash (high in Phosphorus) and regular ole dirt from the earth in early and mid flowering. Next time I'll be sure to find organic ferts before I grow the plants so that I can really see the potential of Skunk #1. Coke can sized nugs are definitely achievable with this strain in my opinion.

The only thing I don't like is the spacing between nodes. Skunk #1 tends to be a tad stretchy....could be a slight problem for indoor micro growers. But with proper techniques I'm sure one could manage.

Overall, like I had previously stated...It's a good classic strain to have and smoke. Who smokes marijuana that hasn't heard of Skunk #1??? No one. I would recommend this strain to anyone and I think Sensi Seeds Co. does have something to be proud of with their Skunk #1.

Grower Report

October, 2003

I grew up 6 seeds from Sensi Seeds; I first was in a bad situation, with wrong air flow, and high temps.

I got 3 females out of those seeds. One didn't do it to the end, but the two others, that I called #1 and #2 revealed themselves strong enough to go through all my bad treatments. That why I'd say they're a good 9 at ease.

I saved 4 clones from each plant, and, even though mothers were grown in hard conditions, I quickly noticed the amount of resin they had produced. Even the fan leaves were partly covered with resin; that was the first time I saw such trichome development. It revealed itself a very unique characteristic : those plants are monstrous resin producers ! and I can compare them to Whitewidows, rhinos, AK's and others... Top resiners !

The harvest I did with those mothers, the few joints they gave me is not important here. Then I grew those clones in a brand new box; this strain report is founded on 4 grows with the same genetics.

The box produced good air-column effect, with moisture at 60-70% below canopy and 40-50% above.

Those lady clones were very easy to grow, rooted quickly, and #1 and #2 were looking quite the same at the time they were triggered in 12/12. They grow quickly and bush out quite easily. Their trunk diameter (which variations I found to be a genetic trait in MJ) is average.

Let me talk about odor level ; I don't particularly found that Superskunks stinked. :( I would have loved, tho... Nope, it's quite discreet plant, provided you don't touch the resin. Because the resin is so fruity. That's one of the heaviest perfume I've enjoyed :)

After several weeks, two different phenotypes appeared.

Pheno #1 was a little shorter, with less flowers, but dark green foliage and a gorgeous resin production.

The smell was sweet and fruity, sometimes like marshmallow.

Trichomes are very dense and regularly mapped on the leaf. At 30x, you clearly see there are very few sessiles, hairs, and many many capitulated stalked trichomes. It's a deadly long finisher. One time I harvested at 68 days 12/12 and the lady was 50% milky/30% transp/20%ambers. If you stress it a bit with a Ndef in flo, you can have it ready around day 60 12/12.

The other (#2) produced more flowers, looked more sativaish and displayed a pale green that revealed a genetic trait. It's a better producer and a photo contest winner ;) The trichome density is a bit lower than #1, although they are longer in size. That pheno is ready a bit sooner.

No particular pest resistance. I've seen thrips and spider-mites attack them..Spider mites attacked pheno#2 preferably to another plant i had beside (Durban/JH/skunk cross).

They resist and develop a good natural resistance to thrips in late flo, as many other MJ do.

They both did it well to the end. They can take heat, thirst and poor lighting quite well.

Once, I collected some sparse male flowers inside buds of #1 and #2. They may be slightly prone to make male flowers, since I got 30 seeds out of 150 grams of dried manicured buds, or very sensitive to light leaks. Anyway, that very slight pollination tendency isn't a problem for me: 1-2 healthy seeds in one bud is a god's gift! And I grew them 2 more times, and it never happended again. May have been some light leaks around day 20.

The smoke is serious, thick and heavy. Until 25 days of curing, it is very coughy, and even strong smokers got surprised. Now, it's day 40 curing, and everything is smoothed out.

The high is strong, quite euphorical, the overall effect is good, with a nice body relaxing effect.

You may do things after having smoked, and that is also a good point.

Aromas are sweet, fruity, skunky (#2 mostly). #1 is more fruity than skunky and the resin production is just superb. It is definitely my favorite.

My smoke experience has been made mostly in my own country, and for 13 years now. But I've been to Holland four times and I had smoked some Dutchgrown before trying the Superskunk; a real good strain in my opinion.

Grower Report

January, 2004

I grew out 4 seeds out of 3 packs of Sensi's Superskunk I bought with a friend, I kept other 15 seeds that are now in the fridge waiting for the right time to be grown. The seeds were fresh and big, dark and pretty good looking.

I got 3 females out of 4 seeds, all grown in coco, 10 liters pot (except the "freak" plant that was kept in a 6.5 liters pot); started with Canna ferts then switched to bio ferts after 3 weeks of vegetative growth.

The Growroom:

150x130 cm, with an height of 190 cm.

Lighting was a 400 watt grolux HPS + 150 watt SON-T HPS.

Ventilation: 2x 180 cfm exhaust fans, 2x 50 watt 30 cm fans.

Ro water, ph 6-6.10 veg, 5-60-5.70, hand watering. Temps were low at the beginning: had 10 days at 14°C max so they stopped for a while.

Anyway the final product was satisfying.

The Phenos: I think there are mainly two phenos:

1)The more indica of the 2 phenos. This one is the one closer to Sensi's catalog description. Faster finisher (55-60 days) than the sativa pheno, has the typical Skunk oil smell. The better producer of the phenos to me, a good resiner but not a top performer.

2)The sativa pheno, this one is more fruity and takes at least 10-15 days more than the indica pheno to ripen, the smell is still rotten/oilish but then when cured smooths out in something more fruity.

3)Freak sativa pheno. This one took something like 83 days 12/12 to be ready. Had "side fingers" on a lot of center fingers of the leaves, there's a pic that tells everything. This plants looked strange, had an indica growth pattern but sativa leaves and times... Resined like crazy, probably just a freak variation of the sativa pheno.

The smoke:

1)Potent, not too heady, Skunk. This says all. Has a good nausea countering effect and may fit for appetite stimulation, a good smoke.

2)This pheno is very different. Very heady, sativa high, makes you wanna do things, speak and laugh. Energetic and fruity.

So, overall a good strain, but I'm not so sure I'd keep a mother of the sativa pheno... But it reminded me the good old days back in the '90s when I went to Amsterdam and I smoked real weed for the first time... A genetic for lovers

I grew out large numbers of these plants and it is one of my top 5 strains. Plants are covered with sweet smelling crystals. Extremely high yield. Only thing I plan to do to it is cross it with something extremely fruity. Other than that it is almost as perfect as it gets.

I vegged them for a little over 3 weeks and then set them to flower. Plants were trimmed to one main cola and reached about 3 ft in height. Some were ready in 7 weeks while others took 8-8.5. Harvest is pretty easy as there are few leaves to trim.

These are F2's from seed. When I grew the original seeds out I only got 2 females out of 16 plants. I got them in the original breeders pack from Sensi.

I get anxiety when I smoke and I have to say that this weed is pretty comfortable .I only need 2-3 hits and I get a good high. I'm sure if you smoked a whole bowl it would be very intense. The buds are more sweet smelling than skunky. When smoked the skunky smell tends to come out. The bud is covered with crystal.

I've been growing AK for a year or so (4/5 crops).

It was given to me as a cutting.

I know there are two identified AK phenos: the Indica one that blooms in 50/55 days, and the more Sativa one, blooming in 67/70 days, which is the one I have.

It's an incredibly good pheno, one of my favorites in the garden.

Easy to grow, easy to clone.

Makes a branchy medium tall plant, with a quite Indica stature.

Large, thin Sativa style leaves.

Doesn't need much nutes, keep the level under 1.50 and she'll be happy.

High odor level, venting the garden is a priority, especially indoors.

Big air exchange needed.

The girl makes big fluffy spiraling buds covered with white shiny trichomes, that really bloom the 2 last weeks, while flushing: calyx explosion.

Expect a very high yield. (I did 1.02 gr/watts last crop)

Once dried, manicured (easy step, as the calyx to leaf ratio is very good, takes 20 mn to manicure a whole plant nicely) and cured for at least 3 weeks, you'll get one of the best smoke you can dream of. Tasty, and powerful.

Not a knock-off Indica body stone, more something like a cerebral stone.

Still able to move yourself and do things, but if you charge the dose, you get wasted and confused (without ever beeing sick), but mental cog-

Grower Report

February, 1998

The sativa pheno of AK 47 grows tall and has thin, flexible branches and stem. This makes it a plant that likes to sway in the wind, and good air circulation is absolutely essential as this strain is prone to airborne bacterial disease. The stems and branches are purplish throughout veg and flowering. As the flowering period ends you better watch those sagging branches, otherwise you might find a broken branch or two. The leaves are typically sativa in size and shape. The lower branches should be pruned away to avoid small lower buds that have more branch than bud. Given the right conditions this plant is easy enough to grow, but attention should be paid to providing adequate levels of N which tends to cause early yellowing if not adequately addressed.

This plant is a drinker, so keep it well fed and your AK will be happy.

The smoke is phenomenal; extremely fruity, hard hitting and very up, racy high. As a friend once said, a couple of puffs is all you really need for a manageable, enjoyable, and highly social high. A few more puffs and your sociability will drop off as your mind soars.

The hash from AK is excellent, some of the tastiest and most potent I have made.

I really like the Serious AK47. I have grown both Serious' AK47 and Nirvana's AK47. Nirvana's is nice but get the Serious if you can afford it. This plant is very bushy. I had excellent germ rates and 7 of 10 females. The plants grow very vigorously, and make nice yields of resinous buds. I did notice a bit of sensitivity to nutes and strangely enough it varied among plants from the same seeds. Some seemed to be starving while others were getting burnt, but they grew none the less and produced nice yields from 4 to 9 oz per plant. All of the plants had a nice fruity smell, like now and later candies. I had one pheno that was more Sativa like. In budding it didn't stretch but the buds were loose and running with highly swollen calyxes; oddly enough this pheno finished fastest and yielded least but was none the less my personal favorite. It smells like the sweetest cherry candies and I just can't get enough of smelling them. They are the most wonderful smelling buds I have ever experienced, even better than Blueberry. This pheno also has the best buzz. A very nice up high. Definitely head stash, and the smell is just as strong on dried bud as when fresh.

This strain develops a sturdy skeletal system with thin but extremely strong branching, and for me had the tendency to bush out filling any empty space in the garden.

These plants were vegged for about 28 days, flowered at approximately 12 inches and they took 45 to 49 days to finish with an average finished height of 36 inches. Can easily go to 48 from seed but can be controlled using clones.

Strain description says finish time is approximately 47 Days 12/12 which seemed to be right in-line with this garden. The AK-47 in this garden were harvested after @ 46 to 49 Days of Flowering and could have gone to 55.

Every plant was extremely uniform with the Buds that are humongous and quite a pleasure to view. I found that while the AK-47 did produce an abundance of bud, the buds grew out a bit fluffy and "slightly" airy.

The AK-47 was a bit harsh-- "Extremely expansive in the lungs" to smoke but the taste and Overall High makes this a wonderful strain to grow and smoke.

IMO, The AK-47 is not a very good strain to use for hashmaking, reason being this strain has a VERY high calyx to leaf ratio leaving you with very little waste and or sugar leaf to use for this.

I give Serious Seeds AK-47:

7 for Potency

9 for Uniformity

9 for Stability

8 for Production

10 for Ease of Growing.

Overall this is an amazing strain that is well suited for the Indoor Gardener. This strains height can be easily controlled with pruning and or various stress and can be used in a SOG type garden. Also as shown in the attached pic "footlong" which was an experiment from clone-- pulled early and produced .75 ounces dry.

In a large Bush style grow, given enough space, achieving 4 to 6 ounces per plant is not uncommon. I have had superb results with what i have grown of the Serious seeds brand. Simon of Serious Seeds is a well established Breeder who has the ability to produce some of the world's finest and most uniform strains. He does exactly that. You can not go wrong using any of the excellent strains that Serious Seeds has to offer.

I have grown AK47 a few times now inside and out I have found that in my pack of 15 seeds I had 3 different phenos!

The second one is a short stumpy little girl. Only had 1 out of a pack of 15 and her nodes are about 1/4 inch apart; nice and sweet cherry smell with a good amount of resin that comes off of the buds and down the leaves!

The third is my fav; she is a proper Sativa/Indica cross. You can see it in her she is the best yielder, has the most resin "shit she even stank in

Grow:

Germinated 4 beans, vegged for 5 weeks. Showed sex in veg, two turned out female. One was definitely more Indica phenotype and other was sativa. Force-finished both at 9 weeks, but the Indica pheno could've finished week earlier and the sativa one might've wanted a week more. Guess which one grew a lot bushier, too (topped both once). Grows very dense, heavy bud with plenty of crystals.

Smoke:

Odor and smoke are very dry and strong, perhaps bitter, definitely nothing that would even remotely resemble a "cherry pheno". Dang. Better grow more.

Effects on sativa pheno are very heady, and there are only little body effects. Straightforward sativa high, with minor Indica influence. Potential couch-lock (if you smoke too much) but fast thinking.

The Indica pheno is stronger than the sativa, and not only hits head but also body. Stoned and high, strange indeed.

Conclusion:

AK-47 is the strongest sativa I have ever smoked. It's not too good tasting, and the effect is rather straightforward, but hey, when you get hit by a baseball bat it don't matter exactly how big the bat was, you're still going out. D'oh. Very simple to grow and yields well, too.

p.s. I think you can make out from the pictures which one is which. Sativa one yielded 60g, Indica 85g.

January, 2004

Only started out planting 7 of my 15 seeds. Was able to nab 3 females out of the bunch. The pictures shown are strictly from the plant which I chose to keep as a mother. The other 2 plants were almost identical in shape & appearance. The main difference here was the significant yield that this particular plant has.

If the high of the other 2 females was worth keeping, I would have sacrificed the yield but there is really no need. This particular plant has a super strong Luden Cherry Cough Drop flavor. The smell really becomes evident after it's been in the jar for a week or so.

I couldn't really put my finger on the smell exactly, until one of my friends came over & smelt it & said, "this smell just like Ludens!". It had/has been so long since I've had those! The strain gets completely coated with resin & more than likely wouldn't be my #1 choice for hash making, because as someone said in a previous review this strain does not have much trim (which quite frankly is alright with me). You DO get trim though & the little that you do get turns into some of the finest kief I've ever smoked.

From beginning to end this plant is a breeze to grow. These pictures show my 1st attempt at a SOG with this strain & needless to say I'm pretty happy with the results. The pictures of the cured buds are from the original plants grown from seed. Even though these plants were cut & cloned (to establish mothers) right before flowering, on average these plants yielded roughly 38 grams, which isn't bad considering they didn't have many established tops from cutting.

The potency level was a little lower than average only because I was really expecting this "incredibly massive & overwhelming high". I really think it's because of how popular it is. It's more than likely my own disillusion. Nonetheless, based upon what I see already this particular pheno can only get better.

Overall a beautiful, high yielding, good tasting/smelling strain with a nice clear soaring high. Recommended!

Grew out the pack with good germination result, 15/15, in about 1.5 days. Vegged under 400 watt HPS for about 30 days. Showed sex around beginning of 2nd week of 12/12, identifying 13/2 in favor of the ladies. I did find some inconsistency with regards to appearance and discarded several runts -that was a little disappointing. Clones were flowered once rooted and placed into flowering room for about 50-55 days of 12/12. They stretched very little and yielded around 1/2 to 3/4 ounce per cola. Extreme caution to indoor growers as these are reeking.

This time growing AK47 I got lucky, one seed was all I needed. Having problems with this plant on my first grow, I decided to try it again and this time I made a few changes. I started my change with some new soil from Fox Farm (Ocean Forest). I added tons of perlite to the mix and watched in amazement at the growth frenzy that happened. I vegged this AK47 female under a new 430w HPS Son-T bulb, witch provided much of the blue spectrum needed for rapid vegetative growth. After my first rough start I also decided to change fertilizers. I purchased Canna Terra series Grow/Bloom nutrients and fed them once in the last week of 50 days of veg (half dose).

I topped this plant once, and got two main stems. I also purchased Canna Rhyzotonic. Fearing this female would get rootbound I transplanted @ about day 52 into a nicer, larger 3 gallon pot with nice drain holes (adding Superthrive), the 3 gallon grow bags weren't cutting it any more (re-usable).

Immediately following the transplant I put her in flower (12/12) and watched 'n waited. Many good people gave me great advice with my AK47 grow; I want to thank them all now for their efforts. With my temp's staying @ 82"o with one central air conditioner, my electric bill was never a concern. Odor with these plants was minimal; I kept my walk in closet heavily ventilated to the attic, supplying fresh air constantly from outside. Resin production was heavy from week 3 onward, gushing out from the calyxes was a Luden's cough drop clear slime that stuck to everything. Resin production reminds me of a lot of Bubblegum plants I've seen, pulsating THC producing monster nuggs is all I have to say... Incred- ibly photogenic, this plant begs you to photograph her. I highly recommend her to any one just for the aesthetics and smell value. Overall this plant was pretty easy to maintain.

Smoke Report:

The smoke is very spicy, fruity in nature... I've heard it described as cherry and I concur. The stone is a very narcotic one. I let this plant go for 74 or so days; a lot of trichomes were dark colored. The smoke makes you cough and your eyes can water. Definitely bowl/bong weed. I hope I covered all the corners of this grow, thanks to everyone who helped along the way, and mega thanks to everyone who voted for me on Picture of the Week for this plant.

Yeah what can I say, AK47 is the "Real Deal" when you are looking to lay your friends out on a half a joint. Serious Seeds did a great job

Germinating: Unbelievable germ rates, 15 beans hatched under a paper towel within 24hours. 9 -15 females 2 runts 4 males.

Vegging: Vegged under a MH all showed sex within 4 weeks, vegged 5 weeks total.

Flowering:: Had a bit of N problem with them in flowering but they did fine. AK can be very sensitive at times when feeding, 1 plant will be starving while the other cant get enough. Keep an eye on them, the smell is strong in flowering take caution.

Harvest: I got an average of 4oz's per plant could of done better if I didn't have the N problem. The final product is a real treat lots of orange and red hairs throughout the crystal coated bud. I harvested when Trichs were 70% amber 30%cloudy, around 50 days plus 3 days darkness.

Smell: When cured it smells very strong, I had them stored in a giant zip-lock baggie in a airtight container had still could smell it in the air.

The High: Legendary as far as potency goes it's a 10. It starts in the head and works it self all over the body. The smoke is heavy, Expansive Lung Effect is how I would describe it. I wouldn't recommend sharing this with novice smokers, I'm a heavy smoker and a few hits keeps me going for hours.

Overall: I would say this strain backs up its reputation, high germ rates..lots of females...nice buds...and of course the High. The photos represent AK47 around 30days flowering and then the budshots after harvest.

Ok here we go...

I cracked 2 of these babys using the paper towel method. They had split within 24 hours. They were then placed in rockwool cubes that had been soaked in a mild solution of formalex and put under the fluorescent. Within 2 days the tap root was showing out of the bottom of the cube so they were then placed in 5ltr pots filled with Bio Bizz all mix and placed in to the vegg room under the Hps. They quickly filled those pots and by the time it came to repot again i had already identified that i had one male, so i repotted the one remaining female and chucked the male. Clones were taken, which rooted quite easily.

I vegged this plant untill it was 1 1/2 foot tall then it was transfered to the flower room.

The stretch was complete by week 4 of flowering where they had settled at 4 feet, by this time the smell was starting to chuck up and the first pistills had started to show.

By week eight the plant was amass with beautiful swollen pistills that were very very sticky to the touch, with a slight cough syrup smell that melted in to a earthy aroma.....

Manicuring was a breeze, hardly any leaf material to remove, so the take down didnt take long....

I've got to say that this is one of the strongest varities on the market, i personally thought it was to thought provoking (but that could just be my head at the mo), everyone else was left looking very stoned, you only need a few joints the buzz lasts for ages.

The taste was not totally cherry, it was fruity for sure but cherry i dont know...when you take a lug you can definatly taste fruity something but that then melts in to a earthy hashy type taste, it's very nice.

Hope my little smoke report has helped you make up your mind about this variety....dont smoke too many....

Grower Report

August, 2004

got my beans via seedsdirect. Popped 4 beans for this grow, 3/4 females...I experienced a bit of variation in my phenotypes, especially when it came to taste/smell/budstructure.although in veg they were all very uniform as to height and leaf structure. Plants were all topped 1 time in early veg (the cherry pheno got topped again on one side)

Pheno #1: My "cherry" pheno, it had the sweetest cherry smell in late veg/flower (the male had this smell too). Its buds were much less dense due to more sativa-ish, UN-nested bracts. Still, it had a very respectable yield. I never weighed the harvest but I'd say all my plants gave me close to 2oz dry, maybe more. This was my favourite during the grow, but that cherry goodness just didn't carry over into the taste like I thought it would, it still has a cherry taste, but lacks a tartness you expect. The potency on this one is not a 10, more like a 9 or so, just a little less like being ran over by a THC train. The sativa headiness comes through most noticeably on this pheno, and the motivational influence is less suppressed

Pheno #2: my "super musky" pheno. Super dense, resin oozing nuggets. The smoke from this stuff is the 1-hitter quitter stuff 10/10 potency. Almost a dead ringer for pheno #3, except for the taste/smell which is hashy and strong, with a fruity kindness that starts to come through only after a nice 1 month cure.

Pheno #3: In the end this one is my favourite: "THE AK-47"

Look/Smell: Looks nice and crystalline. I mean this stuff literally sparkles! Dense/compact super trichome covered green goodness, smells kind of hashy, and sour fruity maybe even cranberry like...after you break up a bowl there is dusting of crystals over your tray, and you have dusty sticky fingers...very resinous...

Taste: about the same as the smell, but the fruity-tartness goes away about halfway through the bowl and you get like a creamy hash taste that lingers. Top shelf stuff indeed!

High: this is some pretty powerful stuff...I get tremors after taking my first hit. You get a short-lived sativa rush, then about an hour will go by like nothing, during which time your thought processes will be going constantly, but before you have time to lock in a thought it will fall into obfuscation. Then, you are doomed by the indica body high that makes gravity feel like you are on Jupiter.

And when they say the smoke is expansive, they mean it. If someone tries to show off and take in a hero sized hit, it will hit back like an Ali punch to the dome, and they will end up down on the ground gasping for air between coughing fits.

I usually end up loading a bowl and nursing hits off of it instead of real stoner "smoke sessions"... if I tried I'd probably forget what I was doing halfway through. Half cased bowls are not a rarity around here...again potency 10/10 with high and low notes.

All 3 had phenomenal yields, all in all some hard hitting stuff, I am pleased with serious' AK47, and I will definitely get around to growing/smoking it again!

*seriouslogo.jpg*Our most commercial variety, this medium height, not too dense plant is the perfect combination of good yield and excellent quality. Smokers that know and grow choose this plant for its combination of appearance and sweet smell. With its indica background Chronic can produce up to 600 g/m2 without losing that connoisseur feeling. Grows a single huge central bud with few side branches. Do not top plants to encourage multiple big buds, as this strain does not respond well. Mild, sweet smell develops while flowering, take care to dry thoroughly after harvest (before packaging) to maintain this subtle fragrance. 3rd prize High Times Cannabis Cup 1994, improved in 2000. Of our strains, this is the best choice for growers tired of losing quality when increasing yield.

The first pheno is slightly taller than the second... what can I say, if you are growing Chronic, yield is what you are going to get. The smell is not OTT and is very sweet, rather nice when growing, but totally different when smoking, rather harsh. I am not a big Indica fan, unless I need a good sleep, this one has a very strong Indica buzz.

4 of the pics are of the first pheno and one, entitled aintshebig.JPG is the second, slightly squater.

They were pretty easy to grow, and Serious Seeds description is basically bang on.

This is a A1 strain bases and I have only seen two hermitic and 1 whorlet in all the plants I have grown out so far!

Being my first grow, I gotta admit things didn't do things perfectly. 6/6 of the seeds germinated and grew into the vegetative stage equally as healthy. Only 1/6 however was female. These were grown in a small closet with little ventilation (only door open when the light was on).

The top cola was a pleasure to watch grow. It was huge! (in the end weighed 20 grams). The rest of the plant took on the form of a christmas tree. All the buds on the ends of branches were pretty big. Chronic performed as advertised.

About three weeks into the flowering period, I noticed the plant was utilizing more Phosphorus than I could provide. Typical first-time grower mistake, I overfertilized it. Once I realized this, I began flushing the medium. My second first-time occurred when I over-watered the plant. A couple larger fan leaves turned yellow and burned (crispy ends) but that didn't stunt the growth of the plant at all.

I cured the buds for a total of three weeks. The scent I got every time I opened a canning jar to smoke made me dizzy it was so strong and good. The smoke was very sweet and went down well. I noticed a strange after-taste in the back of my throat but I'm going to blame that on the miracle grow I was using (today I only use organic ferts). The high starts out like a sativa in the head. After a couple hours of intense video games or other fun activities the high took on the shape of the indica like couch lock. Overall, an amazing high. To this date, I have grown Original Blueberry, White Widow DP, and Chronic. The high associated with Chronic is not only the best I've ever had, but also the biggest yielder.

Chronic is one of my favorite strains. Very easy to grow from seed or clone, it loves high nutes and it's a good yielder. I have been very happy with the results of this plant, my mother is a medium height plant that grows one main cola if left small which is ideal for SOG but the longer you let it veg the more branches you get. The smell varies between phenotypes. The sativa ones smell quite sweet and fruity, while the indica phenos have more of a sweet skunky type smell.

The Pheno I use lies between these two, it is identified by being indica in appearance, medium height, thick stem, but the real giveaway is the smell, if you rub the stem it has a smell of plasticene you know the stuff that kids play with, which you can also smell late in flower, this is the Pheno that gives the best yield with great high.

The Chronic in this grow was grown from a cutting, it was transplanted from a 1" block into a Aquafarm and vegged for three weeks where it was flowered at a height of 2 ft and finished at 54 days at a height of 4 1/2 ft total weight dried was 31 1/2 oz.

Smoke

After properly drying and curing you won't be disappointed with the high and smell of the buds, the high is awesome with great bag appeal. I was surprised when I joined Overgrow at the bad reports I read on Chronic's potency, all I can say is I have grown some of the best strains there are and Chronic is up there, with the added bonus of a great yield . Although the taste may not be to everyone's taste as it can be a bit harsh if not cured properly.

Most people who diss this strain probably haven't done it right. Personally i am very impressed with it. Its CERTAINLY a definite must for growers who have big yeilds at the top of their criteria. The pics show mainly one of the 4 scrogs i've done with Chronic (the best one), there's a couple of other random cola shots in there too.

This strain is great in many ways - 1st up it hardly smells! Really low odour with this one, i can do grows with no carbon filter easily. However, they are only low odour if you dont touch them, rustle a few branches and it can get a bit strong during the later weeks of flower.

Secondly, yep the yields are FAT.

3rdly its strong as hell

But there is one area where it doesnt do as well as many other strains and thats taste/flavour, dont get me wrong its still really nice, just not quite as good as a nice sativa. If you dont cure it nicely it can go slightly indica harsh tasting but avoid that and its gr8.

Pretty easy to grow, it didn't like any more than 80% strength canna flores at most. The 1lb plant came in at 1.12gr/W which i was over the moon with :P

I think more people need to try this passive hydro with airstone combo as it really does deliver the goods. Its also the most basic method of hydro!

Chronic is up there with the best of commercial strains.

Taste Description: Hashy, slightly sweet

The plants all germinated and received 8 females out of 15 seeds.

Plants grew fairly quick through veg and produced a deep hash scent. The plants varied slightly in their indica/sativa characteristics.

I had one plant that showed dominant indica, one dominant sativa, and six fairly mixed plants. It was these mixed varieties that produced the best combination of appearance and high. The sativa plant produced very large fluffy buds, while the indica had more side branching and tight dense buds.

The plants grew very easy and never really showed any signs of stress even with some extended periods of draught. By day 30 the crystal formation was extensive. Rumor made me believe that this plant was only bred for yield and that potency and appearance had been relatively average. However, from the smell and appearance by day 45 I knew this would not be the case. They matured within 65-75 days depending on plant.

They were all grown in single cola, untopped and Chronic seemed to love that. I grew out one pheno in DWC and topped it and it did not seem to respond as well, however I still produced 5 ounces off the one plant.

By harvest time they were massive colas that were gleaming with resin. The many sample buds left me holding my breath waiting for a taste of a cured bud. After a two month cure, the buds were delicious.

The high of the plants was impressive. I found that the majority of the mixed plants gave an initial euphoric feeling followed by extreme hunger and a slight burnout. You could take a nap but it was not a serious knock-you-on-your-ass type of buzz. A very enjoyable daytime smoke in moderation. Most people were pleasantly surprised when they received Chronic as it is quite a bit more potent than the average commercial bud.

There were a great variation in the phenotypes, but look for an evenly mixed plant leaning more towards the indica side. These plants have an amazing yeild, with beautiful buds, and a potent high.

The only thing I was not thrilled about with this plant is that it does not meet up to the potency of some other strains I have grown, while it will still match most of the other strains you will most likely encounter. My main goal is to find the most potent strain, so this is why I am always looking. Some of the buds had a high leaf to calyx ratio as well, which should be avoided when picking a mother. Overall as a commercial strain it will be everything you would want and more. Don't let people tell you its lacking in potency or flavour. While not a tasty bubblegum, it does have a certain flavor that leaves you licking your lips after a joint.

seriouslogo.jpg Arguably the top sativa strain available today. With 90% sativa genetics, Kali Mist grows into tall, running, classically sativa plants with very few leaves. This strain produces dense clusters of full fluffy buds, producing much higher yields than you would expect. The plant structure and few leaves allow the light to pass all the way to lower branches, allowing bottom buds to develop fully. When planted outside early in the year this plant can grow very tall. Expect spiraling flowers with a high resin content and a delightfully spicy scent.

A very nice strain very cerebral high not difficult to work with, great for cloning. Not a very compact plant but yield is good. Always had 100% females and I've grown this strain for two years and I never had any problems with mold or fungus, which means the plants have a very good genetic make-up. In hydro she can handle until 2.0 EC but I noticed 1.8 is the exact amount to get best results. The long flowering period can be shorter if you work with clones. Under stress the plant can have a shorter flowering period. 24/7 cycles during vegetative growth and I harvested after 67 days of flowering. The stigmas are long and very white.

I personally love this strain. It's generally hardy, it handles high heat levels and draught very well, definitely mold resistant, yielded well even during a thrip infestation, etc. Cloning it fast and easy. It seems to respond well to various supercropping methods.

Not much variation in the seeds I grew out, but I did notice that some matured faster then others... No difference in yield between 'em, but because I harvest all at once, I can discern a difference in the high between early and late maturing plants. I'd recommend harvesting all plants on the earlier rather than late side for this strain as there's nothing really gained from letting 'em go longer. The uniqueness of the high is in the up rush and sense of clarity, letting them flower too long will take away from that, without adding anything but heavy eyelids.

Odor in the flower room is low in comparison to many strains and shouldn't be a problem.

Buds are fluffy, so in late flowering it looks you're gonna get a huge yield. But alas, the dried buds are very light. Regardless, I wasn't disappointed with yield. Expect a good stretch on main branches after flipping to 12/12, but don't worry as the buds fill-in quite well.

I don't have too much of a problem with branches breaking under bud-weight, as the buds fill in equally along the branch (ie, it's not a "head on a stick" type). But because of this, you may want to do some kind of tie-down method in order to gain more equal light distribution to the lower section of the long colas.

Smell of the cured buds is quite unique, again on the spicy side of the spectrum, not too pungent or strong.

Taste is delicious, with a slight spicy-hot bite on your tongue (but not a throat-burner). I often catch myself smoking a joint just for the plea- sure of the flavor.

The high is almost not like weed at all: very up and clear, with a visual clarity (brighter whites and greater depth perception) kinda like a slight mushroom buzz without the goofiness. Music and sound is exceptional. I recommend all musicians and producers use Kali Mist as a tool in the studio, particularly in final mixing. This isn't stupid weed, you have normal physical function; your thought process is fast and not blurred. It really shines on active sunny days at the beach or in the park. But it's almost unnoticeable at night on the couch (except for the fact that you can't fall asleep). No harsh/headachy comedown.

Commercially this strain is a flop. Buds are fluffy and unimpressive (no "tight nugs"), not a one hit head-slammer, doesn't smell like a dead skunk, and won't nail you to the couch.

Flowering was a bit slow, probably due to my initial bad start but took of past the 4th week. They went, forever 74 days, but it was rewarding to watch them fill out. All the buds did well and I grew them with no topping and only slight training.

Kali is very difficult to prune and harvest, it took three of us 3 hours to chop 4 plants. We were able to roll 3 joints with the hashy resin on our fingers, very very sticky.

Very cool smoke as rated by nearly every smoker I know and well appreciated by all. If you smoke average weed it'll knock your socks off!

'Kali Mist' from Serious Seeds

- 'Kali Mist'  [VIEW FULL BREEDER REPORT ]

Arguably the top sativa strain available today. With 90% sativa genetics, Kali Mist grows into tall, running, classically sativa plants with very few leaves. This strain produces dense clusters of full fluffy buds, producing much higher yields than you would expect. The plant structure and few leaves allow the light to pass all the way to lower branches, allowing bottom buds to develop fully. When planted outside early in the year this plant can grow very tall. Expect spiraling flowers with a high resin content and a delightfully spicy scent.

Source Description

seriouslogo.jpg These seeds produce plants that are fantastic in both appearance, and effect. Our most typically indica strain, White Russian is a stable cross of AK-47 and White Widow (a prize winning indica clone). Medium height, consistent plants and dense, very resinous flower tops (crystals appear after about 5 weeks of flowering). With such a strong indica background, the plants smell quite strong during both their growth and flowering period. In an independent seed comparison in which over 150 different seedstrains were grown out in a greenhouse, the White Russian came out as the strongest plant (22% THC, likely to be the strongest plant known at present!!). Winner of the overall Cannabis Cup in 1996 and of the Cup for Best Bio Grass in 1997. The plants yield very powerful buds, coated with resin. Very strong, long lasting High, more cerebral than a knockout. Medicinal plant.

Grower Report

February,

Well after fully growing and smoking Serious Seeds White Russian I feel I am somewhat confident to fill this report.

I received 5 WR seeds only to get 1 very nice female. During the first month the plants grew slowly only to pick up after they got established. The plant was not very picky when it came to nutes, it grew very well in both hydro and soil. The node spacing was very close and the leafs turned out very indica dom.

The plant responded very well to topping but I feel because of the node spacing it would be better to grow it Tree style.

During flowering the plant put on a lot of weight in the final weeks, it did not have a very strong smell. The crystal production could have been better but it did not affect the smoke.

One thing I did not like about the Russian was the flowering time, also the plant did not seem very resistant against mites. Other then that it was a dream to grow.

Now on with the smoke....

At first glance the bud does not seem to be anything spectacular, but when looked at it has very good crystal coverage and a very nice smell. The smell is somewhat citrusy and very skunky.

The bud breaks up really well and stays very sticky. One thing I have found is if you are rolling a joint you must roll it loose or else the joint will not pull properly.

Once you take the first hit you can feel a cloud of highness go over your body. After that you stay pretty mellow and buzzed for a very long time. Honestly this weed has no burn out at all. The high is exactly like described in the breeder report.

I started with 15 seeds of which 13 germinated, 9 ended up female. (I only got 6 females out of my feminized seeds last time).

I veged the 13 plants for about 4 weeks before I switched to 12-12 and got rid of the males. At this stage I started giving the plants a different mix of chemicals can't remember exactly what but I know I used Nitrozyme (foliar feed), Ionic Bloom and Ionic Boost.

At about 7 weeks I got a case of budrot which I know now was caused by my dad foliar feeding the buds!!! I got rid of most of it by sacrificing a few main buds sadly but got over it eventually. This caused the grow to take a bit longer than it should have. About two weeks over the pack's recomended time. I harvested it all at different times when I thought it was ready and ended up with a lot of nice bud.

I germinated 11 seeds and they popped all but i only had 3 females, but the best yield ever!

80-90gr per plant for only 60cm plant! Also the appearance was unique, really precious, had like an special aura around them, full of cristals, all buds were as big as the central bud. All big dense and heavy buds full of cristals.

The veg took really long, didn't never look like finished, six weeks at 18/6h and only for 60cm plants at last.

At the veg all plants looked still the same, very indica, but at the middle-end of the flowering one of the plants started to produce a little bit less dense more sativa buds, more like an Ak-47 needed to be cut 8 days after the first two but produced a few more grams than the others. Be careful with overfertilizing with that one, need less than the other ones.

Tip: Better cut some leaves from the inside part of the plants to let the light pass better through to the buds to increase yield, has to many unnecessary big leaves.

Didn't do it, but this variety seemed to work good for SCROG or SOG systems.

All 3 needed relative long time for flowering to be so indica.

Veredict:

Wasn't the best-tasting variety I've tried, but was also good. I was wondering that it didn't taste citric like in the flowering time. Taste was a mix between hash and White Widow, your mouth will be full of flavours, nice mix between Ak-47 and White Widow, the buds were fat, dense and full of cristals like W.W., but as long as Ak-47 buds.

Good high for a long time, not couchlocking.

Really great plant, extremely recommended if you want a yieldking & nicelooking bitch! I only can recommend this variety to all !!!

From 2 seeds 2 females, germinated in 24 hours and straight into Rockwool with a little diluted nutrient being regularly fed. When the roots were happy they were switched to a hydroponic tank. The response was amazing, one plant shot ahead and needed topping because of the height. Both females responded very well to hydroponics, a very time consuming but worthwhile enterprise, not something to be recommended to beginners. The topped plant delivered over 500 grams dried smoke, dried over 8 weeks and lasted well into 2005 in the freezer without any drop in quality. An easy plant to grow, even though they were grown in a hydro solution I placed the cropped branch in soil, took it out of the grow room for two weeks and it picked up beautifully. After three weeks it was back in the grow room and produced a beautiful piece of bud on a stick. Tasted slightly heavier than the plants in the hydro tub. A truly fantastic and easy to grow smoke, great clear high effects - keeps you active and talkative, a good cerebral high for an indica. Have grown in soil as well and the results are somewhat smaller and slower than the hydroponics. The plant was extremely bushy with a very solid trunk, they came in at 1.40 metres high. They like lots of ventilation. A serious plant, great yields, easy maintenance (soil) incredible smoke, very lucid. The switch from veg to flower is surprising, switch to flower and they explode in size, after two weeks to buds start to appear and there's no looking back. Great plant!

Their growth phase was stable; medium growing rate nice leafs no stress...(perfect grow phase).

One thing that stuned me was when I changed to flowering phase (12/12) 400w HPS. These green things gave a BOOM on growing, they went from 25 cm to 125 cm and my female media was about 70% (quite good).

I was very pleased in the harvest since I got 10 liters of non dried weed from 2 plants... Not hard nuggets but very resinous.

When I first smoke it (with 4 friends) ohhhh my god this was the strongest green shit I have ever smoked... Actualy all of my friends did strange things... Source Description spicelogofits.jpg Apollo 11 is a awesome indoor hybrid that is Sativa dominant it has a high calyx/leaf ratio & finishes flowering in 7 weeks or less. Expect some variation among individuals. When selecting a keeper I would aim for the more short heavily branched plants with great amounts off dense, resinous bud sites Apollo 11 and Ice Princess are similarly frosty and potent with different highs & flavors. Apollo 11 can be considered "smart weed", very cerebral and thought provoking, a happy high and a citrus flavor.

This is actually the Apollo 11 G version of the Spice Bros. Apollo 11 (made from a mother exhibiting Genius traits). I germed 4, lost 2 due to germ problems (my fault). Of the remaining 2, one was male and one female -- but oh what a female.

I would say even tho mine had a vague lemon scent & taste that it leaned more to the c-99 side for the high. The high was a nice balance of indica and sativa - you definitely felt the indica influence and knew you were stoned! But it wasn't couchlocky or anything and the head high... well the head high was uplifting, cerebral, and when you smoked enough -- SPEEDY -- hence the c99. The only time it was really speedy was when I used a gravity bong -- it was like being on speed or coke for about 1/2 hour.

This plant was only vegged less than a month and flowered at about 8". Veg showed indica growth characteristics, flower sativa. It is not a stretchy plant but will stretch up to the light if it's too far away, and it is definitely a stretchy plant when it first breaks soil -- you better have light on it or you're liable to end up with a 4" tall flopped over seedling :) I'm growing 3 more currently and hoping to find a genius :) Regardless of the fact that last grow was not genius it was still a fantastic plant and I wish I'd cloned it :) If I don't find what I'm looking for in the 3 plants I'm growing now I will definitely be buying more of these seeds.

I did not yield a great amount from this plant, but I also keep in mind that it was flowered at about 3 weeks old/8" tall with no training of any kind and yielded almost as much as the plants that vegged twice as long. Also my yields suffered due to the pots used I feel with proper techniques and longer veg time as well as improved training this plant would've been a fantastic yielder.

I bought this strain back in 11/03 along with a few others. A11 is now one of the top strains in my garden and will be for as long as I can see. Out of 5 seeds I got four females and one male; the male was discarded. Of the four seeds all the phenos were above average and there were two standouts. Of those two one was a winner with a capital W. That is what I have kept to propagate and what I am basing this report on.

One thing before I start I would like to say. This has been the only plant that I have ever seen that starts growing trichs in veg. On some of the calixes and a small amount on the leaves.

I will just refer to my winner pheno as A11. Let's start with my one complaint with A11, it sucks to clone and is very slow early in veg. It is just really picky and hard to clone. Once I have it cloned it takes a while for things to get started. Where more hardy plants will take right off this can take a week or two to get its legs under it and start to grow. Once it has started it is very easy to stress it out. I waited to repot one plant and it got just a little root bound and started growing three and one pronged leaves, once I repoted it it took a while to start growing normal five stars again. Since I have learned to give it a little extra attention and it seems to be doing great with some extra babysitting. Over all once it gets started growing in veg it is pretty darn good and grows angular branches very fast in a typical sativa form while still remaining quite short.

When I flip it to 12/12 its growth really takes off with no memory of any past problems and starts to really go nuts. At about 10 days its buds start to form with trichs as well. It is the absolute first plant I have to have trichs on it. And has them about a week before anyone else. It stretches but not near what you would think being an almost full sativa. Total stretch was about 25% of its size when flipped. I have indica plants that stretch more than A11. So the size is very easy to contain and won't catch you off guard at all.

After it starts budding it's a drinker, it nearly drinks twice as much water as other plants. Loves the nutes too; I never had any signs of nute problems at all. She starts with a really sweet almost bubblegummy smell in the fist thirty days but from there the smell turns more spicy and citrusy. She finished in 47 days with the trichs cloudy and one or two turning amber. I think it could go to about 50 days no problem if you are looking for a little less up feeling.

The smoke is quite special. When you inhale you get a nice soft sweet smoke that expands but not to much and is not a lung buster. On the exhale you get a taste of the spicyness and a little sweet citrus aftertaste on the back of your tongue. I heard someone describe it the best as "you feel like you are smoking something exclusive". This really is some special smoke.

The high is just as good if not better than the smoke in comparison. After a couple of good tokes you are set for at least an hour. The high is very much as advertised, "up and happy". I really agree with the "smart weed" description. It is not crazy intense either unless you smoke a lot and is very workable on. I built a whole vegetable garden in my backyard on this stuff and it came out better than if I was sober. This is my favorite skiing weed because it just enhances your ability in a very fun stoned way. It's hard really to describe so just try it and find out for yourself, you won't be disappointed with Spice Brother's A11.

spicelogofits.jpg Apollo 11 is a awesome indoor hybrid that is Sativa dominant it has a high calyx/leaf ratio & finishes flowering in 7 weeks or less. Expect some variation among individuals. When selecting a keeper I would aim for the more short heavily branched plants with great amounts off dense, resinous bud sites Apollo 11 and Ice Princess are similarly frosty and potent with different highs & flavors. Apollo 11 can be considered "smart weed", very cerebral and thought provoking, a happy high and a citrus flavor.

August, 2004

For my first grow, i germed 3 seeds, which all came out to be females. In the end, I had three different phenotypes. One was a little taller and fluffier than the rest, showing greater sativa influence, another which was shorter but yielded the most with fatter, tighter buds and the last one, which was a moderate yield but with incredible resin production. One characteristic about this plant is that it produces trichomes very early in flowering. The last pheno was outstanding, so sticky!!! The smell is relatively low odor, it really far from stealth in end of ripening! It has a unique lemon-pine smell that is really like nothing else i've smelled before.

Being a new grower, i really enjoyed growing A11, because it is unbeatable. You can fuck it up real bad, and she'll continue growing. I highly recommend it to anyone growing in tight spaces, with not much experience: new growers!

The buzz makes it a first class smoke though and experienced growers will want to try this one! It is like nothing i've ever smoked, nice citrus taste. The buzz doesn't catch on immediately, so you can actually smoke a lot and realize afterwards that you're really fucked up. Energetic, in the head high, that gets you going and talking! Smoke too much, and you might get a little paranoia, or slightly psychedelic buzz. I made some bubblehash with leaves and then with some buds, and it was killer. Not a great ratio, but what a smoke!

Hope you rocket off with A11!

i was very dissapointed in the beginning. from 2 packs of spice brothers apollo 11 genius pheno, i germinated 15 seeds and only 5 cracked and finally made it after 4 -5 weeks of vegging. Every single one was healthy and green and 4 of them were female! i used 2x18W flouros for the first 4-5 days, 400W mh for a couple of weeks and i had 2 400W mh at the end of veg.

In flowering they stretched 2 times their size. I added 2 400W hps and later 2 more 150w mh. They took their food very well and bloomed nicely (although with a lot of stretch... ;p). First one was cut at day 48 and the rest 3 at day 58.

I used maxicrop for germination and veg, earth juice grow for veg, biobizz bloom and earth juice bloom for flowering plus Biobizz Topmax for all the 12 hour period.

Oh, they were sharing their garden with 2 more Citral from nirvana and 3 C-99.

Yield was about 1.5 oz for the first one and 2 oz each one of the rest.

Smoking is a non-stop pleasure! :) It comes nicely and fills you right up, messing up your brain. It surely messed up my brain writing all this stuff! :)))

A11 is a very stable f2. This is the second breeders A11 f2's I have grown. She is very branchy and also lanky so height could be a problem if not planned on ahead of time. She does great topped or trained. Needs a bit extra N durring the stretch at the onset of 12/12. Resin producing was above average as usual for this frosty girl. She was done at 53 days. Smell was relatively low throuout flower but odor control is recommended. Yielded 24 grams in a 6 liter pot. Not a heavy yeilder but trained to have multiple colas she can make up for it. Quality of the smoke is tremendous. Some of the best I've grown. Flavor and potency are there. I would strongly reccomend her to people looking for a fast sative hybrid. Top quality smoke.

Once again the best of the best come together what more can I say? Apollo 11 can be considered "smart weed", very cerebral and thought provoking, a happy high and a citrus flavor. Apollo 11 = Genius/C99 smelling more like a fruity lemon scent "Genius" which a sister of Princess, although you'd hardly see a family resemblance. Genius is lemon-scented, rather like Lemon Pledge furniture polish actually. Her high is not speedy like Princess, it's a "happy high". As a plant, Genius is a pleasure to flower, producing heavier yields than Princess with similarly resinous floral clusters shaped less like Princess' "braids" and more like a dense cone of sparkling, tightly-packed calyxes & pistils bursting out from between little leaves bristling with stalked glands. Very sticky and pungent smelling. She matures rapidly, finishing in 7 weeks and when the buds are manicured (very easy) and dried, Genius' final product is true "eye candy" to behold. The father plant used to create Apollo 11 was the same as was used to make the current generation of C99, i.e., P94. This male was responsible for adding considerable yield to the current Cinderella 99, i.e., P97 generation. Ice Princess from Brother's Grimm grew some great filthy buds mass of trich rich production. Ice Princess was created by crossing the mother of Cinderella 99 to a male White Widow from GreenHouse. I harvested at around 56 days, and it gave a lovely peak, high I like an up high and I found that at 63 days it becomes much more couch-lock. Ice princess needed to be tied up due to being so top heavy and I lost a few in the last weeks to snapping. Ice Princess is closer to C99 but being 1/2 White Widow it's a somewhat more sedative high than C99. The flavour is like a spicy fruit. This cross is just another lot of dense resinous buds with the scent combine of spice and fruits that produces magical awesome highs with loads of fun.

This was definitely the Apollo 11 pheno of this strain. Developed like a sativa, i clipped at the 5th node and flowered at the 8th. She started flowering on the 17th of Jan. outdoors in Southern Florida, and I harvested her on the 48th day, due to time restrictions and being I'm in an urban area with a half acre yard. She could have easily gone another 2 weeks. I got 22 grams of dry bud from her and with 2 or 3 hits on the water bong you'll have to go do something. The high is all in the head, one of the clearest highs I've ever gotten. This one is definitely a fave in my small gardens from now on.

Matanuska Thunder from Brother's Grimm grew some huge size rock hard buds with many girls snapping due to the great weight and size. I myself found Matanuska Thunder to be very mould resistant compared to other strains with a terrific smooth high and a intensely skunky smell and flavor. Of around 30 females I selected only one was used for this cross and this particular MTF clone produced a strong trait of purple not a result of cold temps. As you know both these strains are known for their legendary highs and above average yields and by crossing A-11 into MTF has lowered the flowering time to around the 7 week mark and still keeping that awesome high that many of us love. Great for the indoor cultivators wanting great yields and highs. This cross is just another lot of dense resinous buds that produces magical highs.

A11xMTF was a breeze to grow. It started strong in veg no real problems to speak of it displayed average growth and was easy to deal with. It was defiantly a sativa, from day one in veg it had long slim leaves and branched very well but remained short and compact.

When I flipped it to 12/12 it stretched for about 2 weeks but still was starting to show flowers for most of the stretch. It stretched to about twice its original size and then promptly directed all of its energy to flower production. It grew like a dream and got plump little buds very quickly that started to smell of fresh cut peaches at first an then later changed to more of a spicy fruit smell.

The buds were very tight and compact, it reminded me the most of C99 in smell and appearance. The last two weeks the buds got very heavy and I thought a few branches might snap but they all held. The buds did start to drape down a lot for the last week mainly due to the wait of the flowers. It finished on day 45 and was put in the dark for 48hrs.

We chopped her and hung for about 5 days then threw the buds in a paper bag for another 5 days, then to the jars for another week before we tested it. The yield although didn't look as big as others was very respectable due to how dense and tight the buds are. An ounce of this looks like a half and ounce of more fluffy bud. I yielded over 5 ounces no Co2. Not bad from seed.

This smoke is POTENT a couple of hits and you are good for at least an hour. My buddy called me and complained that I ruined his golf game because he was so stoned. The taste is of tropical fruit and a nice undertone of spice that I would say is from the A11 side. On the exhale you have a nice sweet taste on the back of your tongue. I have had weed that has had a more pronounced taste but not many.

Over all this has been a wonderful strain to grow and is a very good addition to my garden. I take my hat off again to Spice bros for creating such quality strains for such a fair price.

Another strain I've been working with for the past few months is Dman's Black Spice (Silver Spice x G13 x Black Widow). If you do SOG, and you are looking for a single cola Indica dom strain, look no further.

Let me start by saying this strain will not be in the keeper rotation for my garden.... why, you ask.... cuz its too damn strong. Seriously, I found the high less than enjoyable, due to the overwhelming couch lock that it induces. The flavor is very earthy, like a spicy hash flavor that lingers on the pallet. The flavor to me was reminiscent of commercial offerings, not very distinctive, but not to be confused with a swaggy flavor, this is kind bud for sure.

Growth wise it is a very easy plant to care for. The colomer structure make it a joy to trim, and even though it had a perfuse amount of leaf, it didn't require much trimming, because as you can see, even the fans are covered in crystals. Finish time is about 8-9 weeks (60 days).

3 seeds planted, 3 females. 1 was planted in a bit more space than the rest and so grew bushier, the others grew taller more single bud style. All plants were very easy though, no problems at all from the get go. Big Fat Indica leaves, lovely strong growth.

In flower the stink begins. Grape flavored, wet socks. There is no doubt. I asked a few people what they thought and they agreed as soon as I mentioned the fact. The bud however lost the stinky smell and gets more of a sweet, grapey flavor with lovely hashy overtones.

The smoke is also quite grapey with lovely hashy flavors in the background. The smell in the air is also very perfume grape and hash-like. The high is fast hitting, not overwhelming but immediately noticeable. A very bubbly, bright, sparkly high in the on-set and moving into the enjoyable droop-eyed, slow, Indica high, still quite bright and visual. One of the smokes that I find can blur the vision a fair amount after a couple bowls. A definite tunnel vision smoke, it`s mostly in the eyes here. A great smoke with a lovely smell.

Well first off let me say this was a good strain. Over all, I'm sure that out of a pack of seeds one could find a good pheno.

Germed 5 seeds. I got 3 females and two males; the males were discarded. The three females grew well in veg; they all had very wide dark green leaves and liked the nutes. I never had any signs of over fert or burn at all. I grew them out to 18 inches and topped them then veged until approx. 24 inches and flowered.

In flower all three phenos displayed slightly different characteristics but you could tell they were from the same strain. I imagine this is because they're f2s.

Pheno #1. This plant went bananas literally. It was slow to flower compared to her sisters and had a bland smell, no smell really, not sweet or diesel or anything, just a bland green smell that was not very exciting at all. It finished in 66 days and yielded moderate sized buds that were kind of airy and not very impressive IMO. This pheno showed bananas from week two and I had no light leaks at all. I only smoked one bowl and sold the rest. No real taste but it did get you stoned.

Pheno #2. This plant was a little better. It had a nice coat of resin on it's tight leafy buds. It flowered for 52 days and yielded ok. The smell was of sweet diesel and the taste was about the same. High was moderately couchlock. Over all not very impressive either.

Pheno #3. This was the best of the bunch. This was the most vigorous plant of them all in veg and lived up to its potential in bloom. It was the fastest flowering Bubbleberry that I had. I cut her at 49 days although I have let it go to 55 and had it plump up a little more. This was the blueberry pheno; it had a very nice sweet blueberry/citrus smell with a hint of diesel. The taste was also very nice and sweet. When you take a hit of your J it leaves a very nice sweet blueberry taste on the back of your tongue. This was a great utility smoke for me. It was not too potent but it did get your attention quick. The high is a very nice indica/sativa cross, very mellow and easy. The resin production was good but not out of this world, which is what I look for in a keeper.

Over all I am not greatly impressed with the Bubbleberry. It is a solid strain and I think there could be some real gems in there if you looked hard, but I won't be growing any of the phenos again.

The pics are all from Pheno #3 as I didn't have a digi cam when I was flowering #1 & #2.

BTW I have had nothing but the best of luck with Spice Brothers seeds up to this strain and this report should only reflect this one strain and my experience.

She starts to snow around week 3 and gets stickier every day. The smell is like pineapple candy and very very sweet. I let her go 46 days in flower to avoid the sleepiness when coming down. She is easy to clone and yields really nice. I got about 100grams per 1.5'x1.5'. I grow scrog under 150hps in veg and 400hps in flower.

Very strong, with a hit of "disorientation". You lose yourself in your thoughts and the high lasts about 2 hours. I feel very awake and it seems like things i see get brighter, so a bit of visual too. I've been trying to find strains with high yield and good potency. This is one keeper. She will always have a place in my garden. I also grow HDF, Apollo11G4 now and experimenting others. The high of these three strains is very close in potency! I think HDF gives me a punch of paranoia(the mom is very sativa), and Apollo11G4 is just a super clear as hell HIGH!!! Clear, but definitely HIGH. Indoors is not recommended for beginners. The earliest will finish in 14 weeks. Those that take much longer than this are usually discarded as not practical. Yields are average - the longer flowering time is usually compensated with extra large yields, both in and outdoors. Of sixteen females only 3 were selected for breeding due to there short flowering time and stocky growth and resin production. These three were lucky to reach the 14 week period of flowering.

*A super early maturing male was used this only giving me a small amount of seed due to its early pollination period and all seed were only found deep inside the buds. The originals came from Green house some time back when Shanti was working with them. Originally two seeds of Neville's haze were germinated, producing two females. Since that I've been growing Neville from the cuttings of those females.

Neville seemed to receive as much nutrients as I gave. In the vegetative stage plants don't complain about the nutrient amounts, but in the blooming stage leaves drop away (yeah, usually all of them) - no matter what you do. Finally the plant consists of stems and buds only... Neville's haze prefers higher air humidity, from 60 to 80 % seems to be good.

The stature is really tall and lanky - you can't usually let Neville grow freely. Starting straight under 12/12 is a choice to restrict height, but I prefer bondage and/or using 11/13 as a blooming light. Odor isn't a big issue with this strain, it is not skunkish nor very strong.

Cuttings are a bit tougher part of growing Neville, while most of them take such a long time to root (compared to "normal plants", Neville cuttings may take even 20-30 days).

As a mostly sativa plant, Neville may seem to be "not so effective" to those with higher tolerances. Although, for "lifestyle smokers" I recommend it as an extremely nice "working weed" and for mixing with more couchlock-like indicas. Curing is a must for these buds.

Summa summarum, Neville's haze isn't very difficult to grow but it may require a lot of work especially in smaller growing cabinets. Not for impatient growers, but after some waiting Neville rewards its grower with one of the most refined (though not easy to perceive!) aromas and effects of the cannabis world.

I experienced high germination rates with OS, and found two distinct phenotypes with the hybrid: one short and more Indy dom, and the other a taller, more Sat dom pheno. I chose the Sativa dominant one to work with for cloning. Flowered at 12"...this pheno matured at about three feet with tight internode spacing and side branches that tend to stretch upward rather than straight out. Finish time: 50-55 days.

Very visible trichomes from the third week of flowering on that give this strain plenty of bag appeal. The high is smooth and mellow.

Silver Spice is an easy strain to grow. It clones very well, thus increasing growers success for multiple generations. Silver Spice also puts out trichomes that rival White Widow in quantity. She's a medium feeder, and will feed well with organic or chemical nutrients. The buzz from SS is a nice mix of head/body, and is quite long in duration. Overall SS yields great tasting and VERY potent budz, that's sure to add some zing into your daily routine.

This strain is awesome! It will really surprise you so watch out for the creeper in this strain. If you keep smoking it thinking your not catching a buzz, watchout because your in for a wild ride for a while! I thought this bud was very smooth and it hasn't had a full cure yet. I'm just waiting for this strain to get better with time. I had two phenos and one was real light with ferts while the other would keep taking what ever I gave it! I cut it down after 58 days.

The yield was above avg. Over all it was another great strain from The Spice brothers. They have yet to let me down on any of the strains of theirs I've grown out. So I have The Super Silver Spice to try now! Oh by the way this strain is covered with resin like a snow storm hit! I use two 1000 watt HPS lights in seperate rooms. I fert with all organic for the most part, using Alaska Fish emultion, and Pure Blend Grow for veg. And for flowering I use 1st week Fox farm Big Bloon, Pure Blend Bloom, and in the middle of flowering I use Pure Blend Pro Bloom with jamaican bat shit tea alond with some bone meal tea, and week 5&6 I use Earth Juice Bloom. Then for the last week or two I flush, flush, flush! Oh and extra hlpers I use Super thrive, Liquid Karma, and Greenfuse root stimulator. I also use the Cal/mag from Botanicare.

This strain is a very good strain for those looking for a potent frosty looking plant! I grew mine under 1000 watts of HPS. It is a great S.O.G. strain. The plant is covered with resin, the most beautiful plant I have come across to date. The high is a up high and will keep you motivated, that's for sure! The taste is sweet candy like. That's with a 2 week cure so far. This so far is my favorite from The Spice Brothers! This strain will leave you in love with it from looks to the high its just one incredible strain. I use 2 separate 1000 watt rooms 1 for veg and 1 for flowering! The yield on this strain is good. I got a little over an oz. and I flowered my plants very early! I only used 2 gallon pots. Now if this plant was left to veg longer and put in a bigger pot it would have no problem pushing 4 oz. a plant with out Co2! The buds are hard as rocks. The most dense bud I've ever seen. I have a mixed garden/some S.O.G. some bush. I would recommend this strain, its all that and a bag of chips!

10 seeds were started. the m/f ratio was 5:5

2 were more sativa and 3 were more indica, sadly the favorite sativa was lost, after a failed revegging. The favorite indica(bh2) has survived and thrived.

clones easily, often the 1st to show roots.

bh2 grows a single cola and a few bottom branches. she has long big but slender leaves.

responds well to being topped, you'll get more top colas.

bh2 does not stretch much in flower, and sets flowers pretty quick. resin is visible from 2-3weeks buds tighten up after 4-5w and the plant is ready from 8-9 weeks, and will readily change into beautiful colors, the smell is similar to sweet tooth but muskier and much milder.

The finished plant is a little leafy, but it is easy to trim, most is sugar leaf and the trimmed buds have a block like appearance.

fresh plants smell fruitier as the buds dry&cure, they become more musty and honeyish.

The smoke is thick yet smooth, the flavor is sweet&musty, the high comes pretty quick it's pretty heady at 1st but by the end of the joint you are most defiantly stoned, and not very talkative and usually hungry.

I'm always eager for the next blockhead harvest.

I originally started four seeds in peat pellets and only two became female. I put the four seedlings under two 250W metal halide's to veg, to start in 16 oz. clear plastic solo cups. I used ocean forest soil mixed with 1/3 perlite for the first few weeks the seedlings were fed light doses of canna rhizotonic. After a few weeks i started implementing a more aggressive feeding approach, using bio bizz grow and algamic as directed. I killed the males and watched the females grow short and squat, bushy is the only way to describe these ladies.

BlockHead had a very dense inner construction, large fan leaves blocked important light from reaching the inner parts of the plant, carefully training this plant would be ideal. I didnt train this plant, but i did manage to try to FIM one of the blockheads(bh2) and left the other one alone(bh1). This was my first FIM attempt and i dont know if i did it correctly but BH2 had a very peculiar growth patter, resembling a crowded NYC apartment building(lol). i vedged for about six weeks 3 gallon containers, and saw the ladies get to 16 and 19 inchs tall before i put them into 12/12 photoperiod.

I flowerd these gals under a 1000w hortilux HPS switchable ballast in 5 gallon buckets. In 12/12 they did not stretch much, their final height was 22 and 26 inches tall. Since i only had 3 plants in 12/12 and the other one being much larger, the canopy was totaly un even and was slightly frustrating to work with since i hand feed. The ladies were fed mixtures including : Bio Bizz bloei, top max, and budswell bat guano worm casting tea. The smells during vedge were very faint, but in the later period of 12/12 the smell can get quite heavy, i can only imagine if i had grown 10 or 20 of these block heads in a large room...a carbon scrubber would be advised. This is my first experience with spice of life seeds and it was great, S.O.L.'s buds are amazing, aside from totaly lush green growth block heads also have incredibly thick and dense buds, wich change colors to hues of violet blue and purple. This plant was so beautiful that it won POTW on sept 28 2004(b.t.w - thanks to all who voted for me) A simply spectacular plant, easy to grown and some of the best smoke ive ever grown.

SMOKE REPORT

Block Head, appears blocky when manicured and trimmed out, leaving thick trichome covered nuggies. From about the 3rd week into 12/12 i was drooling to smoke some of it and finally i get the chance, allow me to share with you my experience. I rolled up a bone dry 1.0 gram into a club cabare rice paper with no glue, only the fibers to keep things together. upon lighting it you get a faint fruity aroma quickly swept away by a citrus/grapefruity type after taste. A hint of skunk is there but im not quite sure, a fine smoke i held a breath in to check the expansion and it was there. i coughed a bit and my eyes waterd, and off to the couch i locked. Red eyed and hungry, 20 minutes later i was found devouring left over pizza. What can i say, i simply love block head, im convinced this is the best smoke ive grown to date. I plan on growing all of the spice of life seeds, id kill for a pack of Blue Sattellite #2 since i cant find them any where.

Some of the plants yielded very well, except the purple ones. Only a couple turned purple, but all of them were covered in gooey, sticky resin. Blue Satellite #2 (DJ Shorts Blueberry Sativa x SOL's Sweet Tooth #3)

Veg Stage: B.S.'s germination rate was 12/12. The male to female ratio was 4/8. It grows very strong and fast in Veg. stage. All phenotypes grew very uniform and the strain in my opinion seems very stable. I only grew out the 2 strongest and both were very similar in veg and bloom. It grows very vigorous and only needs 5-6 (35-45 days is good) in veg. The strain truly is a mix between a great Sativa and Indica. Be careful not to give too much nutrients. I have always had problems with Blueberry and it being real picky about nutrients. I usually only give it "¾ the recommend dosage of nutrients. My suggestion is to top it before you put it in bloom (a few days before is good). Even though the leaves may look deep Indica (in all my phenotypes) it tends to have a good stretch. Clones root at lightening speed.

Bloom stage:

Excellent! This plant is a joy to grow in bloom and in general (after I have topped). The ST#3 gives the plant a very nice yield and adds to the flavor. The Blueberry adds that excellent high and a great flavor as well. Also the Blueberry makes the BS more mold resistant. This was a problem I encountered with the pure ST#3. You can expect 4+ ounces (no co2) for a nice sized bush. The plant has excellent trichome production as well. It takes on the characteristics of the parents with crystal packed buds. It also is quite fast (for my garden), being fully mature in 50-56 days.

Final evaluation:

The price is steep, but you get what you pay for and this strain is worth the money. I really would also like to try the BS#1. Since I am a big fan of Shiskaberry (grow report later). I really did not like the ST#3 all that much, but these 2 strains (blueberry + ST#3) makes a great combo. The smoke is very tasty and smooth. A very balanced Indica/Sativa high is what you can expect. It hits very nice to the head. The smooth flavor from both parents is evident in the taste. The bag appeal of BS#2 may be its best attribute. The buds are very thick packed with trichomes making the bud nice and thick. My congratulations go out to DJ Short and Breeder Steve for an excellent combination. Hopefully we can see more of there stuff together in the future. Overall this a excellent strain that currently resides on my top 10 list. Also this strain is excellent for bubble hash production.

Was grown under a 400 watt HPS. Yield could have been better provided it was vegged longer. During flowering there was a timer problem and lights weren't on for 3 days. The LUI did not hermie at all while some other plants I had in there did. Took the plant down at around 50-53 days flowering (don't remember exact date). Yielded a nice big main cola. I could see this as a great sog plant. Could produce really resinous, heavy, dense colas.

Smoke: LUI is a very interesting smoke. Has the fruity taste but it's almost minty. The high is a very good one. After a couple hits you will be good for a while but don't plan on doing anything besides sitting on the couch watching tv. It is easy to smoke too much of this weed and be dizzy and what not. High lasts for around 1-3 hours and I smoke what I would say a lot (not sure how much in a day but I usually smoke a bowl every 1-3 hours).

So all I really have to say about this plant is it was easy to grow. It didn't require any work really besides watering it and watching it explode with bud growth. I would recommend LUI to anyone looking for a nice indica high, especially if you have had SWT because it is a SWT hybrid, but the Ortega just adds a nice little punch to the high that you are kind of missing in the SWT3 and the buds are just as dense if not denser.

February, 003

Definately a good strain. I started with 5 LUI seeds, 4/5 germ, 2/4 were female. One turned out to be the branchy ortega pheno and the other the columnar sweettooth pheno. They were vegged for about 6 weeks then both females were placed in a 10 gallon rubbermaid to share for the bloom period. They were fertilized occasionally with age old organics.

The first 2 budshots show the sweettooth pheno. It was a lot less branchy than the ortega, taller and more columnar. I found this plant to have a much sweeter smell and also be a little frostier. The buds are not nearly as big, although the colas are longer. It only yielded about 30 grams for me.

The second 2 budshots are my ortega pheno. It is very branchy, without topping it was turning into a nice bush. The smell is more hashy and earthy than the other pheno and the smoke has a nice creamy finish. The buds are a lot bigger, although not as long, this pheno yielded almost twice as much for me, about 55 grams. The leaves are also slightly wider, although not much. This plant was also slightly less mature when the 2 came down.

The smoke is very similar for both phenos, although i think I prefer the ortega. It is a fairly powerful narcotic high although there is stronger out there.

I bought a pack of LUI beans from seedsdirect in 2003... they were siiting in my fridge for 2 years before I germed them!!

9 out of 10 seeds popped. With 3 dying due to general seed-newbiness. Another was killed when not watered! So I was left with 5 seeds; out of which I luckily got 4 females and one stud. The male was chopped when identified, and the 4 females were transplanted into 3.5L pots filled with coco. After indentifying the various pheno's (1 x swt#3 pheno, 2 x 50/50 pheno's- high of the ortega and taste of the tooth, & the Ortega pheno) the ortega pheno was chosen to go onto my NFT tray under 1200w of hps with her 3 sister pheno's in pots filled with coco sitting next to the NFT, on the sidelines.

The ortega pheno branches out alot and would do well as a bush or in a scrog. The buds are not long but phat and very very dense. Watch out for mould!! I got hit by it late bloom only found when harvested... The high will put you out... simple! The taste is hashy and spicy.

The 50/50 pheno's I had were both sweet as hell with the smaller yielding one being the better/sweeter smoke of the two. The high leans toward the ortega; pretty stuppifying! The taste is sweet and hashy

The swt#3 pheno was a strange one... grew out mutated in veg. Then looked like it was'nt gonna put on any weight and then packed it on in the last 2 weeks. It could've gone 60-65 days and would've had a better smoke & heavier yield. tatse was sweetish, but kinda dull.

All in all this is definatley a good strain. I got a keeper from 5 beans! Taste, high & yield are all there.

Not a good strain for bubble- yield or taste, IMO.

- 'Moonshine Rocket Fuel'

Medley of Moonshine Rocket Fuel is the first peak at some special work being developed under the Joint Project Label, between DJ Short and Breeder Steve. This is some potent pot, containing the best of Blue Moonshine and Blue Velvet. These first seeds, are the secondary picks on the way to the finished product Moonshine Rocket Fuel, and as they are in short supply, and never to be reproduced, these are an interesting edition, containing three major phenos. Classic Blue Family appearance, some good yielder, frosty and flavourful. Each plant will be unique. All will finish in 9 weeks.

MRF is a cross of DJ Short's Blue Moonshine and Blue Velvet. These seeds came from the original crossing made by DJ even though they were distributed by SOL. I believe Steve has worked with the original cross to create a more stable strain for future MRF seeds.

I got 3 fems from 10 seeds. There was a lot of variation/mutation in this initial cross but I did get one very nice plant. The plants started to produce a very nice fruity smell about 3 weeks into flower. The plants took 60 days to finish and produced some very dense, resin covered nuggets. During the last 2 weeks it turned a very attractive purple/pinkish color.

The dried and aged bud is excellent. It has a very pronounced fruity/berry flavor that turns a little musky after a few hits. It has a very nice Indica high, not motivational but not devastating either. It's a very pleasant and flavorfull smoke with great eye appeal.

These were selected for yield and resin productivity respectively. The father was the most incredibly resinous. Blueberry Male from DJ Short Collection. This male had tight stamen formation. Solid purple male clusters as firm as then flower. You will have a high yield of very large buds and few to no branches. The buds are exceptionally frosty with some purpling. A tangy and tastier aroma than other big yielders. The gland production will amaze you as you screen your trimmings. Also very potent and easy to trim. What are you waiting for ? Besides the intense blueberry jam aroma of the father, the most distinctive aspect of the plant was its chromatic resin. The top male bud was cured, burnt, and passed the test. There was some pheno variation in the seeds popped, allowing a grower to have a bit of choice in pheno selection to suit their particular set up, but overall fairly uniform in appearance and growth. None stretched too much, 2.5x max from when they were switched to 12/12. The pheno I kept finished just over twice the height.

Cloning was simple and straightforward, roots showing after 10 days.

This plant was keen to go into flowering, showing preflowers on 24 hour light. Bud set was clearly happening within 2 weeks of 12/12. The plant was not too branchy or too compact, meaning that you could use it for a range of growing methods (SOG, SCROG, etc.). I did my usual supercropping technique (pinching out tips a couple of times and twisting stems). Nodal spacing was tight on the tops, but the individual buds in the colas didn't fatten as I expected an indica to – they were more finger-like.

Trichomes started to appear early in this one – the first pic is the bud at 30 days. The second pic shows the plants at 32 days and gives a reasonable idea of how these plants develop shape-wise.

Pistils started to darken early on this one – the fourth pic shows pistils at 48 days but the trich's clearly showed that the plants weren't ready for chopping, they eventually came down at 62 days (pic 5). By this time 90%+ of the pistils had darkened.

This plant is absolutely dusted with trich's and the final appearance overall is very pleasing (pic 3). Great for bubblehash etc.

The strain seems to like a fairly strong nute mix throughout its life cycle (at least in my NFT tanks).

The smoke is a classic hashy one – earthy with obvious caramel taste, fruity flavours mixed in behind, you can feel this one in your lungs but it isn't unpleasant. The overall combination is a bit like sandalwood! The hit is a bit of a creeper, takes a few minutes to come on and feels like your edges are turning to marshmallow! Not paralysing though (unless you want to chill) and no paranoia. Found it particularly good for listening to / making music, as well as having a laugh playing games with your mates!

Has become a key part of my home breeding programme!

Yield in 1m square with a 600w HPS: 678g

I got a good germ rate with these seeds, out of 6 planted they all popped. During veg these plants grew very uniformly in 1 gallon pots. They took the veg nutes well, but weren't quite as greedy with them as their neighbors; sol's sweet Tooth#3.

At five weeks the preflowers revealed a 50/50 m/f rate, so I got 3 females. These were repotted into 3 gallon pots and some low stress training commenced.

One of the 3 females was showing some stress and general ill health, so this plant was removed from the grow room and placed outside.

The remaining 2 plants grew almost identically, each with 2 large main colas. The buds looked dense, but upon inspection were quite airy. Trichome production was astounding, starting at about 20 days, smell was a musty/hashy/berry aroma.

The plants stretched minimally and finished at around 63 days they were about 2-2.5' tall with beautiful purple accents on the buds.

I was disappointed with the yield from this plant (1.5 oz from 2 plants), but have since learned that it's not meant to be a heavy producer, but a hash producing strain.

The outdoor shishkeberry was repotted once in midsummer, it attracted all kinds of bug & mites and I severely neglected her, but still managed to yield 130 grams. It finished 22nd of November at about 5' tall. All of this plant was turned into tasty sticky hash.

Sweet Tooth #3 (fourth generation, 3rd Backcross to Sweet Pink Grapefruit mother). This Sweet Tooth is the result of one backcross line wherein the goal in searching the father was an emphasis on the taxonomy and aroma of the original SPG mother. The Grapefruit is a true favourite among growers and consumers. It is possibly the most cultivated strain among commercial producers in Vancouver. The preceding BX2 seed that the father was selected from produced quite homogenous grapefruit-like plants, this generation should be suitable for crossing. The plant is high yielding for a Sweet Tooth yet retains the exceptional candied sweetness this strain is famous for. A beautiful plant with a beautiful taste and a positive vibration. A smiling high is guaranteed from these heady flowers. The plants are quite hardy and easy to grow, and prefer a drier finishing time, as the buds become fat enough for mold to be of concern. These chunky monkeys often require staking but in a windy location they should be stout enough to hold their own (significant) weight. Does well as a small bush but will become a large bush given adequate growth parameters. Whether this is an exceptional commercial strain or head stash is for you to decide. I truly hope you enjoy these plants as much as I do. Indoors Flowering: 8wks Outdoors: mid.Oct.& Indoors Yield: Way Above Average (easily 500gms per metre) Outdoors: Above Average

Veg:

I germed all 10 seeds and all 10 popped. I got 6 females and killed 2 of the weaker plants. All the plants I grew out where the same pheno.

Seemed like they where all grapefruit dom.

It grows very strong during the veg. phase. For a nice size bush I veg them about 7 weeks (49 days). They look very lush and vigorous during veg. stage.

Bloom:

The yield on a 4 foot plant is between 3-4 ounces (No CO2). Its slow to show signs of bud initially in bloom stage. Colas will develop very thick and dense. If humidity is an issue be careful with this strain. I had mold problems every time I grew it (Breeder Steve says newer versions like ST#4 and 5 are much better with mold problems). The trichome production on the plant is above average. The stature of the phenotype I had appeared more indica then sativa, but still was above average on height.

Smoke Report:

It makes some pretty decent bubble hash. The nug size is very decieving. They weight much more then they appear to. The smoke is above average. Smooth taste not by any means overwhelming. High is sufficient, but does seem to last awhile. More of a body high then a head high with my phenotype.

Overall Assessment:

The ST#3 has a great yield. It also grows very vigorous. Breeder Steve (Spice of Life) has some fine genetics in this plant. The mold was a serious problem for me. Make sure you have excellent venting. The ST#3 has a very smooth almost fruity/creamy/musk smell and taste. The high was also very smooth, mostly body stone. Overall a very good strain.

Sweet Tooth #3 (fourth generation, 3rd Backcross to Sweet Pink Grapefruit mother). This Sweet Tooth is the result of one backcross line wherein the goal in searching the father was an emphasis on the taxonomy and aroma of the original SPG mother. The Grapefruit is a true favourite among growers and consumers. It is possibly the most cultivated strain among commercial producers in Vancouver. The preceding BX2 seed that the father was selected from produced quite homogenous grapefruit-like plants, this generation should be suitable for crossing. The plant is high yielding for a Sweet Tooth yet retains the exceptional candied sweetness this strain is famous for. A beautiful plant with a beautiful taste and a positive vibration. A smiling high is guaranteed from these heady flowers. The plants are quite hardy and easy to grow, and prefer a drier finishing time, as the buds become fat enough for mold to be of concern. These chunky monkeys often require staking but in a windy location they should be stout enough to hold their own (significant) weight. Does well as a small bush but will become a large bush given adequate growth parameters. Whether this is an exceptional commercial strain or head stash is for you to decide. I truly hope you enjoy these plants as much as I do. Indoors Flowering: 8wks Outdoors: mid.Oct.& Indoors Yield: Way Above Average (easily 500gms per metre) Outdoors: Above Average

The Sweet Tooth #3. What a bouquet. The smell and the taste are top notch. The yield is good. The nugs are big and very dense. Is like go and smoke a green good-smelling rock. When you cut it in two -with a scissor of course- the pungent extremely sweet taste shines. So at that point before smoking it all people with you are happy and just fun. The smoke is tasteful from the first toke to the end. This weed is potent. Despite what other people say I feel it quite potent. For chronic smokers I think there are others more potent strains. The effects are nicely balanced, somewhat body, somewhat heady, overall is medicinal, perfect for hanging out on the day, and perfect for stay at home at night. Anyway I harvested one pheno (the sweet chunky smaller one) at 54 days, and the other (the coffee smell, bigger and more potent) pheno at 70 days.

Medical use as an aid to sleep when smoked in large quantities.

This strain develops very thick main/primary stems and secondary branching early on, which tells me it is capable of putting on some real weight. These plants were vegged for about 28 days, flowered at approximately 12 inches and they took 45 to 49 days to finish. Average plant height at finish was 28". Strain description says finish time is approximately 56 days and I see no need for them to go past 56 with most of the garden finishing at 46 to 49 days.

As you can see this strain is nearly all bud from base to tip on nearly every seed grown out.

Every plant was extremely uniform with the buds being extremely thick and weighty, some of the tightest buds I have had the opportunity to grow... ROCK HARD NUGS! One girl in the garden had a very strong Pink Grapefruit smell to her which is a telltale trait of this Signature Series Strain. She was my favorite specimen in the garden. Excellent all around strain!

IMO, The Sweet Tooth #3 is not a very good strain to use for hashmaking, reason being this strain has a very high calyx to leaf ratio leaving you with very little waste and or sugar leaf to use for this.

I give Sweet Tooth #3:

6 for Potency
9 for Uniformity
8 for Stability
9 for Production
10 for Ease of Growing.

Overall this is an amazing strain that is perfectly suited for the Indoor Gardener.

Germed 10 and got 4 females 4 males. This report is on the Sativa pheno only. I was not impressed with any of the Indicas. I rooted clones easily in 10 days. The Sativa pheno is by far the best. Easily identified by the lime green color. Amazing growth and short internodes. Leaves were very large making SCROG training a little tricky.

Veg- 30 days including SCROG training

- DWC EC range 0.8-1.2 PH 5.3 GH nutes Spray-n-Gro

- Decrease budsites in SCROG. 2" per is ideal.

Flower - 55 days. I harvest early at D50.

- Ebb&Flow EC range PH 5.6 1.4 - 2.5

- STRETCH is a 8 and finishes at 14 days

- Foliar feed w/ fish emulsion 2wks

- KaBloom added at week3

- 12 day flush

This is a very easy strain to grow. Resin coats the shade leaves also. Very frosty. The Sativa pheno yields way more due to short internodes and massive branching. Easy to clone and no hermie traits or male flowers after 3 grows. My pheno yields pretty good for my conditions. No CO2 85watts per sq/ft. Very easy to manicure.

Taste - It really does taste like it smells. Rotten fruit w/ a hint of berry. Great in a Blueberry blunt.

High - I know people knock this strain, but I don't think they are smoking the Sativa pheno. It isn't an overpowering high. Just a great all day anytime smoke. It keeps you going with a mellow feeling. I harvest early for the "headier buzz". Not a Mercedes more like a Camry.

100% germination from seed, ~50% female. The growth on these plants was phenomenal during veg, they grew with a tallish narrow struture from seed. Easy cloners and forgiving of mistakes.

The first thing that was noticed during flower was the wonderful sweet smell, not like typical cannabis at all. They grew big single colas if grown from seed, and there was lot more branching when grown from a cutting. Very crystallly buds, they look white during mid flower. The buds were super dense (keep humidity levels low) with a good calyx to leaf ratio. Really, really quick to trim and there were no bullshit buds down low. Yields were very good.

The high is very uplifting and happy in an energetic way. It is a strong spacy stone, and there is absolutely no paranoia. Just the opposite I find being blitzed on SwT#3 leaves me quite confident while in public.

The sweet tooth high is quite unique, the first toke or two are very uplifting and good for during the day, another toke or two and you're starting to be very stoned but still functional and not much heaviness to it. If you carry on and have a couple more tokes it suddenly turns into an Indica and it's pretty much lights out soon afterwards. We found one particular pheno that was slightly more Sativa leaning than the others with a tangy berry smell, its smoke was particularly good.

Overall this strain was a pleasure to grow, and I'd definitely call it beginner friendly.

Sweet Tooth #3 is a good grower and is fairly stable with some variation though. Good vigor with pretty good yields. Not very branchy and would probably do best in a SOG setup with no topping of plants. Flowers in about 60 days

Very crystalized and very chunky, dense nuggets. Wonderful sweet grapefruit taste. Not an extreme taste, but definitely has some really nice flavor. Buds smell great when broken apart. Mostly indica high, but nicely balanced. Pretty good potency, about a 7 out of 10. I like it because it has a pleasant Indica stone but it is not devastating or day ending (I like the devastating Indicas the most, but only to smoke at night)

It is definitely an indica you can smoke during the day and not be completely devastated. Nice relaxing stone. Semi-euphoric (not quite as euphoric as Bubblegum or Bogglegum) and no edge to the high.

These were vegged for about 5 weeks under fluros and then flowered under a 1000W HPS. These were taken at around 50 days of flowering and are close to harvest. They went a total of about 60 days.

There was a little variance, but 3 of the phenos were very similar and leaned to the Grapefruit side of the cross. The other pheno seemed to have more Afghani in it Started 7 of the 15 beans in the pack. 100% germination, and I got 3 females and 4 males. They grew quickly in veg, very vigorous and lush. All looked almost identical as well, very stable. Out of the three females I got two pheno, one of them yeilded a little less, and leaned more twords the blueberry side, the other two were more fruity grapefruit smelling and yeilded better. All 3 of them hermied late in flower for some reason, I think this is pretty unusual for sweettooth. So all potential moms were thrown out, and I will start the other 8 beans to look for a non hermie mom. They were very easy to grow, took nutes like a champ, flowered quick, and packed on the resin very early. The dried/finished product looks very nice, great bag appeal, but the potency does not hold up to the looks I think. This is some good all around bud to smoke, but doesnt get you too stoned. Overall I liked the sweettooth, it was just what I expected it to be, but I dont think she will be a high priority in my garden.

Pheno 1:

(Blueberry)

I favor this branchy pheno because of it's superior resin production and blueberry aroma, not to mention the higher potency and longer lasting effect than pheno 2.

It's a bit leafier and doesn't yield as much, but this will definitely be the one to stick around in my garden. I picked some at 6 weeks but I think it should be picked at about 45 days. As for the high, I'd call it a daytime daze with happy overtones... You can smoke it and get stuff done, but over indulgence may lead one to a cheerful but somewhat lethargic couchlock state.

(Lemon skunk)

This one is better for starting off a day... Though a bit of a slouch on potency it provides a clear headed, happy-go-lucky buzz that barely dazes me out, even with some over indulgence.

I find this pheno best when picked @ 55-65 days. It's less leafy than the BB pheno and yields are slightly above average. This one is more top dominant than branchy which makes me wish I had more watts to watch em fill up under... They pack a skunky/musky odor when ripening. Such beautiful limey green buds they are!

Referring to my gallery and reading the various reporting I've done on this strain will help immensely if you are considering this one. It is just one of those super fast growing, ultra vigorous, amazing strains.

It seems unique in stature and characteristics from any other breeders stock, the same goes for all of Breeder Steve's strains, they're all like from another planet or something. This plant loves water and Magnesium! It absolutely goes nuts in a hydro set-up, growing big thick strong stalks and is almost tree-like, very big strong fan leaves with big ultra fat indica webs and veins, but strangely stays very flexible despite its strength if pulled down by the weight of it's massive cola structures and trains well on the outer branches, i.e. bending it all around itself and training sideways, etc. Could do a huge plant in a little cabinet and nobody would know! Very stealthy and low odor strain and doesn't smell anything like the typical skunky discernable Mj smell from a lot of strains. Makes the whole room smell like baby aspirins or something. The appearance is ridiculous, this strain is the most crytally I have ever seen anywhere, totally caked in glands and the smell is really really sweet and ultra citrus/fruity, like smuckers jam, you wouldn't even believe your nose (I didn't). The smoke is thick and white if you flush them right, and the taste is sublime godly poopy hash. Supreme bag appeal! This shit looks like it's from another planet! I just can't say enough good things about this strain, clones super easy and after rooting they look like totally healthy and green like nothing happened, are very mold resistant unlike the #3 before it, and outdoors mature around the beginning to second week of SEPTEMBER in the USA, beating the frost basically everywhere. If you want something that is very strong genetically, and shows sex under constant light at like 3 weeks from seed so you can pull the males early and concentrate on the ladies, then this Sweet Tooth #4 is the strain for you.

Oh, btw... The buzz is warm and fuzzy, VERY CLEAR, relaxing, anti-anxiety type. NO racing heartbeat type shit... It will have you falling over giggling and laughing and eating everything in the house. Oh you may end up having a few more kids too if the chicks around when your smoking this shit! Shwwwiing! Nice herbal medicine, stomach and stress soothing type nuggz, like you have no worries mon!

All 10 that I germed popped. Went through growth stage for 6 weeks. Leaves not as big as I remembered Swt#3 being. Stalk also not as thick as #3. Five females flowered.

Two were similar to Swt#3 in smell but bud density was not there so the yeild was average. Resin production was also average. These 2 were done in 8 weeks.

Two did not resemble #3 at all. They had pinkish colored hairs and were not very stinky. Resin production was below average. These two took around 9 weeks.

The last one was head and shoulders above the rest, literally. She was the tallest all through veg so I had to top her to keep her height the same as the others. Pinkish hairs and low odor like the second two I mentioned. Resin production was enormous. Absolutely frosty. Plus she was done in 7 weeks which is outstanding.

In all I would not buy another pack of these again. Four out of five plants were below average. I would have been better off getting the Swt#3 again. Not what I expected from Breeder Steve but he is still one of the greatest in my book.

I germed 5 seeds and got 3 nice fems. These were very easy to grow and seemed very consistent. This is a very stable strain. They all finished at around 60 days. Yield was about average. In comparison to SWT#3, the buds are not as solid and not as spicy tasting, but the SWT#4 is much frostier and sweeter tasting.

The flavor of the bud has a sweet grapefruit/fruity taste that is very smooth and pleasant. The potency was an average Indica stone, but all the bud was seeded. Very nice trichome production.

Grower Report

October, 2003

After growing the Sweet Tooth#3 I was anxious to see how the #4 compared. I started 12 seeds, which all germinated simply by giving them a 24 hour soak in tap water and then planting them directly into the Bio-Bizz Allmix in 1 gallon, square containers placed 2' below a 600w sodium light.

All the seedlings grew rapidly into vigorous plants which showed sex under an 18/6 lighting schedule at 4-5 weeks. I was left with 9 females. As soon as a female was spotted it was transplanted into 3 gallon, square pots of allmix, 2 days later the main stem was tied down to allow the other shoots to catch up. The tying down of shoots and branches continued until approximately week 7 when the plants were put into 12/12. With tying down most of the plants were a little over a foot high.

In flower most of the plants stretched, but not too much (for my room height), their final heights finishing between 2' - 3'. There were 2 distinct phenotypes that I experienced - 1) A taller, stouter, darker green, piney smelling pheno 2) A squatter, lighter, more grapefruit smelling plant with more branching, that was easier to train.

Trichome production started about 12-14 days into 12/12 and the buds were solid, with many beautiful purple hues. The one plant that I didn't manage to train that well, resulting in a more traditional 1 main cola style plant had mold in the bud so training to spread the bud mass out is a must with these (so is a dehumidifier).

I'd recommend these plants to first time growers and anyone wanting a medium strength, happy buzz.

I'm smoking some of the above that has been cured for 6 weeks and the cure improves everything from potency to taste to smoothness of smoke.

i ended up with 2 fem and 4 males. my environmental conditions in the veg room are average (much better in the flower area) but i probably stressed them a bit more then would be recommended. i took 4 clones of the fem (the stems are very woody and even though i tied them down the clone possibilities were limited.

Bubblegum is a well known strain that originated in Indiana in the 1970?s and taken to Amsterdam 1990?s. The lineage is Big Skunk with some NL#5.

Bubblegum is my favorite mostly Indica strain because it has an uplifting and euphoric high. It?s a great even head and body high that doesn?t feel lethargic like most Indicas. It has a wonderful fruity smell and taste. It?s a high yielding strain that commercial growers will love and a high that connoisseurs will love.

I grew out 5 females under 400 watt HPS lights. This is one of the most stable strains I?ve grown. All the plants looked pretty much alike and the dry yield ranged from 4-5 ozs off 3 ft. plants. The plant in the photos is my keeper because it was the best yielding.

Bubblegum grows compact and works well in SOG and small area grows. In SOG I get around 3 ozs per sqft.

Grower Report

May, 2004

Perhaps a good place to start this report would be the negative aspects of this strain, of which there are none! This is truly a killer example of cannabis breeding. It is ideal for indoors. Seriously, one could not ask for a better indoor plant; short stature, controllable odor (carbon filtration a must), strong, heavy yield, etc etc.

The appearance of these plants is very nice. If I were to picture in my head the ideal of a cannabis plant, it would be a Bubblegum, they're beautiful! Trichomes all over the stems, fan leaves, etc. Yes, you read right, 2.5 oz per plant! I am sure a more experienced grower could do better. Shit, I could do better, this was my first attempt at hydro! The kicker is, each plant yielded exactly 67.5 grams to the tenth! I re-calibrated my scale (palm 5.0), and even asked someone to bring over a different make and model (tanita 1479v) because I could not believe the results. 67.5 grams a piece, each plant had the exact same yield, despite the fact that they were very different looking specimens. The largest bud/cola ended up being just short of one whole ounce, at 14 inches by 24 grams. Manicuring them was not a hard task, I would say they have a high flower to leaf ratio.

The high is a good one, it's a hard feeling to describe but it's good none the less. I'd have to say this is more of an evening smoke, however. Don't get me wrong, I smoke it all day long, but some of the more sensitive among us may end up passing out after a bowl or so. Good stuff, good stuff. Be warned, though, if you smoke more than a gram or so in one sitting you are going to sleep within an hour or two, no way around it! This is potent shit, enjoy in moderation. On that note, it would also make an excellent medical strain in my eyes. It has great potential as a commercial strain as well, great potential.

I'm always searching for mostly Indica strains which don't send me sleeping on the couch after a long day at work and TH Seeds Bubblegum is my favorite so far. I've grown TH's BG before and have grown all 3 BG's (TH, Nirvana and Serious BG) in this grow at the same time and TH's wins hands down.

What I like most is that TH's BG is the most uniform and consistent cannabis strain I've grown and other growers have told me the same.

I grow tall plants and try to fit as many as possible and the BG are the only ones who have excellent lower bud production even if cramped and with little light producing rock hard buds. The resin production is very good as well. Never had any over fertilizing problems with chemical nor bio ferts so far. They just grow so healthy with dark green leaves and the typical indica broad leaves. The serious BG's grew more like Sativa's to my surprise.

Last time growing TH BG all plants had the perfect "Christmas tree" appearance. This time around my light timer broke when on vacation and they were sent back into vegetation leaving me with 2 meter plants indoor effecting it's true stature.

At the end of flowering mold hit my garden. Most of the top colas with their hard buds had to be thrown away. In my last grow without mold they yielded somewhere between 1,8 - 2,5 ounces. It was raining here for 3 weeks straight leaving humidity way to high. Even the dehumidifier couldn't help. So not the fault of the strain.

I love this strain and will grown it again and if your looking for a easy to grow strain which doesn't knock the wind out of your sails after smoking BG is worth the grow. It's consistency makes growing her a real treat.

This strain can make a beginner look like a pro. The ease of growing is unbelievable. The trich frosted leaves are insane. The buds look to be sugar coated. Very dense buds and short stature make it the ideal stealth grow. I have grown many strains but the bubblegum is my old reliable. Everyone that grows should try this strain. 30 days to mature 60 flower = show type buds that will amaze. I believe this is one of the most over looked strains. Does well under low light conditions. I run 3 to 4 a 150 HPS.

This is real candy. With a definitive kush bottom this pure Indica will melt in your mouth and stick to your hands. Thick, deep green leaves and fat dense buds will make every trip to the grow room feel like being, "a kid in a candy store." Chocolate Chunk is quite easy to grow due to its quick flowering-time and "single cola" growth pattern. Works great with sea of green method.

7/10 seeds germinated, 3 of which were female. Many of the seedlings showed strange twisted leaves, and some polyploidism. 2/3 females had the strange twisted leaves problem, and did not grow well, so were axed. The last remaining female appeared totally healthy and this whole report is based on that one female.

If the phenotypic variations are similar to this one, I would say DO NOT top or FIM this strain. This plant is not a high yielder and would be better grown in a single main cola style. I ended up with a bunch of nice and beautiful, but thin colas. Very dense though!

This pheno had nice bud-leaf growth very tight and crystal-covered. It was the best smelling plant in the garden (until day 35 or so when my Afghani Special started to compete with its almost pure-lemon scent).

Finish time is pretty good. I did mine in 45 days with a variable flowering photoperiod which started at 11.5/12.5 for the first 30 days, dropped to 11/13, then to 10/14.

The stone is very creeper; lasts about 3-4 hours. Nothing special, but good enough (i.e. gets you stoned). Mostly body/emotional high with just a little mental effect. I was able to go to sleep on it pretty well.

Just based on my experience with this one plant, I don't intend to grow it again. It may make a good SOG strain due to its short flower time, but otherwise the yield isn't impressive enough for my tastes; there are better uses for the space...still, it's an enjoyable connoisseur strain because of its obvious chocolate-like smell & taste. It has good bag appeal too.

The attached pic is day 14 flowering (didn't get any other pics because I don't own my own digi-camera).

HDF is 50% Sativa 50% Indica. The heritage is Killin Garberville x Mendocino Hash Plant x Seattle Big Bud.

I bought HDF about a year ago from Gypsy. I had 100% germination and ended up with 7 females out of 10 seeds. 5 females looked 50/50 and finished in 8 weeks and 2 looked like 70% Sativa or more and finished in 12 weeks. The yields ranged from 3 to 6 ounces. I kept 2 of the heaviest yielding 8-week mothers and posted photos of a bud from each of the lines to show the slight differences.

HDF has a spicy, fruity smell and taste. So don't worry about THSeeds description about the smell. It has a potent cerebral high bordering on psychedelic.

HDF is my "Holy Grail" because I grow for yield. So my quest has been to find the most potent, highest yielding, SOG strain with a Sativa high and finish in 8 weeks. Believe me this wasn't an easy quest because most of the high yielding SOG strains are mostly Indica and have a lethargic high. The only time I like to smoke Indicas in late evenings.

Another thing I love about HDF, she is a joy to trim. I hate strains that require tons of trimming.

I've grown most of the well known high yielders like Chronic, Ice, Big Bud, Big Skunk, M-39, Shark Shock and so on but HDF wins hands down as the best. Commercial growers would be wise to grow HDF to give customers a better high and still get top yields.

a sweet taste or smell compared to the other fruity sweet smelling strains I have tried. I also give the high a good rating. It may not look so potent but it was very smooth and had a nice kick. Not too couchlock but it was well worth it. I had no complaint from the samples I gave away only good compliments. Ease to grow. It took care of itself all the way til its last 2 weeks in flower. Then that's where I had mold problems but I get mold problems with almost all types of strains cuz of my outdoor conditions. I would greatly support this strain for its big heavy thick buds and ease of grow.

I read some posts about this strain saying it's the "holy grail" for me it's the worst strain I grew. I'm sure of one thing, I wont grow it again.

Out of ten seeds I kept 4 females and none were very potent. One of the four tasted ok but still the worst strain in my garden which isn't full of top quality strains (Northern Lights, BubbleGum, Super Skunk, White Widow, Big Bud). I haven't tried many mostly sativa strains but for example C99 is a million times better than HDF in my honest opinion.

I grew out 3 seeds, 3 females. 1 never made it while 2 performed well and grew like champs. The bud outdoors is a mission to say the least, massive buds, massive mold. The buds were incredibly thick but no light got to the core so it all rotted. I saved major amounts but lost major amounts. From 2 plants I yielded close on 500g with another 150g of molded herb to process later.

The smell was very intense while drying and made myself and the wife quite sick. Very crystalized, compact herb with a slight fruity smell more on the off fruit side. Difficult to explain the smell. The high is pretty standard, when the herb is smoked at the right time it can be a very enjoyable heady smoke. I find it can't cut through a tolerance though.

Grow more for yield indoors I'd say. Outdoors the yield isn't as impressive. I'd give this one a better rating indoors where actual plant size isn't a factor. I found outdoors it was taller than all the plants and became top-heavy. For those wanting the good all-American Indica this one is a good smoke and a good yield.

Received clones from 3 different females from original breeder's pack. They grew quickly in veg and were flowered after only 10-14 days.

Flower onset was a little on the slow side but once it started, the plants just kept packing on the buds. This was the highest yielder I have had in my garden to date. Smell was very nondescript and minimal throughout most of the plants life.

They finally started to develop some smell in the last week or 2 of flowering. The smell was pleasant on some, one had an exceptional orange soda like smell. However, it was not nearly strong enough for me. Bag appeal is good too, the buds are dense and very crystallized, and the high is above average with a slight sativa component.

I let them go 60-67 days although they probably could have been taken slightly earlier. This is an excellent commercial strain if that's what you're looking for, but for my head stash I'm looking for something with a stronger smell and taste. Not to say it isn't excellent marijuana, I'll probably grow it a couple more times before I make my final judgement.

Resin, resin, resin, that is the goal here. We crossed our best hash producers together, and guess what it made .... a resin encrusted plant, that makes great hash, with very dense buds, thick and slow burning. This plant does surprisingly well outdoors, even finishing in the rough outdoors of Holland (mid oct.) With it's short wide structure be sure to clip lowest branches off, to help the plant focus it's energy on the main buds. Kal-x hash took 3 place in the 1995 Cannabis Cup.

This report on Mendicino Madness is on growing this outdoor strain indoors. These plants were a last minute replacement for some failures and my outdoor MM grow didn't pan out. I was reluctant to grow MM in my SCROG setup. I also grew it next to an A11 and Bogbubble in soil. The 2 MM females covered an area on approx. 1.5 sq.ft. About 1/2 of my garden space. The female was chosen for her fast growth and branching. I don't have the space for numerous plants so I have to pick the #1 overall plant. This is a very easy strain to grow. It still managed to maintain its internodal spacing and was easy to train. After 12/12 the growth took off. I have NEVER had a strain flower so quickly. My Bog-Bubble takes off in flowering, but this smokes it. The stretch lasted 16 days and was not too extreme. The buds grew 6" above the screen and I had to tie them down. However each one had numerous budsites. Another surprise was the trich coverage. This is also the most resinous strain I have grown yet. This plant continued to impress me. It's very low odor and early samples lacked the taste I prefer, but the high was very nice. I wanted to wait and harvest at D50, but it look finished to me at D48. I harvested at D48 (look at the pics!) and enjoyed manicureing. High calyx to leaf ratio, sticky to the max. The taste improved, like spicy hash. IT WILL EXPAND and CHOKE you if you inhale too much. The high is not for working. You are too stoned. Nice head buzz w/o couchlock. I also began cutting a cola a day beginning on D37 to smoke so I probably decreased my overall yield by at least 10 grams dry. Yield was 304g wet / 60g Dry. Total yield for 2 plants in 1.5 sq. ft 70g. This is my FASTEST STRAIN. My 2nd HIGHEST YIELDING, and MOST SUPRISING strain. I never expected these results. I will definately grow this outside!!!!

This pheno is my favorite strain as it stands. Two seeds germed both fem. This MK was kept as a mum and subsequently vegged for around 6 months. 15l soil pot, bio bizz allmix, House and Garden feed scheme with budxl and top shooter.

Plant originally placed with four others under 600w. But after 5 weeks or so got moved to its own 600w with a small Rhino plant.

If smell is an issue for you then this is not the strain to grow. It gets through carbons and even ozone. The smell is unmistakable, very skunky with massive lemony spicey scent if plant is brushed. I came home one day to smell my garden at the local store 500 yards from my house. It was the mk i could smell clearly over the 3 other strains including Sage n Sour.

She was around 4ft when 12/12 induced and she finished at 71 days at just over 5ft. So not too much stretch. The buds really start to pump out resin from around 21 days and doesnt stop. Around 50 days the buds double in size to form huge donkey dick buds.

The coloration from the accapulco gold in g13 and the skunk (the male used in the cross g13xskunk) really came through, yellow leafs from early on and beautiful golden buds when ripe.

Drying took a little over 2 weeks at 22deg 55% humidity. First precure smoke had me on the floor in fits of hysterics over nothing. I wasn't watching tv, and i was on my own. The smoke is smooth, and on the inhale you get spice and skunk, the exhale is even smoother leaving a lemony curd taste and coating in your mouth. With cure this smell only gets stronger. This really can not be contained, both the dry bud and the smoke. She yielded a little under 5oz. of prime smoke.

fx, well this is serious. The other mk phen, the oger phen doesn't come close. Looks good, taste good if not better than this pheno but this wipes the floor (or should i say ceiling, no i mean floor) with everything i've smoked and grown. She comes in hard and fast within a couple of tokes. The sweat on forehead builds up and then bam, your down for the count. The great thing is even after 3 weeks of smoking this all to my self after a month cure i still had no immunity. The last q i smoked in a day and felt so stoned the next morning i could still hardly move. I nearly whited out for the first time, and several seasoned friends did. Great.

From experience and research with mk it looks as this pheno is a rare one in a million find. Unfortunately i have no genetics left from this plant, spider loved her. Very old school accapulco gold taste with awesome power.

I cracked four of these seeds and planted them in BioBizz all mix.The rate at which these babies grow is unreal,very fast, with thick stems and beautiful holly green leaves.They had reached a height of twelve inches in 3 weeks from germination, at this point they were transfered into ten litre pots,sexed, and cuttings were taken( they rooted quite easily).i only ended up with 1 female, so this report is based on her.

I feed my plants every 3 days or so with a combination of bio bizz grow,bloom and topmax, and these babies loved it!!

The yield off of these plants is unreal, i havested mine after 60 days,if i had left them another ten days i would have ended up with more....wait the extra days!!

On to the taste and buzz,when you light one of these babies up you will first be hit with quite a sweet taste that slips in to a sort of hazey/piney flavor,the taste lasted all the way through the joint.

On to the buzz which i've gotta say is one of my faves.....

It starts off with a really euphoric feeling that would make anybody feel happy, then that melts in to that classic indica stone,it's quite strong,not for the inexperienced smoker,it is defantely not daytime go to work pot, so be warned the buzz last for ages.....this is real connaisseur pot which should not be past up if you get the chance.

The smell is candy like. When I open the jars it smells like that old fashioned pez candy. I love to open the jars and inhale deeply. Not a sour smell in the jar. Think sweet pez candy.

They feel sticky and for the most part tight. It takes some work with the grinder to break up this bud. But you are rewarded with a slow burn that is quite even and like I said smooth.

Ok Ok The High!!! The high is one of the most cerebral Sativa highs on the market today. I mean that this is a cross between a California Sativa and an Afgani. But there is no hint of it. It's a Sativa high all the way. It's cerebral without the edginess. Great for driving and blasting the music. Great for watching TV. You get tunnelvision and thought provoking. You always put yourself in place of the hero. So many things go thru your mind. You can operate wake and bake style but you always know how f*ck up you are. And watch your words dont slur them, speak up ect. This strain has it all. When you smoke a joint you don't know what kind of trip your going to go on. But you just sit back and enjoy the experience. It's top shelf shit. And holds its head down to NO strain. For it has power taste and smell, not to mention looks.

Ok here we go....

I started only four of these seeds, which cracked open within 24 hours.

These were planted in to rockwall cubes which had been soaked in Formulex and placed under a small flouresent in a propagator. After they had shown signs of growth and the tap root had shown through the bottom of the cube they were placed in 1ltr pots filled with AllMix and transfered under the 250 watt HPS. All four plants grew strong and fast and showed to be very uniform, within two weeks i had to repot again this time in to 12ltr pots which was the final transfer. Once they had reached a height of 18in all had shown sex and i was pleased to see that i had two of each.

At this point cuttings were taken (which rooted quite easily), and the two females placed in to flower. These babies like to stretch, i didnt think they were going to stop but they did at just under 5 ft. They are very robust and seem to take my abuse of supercropping quite well. Smell wasnt too bad quite nice actually except when you stuck your nose right in the bud, it stank of beef and onion pie (honest). I let mine go 65 days but really should have left them longer at least another 10 days.

Ok on to the smoke which i have to say is now one of my faves...

If you smoke this before it's cured it tastes like onions with a haze undertone..leave it to cure you'll be well chuffed it turns to a hazey lemony sagey feast for the tounge with hints of soap.

The buzz is really racey at first then mellows in to a more relaxed creative sort of thing...if you smoke to much (and you can) you will fall asleep no probs but feel like you have been punched in the face the next morning

September, 2004

I have grown this strain out in both soil and hydro and thoroughly enjoyed both. This is the most trichome covered strain that I have ever grown out. At two weeks into flower the buds are glistening with crystals and by the time she is ready for harvest, it looks like she's been through a snowstorm. During flower she emits a very sweet, candy-like odor which is replaced with more of a rich exotic spicy smell once she is cured. This strain was not a heavy yielder for me at all, but what she lacked in quantity she more then made up with quality. Not the best plant for a commercial grow. For a head stash I couldn't ask for more. The high perfectly balanced in every way. A couple tokes provides a very nice uplifting head high but a few more tokes and the body buzz fills in nicely. This is a very social smoke. Not in any way too racey or paranoia inducing. Just a smooth ride of euphoric bliss. Growing her was an absolute breeze. She responds very well to topping and clones very easily as well. She was not an extremely heavy feeder and I did burn up her tips a little in hydro using full strength PBP bloom. I did not find this strain to be very good for SOG do to her tendencies to bush out tremendously. SAGE will have a place in my garden for a very long time.

I double potted to a 3 gallon container waited 2 weeks then flowered...This strain didnt triple up like most sativas it kept the squatty indica stature...Im on Day 31 and they are fattig up...Im switcing from my reg bloom tea mix..To a Special Guano Kalong tea..for weeks 5-6....For taste..It works wonders...The medicine came out very kind.. Grown hydroponically in clay pebbles with canna vega/flores. plants grew somewhat erratically with many branches and lots of fluffy fat buds (like candy floss!). I made the mistake of pruning the main top shoots back to promote bushy growth; which the pinky didn't react well to - so DON'T cut those babies back is my advice - let them grow the way god intended.

"This report is on the Hogs Breath pheno of T.H.Seeds the Hog"

Well here she is, the shining star of a 10 pack of HOG seeds from THSeeds. She was a 6" seedling (8" before cloned) when put in to bud. She was leaning more towards the Kush side of her gene pool (HOG = Hindu Kush X Afghani). She took about 7-10 days to show her sex and finished in 60 days at a height of 18"-20", and yielded about 1 1/4 oz (dried)of stinky, pungent, funky smelling crystalized buds. The smell reminds me of smelly armpits mixed with really bad 3 day old garlic breath with a hint of ginger. Guess that's why it's called hogs breath.

For coming from under a 250w HPS I was quite impressed with the size of the buds and the yield. Next time will be under a 400w HPS.

Time for a smoke test...

Took some fresh hits yesterday at 6am. 1st hit went down smooth but soon expanded. The taste was similar to the smell but much more enjoyable. The smell almost makes you turn your head but the taste has you licking your lips. I felt a hint of a buzz after the first hit so I took another. 2nd hit was much like the first but I took a bigger hit so it really choked me. Felt the buzz coming on strong so I quickly took a 3rd. I should have stoped at 2 but you know how it goes... Anyways the buzz is great! It starts off as a heady high and spacey and I had wonderful conversations with myself the entire ride to work, and found myself in a great mood for most of the day. The spacey feeling left after about 3 hours and was replaced with a slight couch-lock feeling. I wasn't sure if I wanted to take a nap or go eat tacos. The tacos won; lunch was GREAT!! The tacos were awesome, guacamole was fresh and the cervesas were cold. A fantastic way to end a wake-n-bake.

This report is on the legendary Hogsbreath pheno of T.H.Seeds Hog.

Hogsbreath is a legendary strain from Tennessee. Its Hindu Kush x Afghani and it was the Cannabis Cup Winner for Best Indica 2002.

The potency and yield of this strain is outstanding, I can easily see why it won the cup. It is the most potent Indica I have ever smoked and it is the all time favorite with everyone around here. I have grown many Indicas and none of them matched the potency of Hog. I recently grown T.H.Seeds MK-Ultra, the 2003 cup winner and I felt it was good but not as couchlock as Hog. Other strains I have grown like G-13 x Hash Plant, Sensi Star, Afghani, Hindu Kush, Lifesaver and many others did not match the potency of Hog. That is why I say it is outstanding.

The yield in SOG is outstanding, I get 1.8 grams per watt with it. I flower clones at 10 inches and they finish around 30 inches. I flower the clones at four per square foot and yield 5 ounces. It is the best yielding Indica I have come across so far. SOG growers will be floored with the yields.

The bad news is this strain is unstable. So I recommend growers to grow out no less then a pack of seeds to make sure you get the Hogsbreath pheno. The other phenos are good but not as good as the Hogsbreath pheno. It is well worth the effort to get this pheno.

The smoke taste like hash and the high is of narcotic quality, heavy and lethargic. The buds release and foul bad breath odor when you are cutting into them. I have many friends that love foul smelling strains and they go nuts over Hog. In fact they go crazy when I run out of it, so I would call it "green crack". This strain is the "holy grail" for Indica lovers and commercial SOG growers alike.

I highly recommend this strain and tip my hat to Adam and the T.H.Seeds crew for bringing such an outstanding strain to market.

Keep it green.

'Ducksfoot' from Wallyduck

- 'Ducksfoot'

Breeders report on Ducksfoot.

Plant structure:

Up to 8 ft in height and can be as wide, average around 6 ft. Very large, bushy webbed leaved plant . . . tends to like to spread with training to produce masses of large tight and very heavy, smelly buds. Buds have been as large as my leg... The Ducksfoot seems to be a very hardy plant. It begins to show its webbed traits on the second set of leaves, that come out quite wedged shaped and usually single bladed. The following leaf is the typical 3 fingered Ducksfoot leaf. Successive leaves will continue up to seven apparent points, and can be very large, dinner plate size. The leaves progressively lessen in points as the plant ripens as with other varieties.

Yield:

I have yielded huge amounts from my ducks, up to and over 2 pounds, due to its quick growth it is able to support hundreds of fat buds.

Maturing times:

I am still working on what sort of time it matures in climates different to mine; in my climate it is planted anywhere between October and December, and is harvested late March to mid April.

I have seen a few plants grown in the U.K. that veged well, but I don't believe the ripening time was long enough to produce the same thing I get here, he said it was still going into November. Climates similar to Australia have had no problems at all, as far down as Perth in western oz...

Indoors:

I have grown duck indoors a few times, they veged very well, but the buds were wispy and airy and didn't seem worth the trouble. We had 2 plants that were successful out of 20 tested, the successful ones were very good, but I haven't seen another suited one since and would recommend that it is not grown indoors, after all why hide a plant that has its own camouflage specially suited for the outdoors?..

Bud size and form:

Some of the fattest and weightiest buds I've come across, green in colour... Bud formation can vary a little . . . have had them up to 4 inches in diameter and very solid, sometimes causing problems here with mould due to that fact...

Uniformity:

All plants are webbed, but some variations can occur in bud formation, i.e. , some more looser Sativa type buds, and others will resemble the tighter Indica formation... All plants have a similar smell and taste, a little stronger in some than others. It has not bothered me to have some variation in the plants, but will breed out the Sativa-looking ones and stick to the tighter fatter buds in the near future. It is nice to see all the characteristics though and all plants have performed very well in my location.

Smell and taste:

The duck has a very strong smell, even when quite young and a mature bush can be smelled from many meters away, kind of lingers in the air... Fresh buds smell very strong and will stink your house out, when dry and cured it has a very pleasant, to strong odors; a sweet hashy, spicy smell. The taste is the same as the smell, lingers on the palate for a long time afterwards and is very sweet and refreshing.

Stone:

Nice smooth stone, very steady up and relaxing and happy, very little couch lock, but still quite the powerful smoke, happy weed would describe it perfectly...

My opinion:

I really love growing the duck, it's a really fun plant to grow and I always have some growing. The taste is just amazing and the stone brightens my day, even if it starts a little glum. I have bred many generations of this wonderful plant, and am really taken by its unique structure, growth pattern and fantastic smell...

Potential:

The duck has shown a huge potential in the area of hybridization, its vigor is added to the cross very well, as well as the smell. The hybrids have been of good size, up to average of 1 pound, with huge heads, some up to 5 inches in diameter and tight; some buds were so robust they looked as though they were growing inside out... The recent addition of a webbed Indica to my seed collection may realize some fantastic potential with webbed plants... Spare a thought for the many Ducksfoot plants that gave their lives to bring you this report.

This Ducksfoot is the easiest strain I have ever grown outdoors. The plant just takes off and doesn't require much effort from the grower. I topped mine 5 times and the stem to the top was still 8' long when finished. I planted the Duck straight into the earth with no goodies at all in the soil and she still exploded during veg. This plant is extremely stealth looking the entire grow until flowering begins and then she takes the shape of the normal flowering ganja plant. The smell is not stealth. Even in veg this plant stank up my house and surrounding yard. I had to harvest early because some roofers next door noticed the smell then saw her and I harvested about a month premature for security reasons. The taste is better than any strain I've had. It's so sweet and fruity with a hint of hash. This is a great daytime high. The Duck makes you very up and a joy to laugh with friends. Good stuff! I ended up with one female and she was everything Wallyduck made her out to be. I recommend this to anyone who wants to grow outdoors. I gave her an 8 for yield but I'm sure if she went the distance it would have been a 10.

Started beans outdoors early April, 10 beans produced 5 M & 5 F. 8 were transferred indoors and 2 planted outdoors.

Indoors the plants stayed rather short (under 36") and went for over 4 months without ever really finishing- four plants gave about 3 oz of bud so not the largest yield I've ever seen but the smoke was simply sublime. Very rich, earthy flavor- reminded me of coffee and chocolate- I found my hand reaching for the duckfoot jar over and over when it came time to blaze up. Smoke wise, it reminded me of this very good Mexican pot I used to get many years ago- smoke it all day long, get high as hell and never grow tired of it...lovely stuff.

Outdoors the plant was extremely hardy and easy to grow, surviving all Nature threw her way. However, her branchy growth, slow maturation and late finishing date drastically affected yield. The plant was harvested at the end of October due to weather but she could have easily gone a month or more- pushing harvest back to the end of November or even possibly early December.

I had expected to pull a lb or more off the outdoor plant, as growing conditions were perfect...however the plant grew mostly lumber and little popcorn nugs without putting any effort into growing a massive main cola. Sadly the yield was less than a half oz, not much for so many months' work.

The plants tend to be very branchy and show their tropical sativa heritage- not really suited for indoor use. Outdoors in middle latitudes she may not finish before frost- her ideal location is inside a greenhouse but her stealthy leaves allow her to be grown almost anywhere. Ducksfoot is a tough and hardy plant, able to shrug off even the worst problems and keep on going.

Those webbed leaves do add a lot to the stealth- however, do NOT rely on them to hide this plant completely through flowering! They fall off and the plant reverts to a more sativa appearance once flowering begins...in other words, in veg it's stealthy- in flowering, it looks just like regular cannabis. Prune this plant down hard to minimize excessive branching and useless lumber- otherwise, you might end up with a broom instead of buds.

Even with the drawbacks I experienced, I'd still recommend this strain to anyone looking for something to grow outside. Ducksfoot survived tough conditions that would have killed off weaker cannabis, and thrived. I still feel anyone can grow it, though to grow it as well as wallyduck and have such stunning results you really need to have a tropical climate. I plan on growing this strain again outdoors next year.

I further submit this grow thread for further consideration:

This variety (which was branded 'Double Bubble' at the time) produced varied phenotypes. Out of ten seeds germinated, four were female. As could be expected from an F2, the females were all broadly different in appearance, smell and flowering time. All produced good quality smoke, however one phenotype (2 of the plants) has what could be described as a classic Bubblegum smell and taste- and this smoke was considered to be much stronger than the Super Skunk that is currently available here.

One plant was topped and produced eight 7g buds- the only drawback is that it took 70 days to finish. This was a nice plant to play around with, but those looking for consistency in yield and product should avoid this strain if growing from seed. It should, however, be possible to find a mother with good characteristics from a packet of 16.

A little history - White Skunk is a cross between White Widow and Super Skunk.

Germination - I germinated 5 seeds, all of them popped within 72 hours but one of them stopped growing after the taproot sprouted. 3 females, 2 males, with one male so vigorous I kept it for future breeding.

Vegetative - A fairly easy plant to grow, doesn't ask for anything special, other than wanting less N than most strains. I found myself leveling off at 125ppm of N throughout veg. All 3 females were very uniform and grew like triplets. After 4 weeks of veg they all stayed very short and bushy. They were already stinking like a dead skunk at this point as well, but you had to get right up to the plant to smell it. In addition, all the plants (including males) showed their sex at the end of 3 weeks veg.

Flowering - Once I went to 12/12 it took about 2 days for the females to realize it was time to start flowering. From there on out they just kept packing on weight until harvesting them at 63 days. By then the smell was pretty bad, no sweetness just rotting meat. Again, not over powering, you had to get right up to the plant to smell it. Rubbing the plant was another story and resulted the room stinking and the smell of it on you until you washed your hands.

Phenos - I know there's 2 phenos, but I only ended up with the WW pheno, which I'm sure is the better of the two.

Yield - Each plant gave me around 3oz

Smoke Report - After 2 weeks drying and 3 weeks curing I give them a try. All 3 were identical in their stone, mostly couch lock with a little in the head as you first start feeling the high. A great all around medical strain which my wife uses most when she wants something that will allow her to function socially, and still have some pain relief. The taste was pretty bland... nothing special there cept a hint of sweetness. The smell cured to a nice skunk aroma.

Very easy, very strong, excellent yield. I grew using an ebb and flow with GH nutes 3 part. This was the second generation and the yield was fantastic, I really didn't expect 216 grams per plant. Re-veg went long at 45 days and the plants went tall, but I added 65 watt lower cool light to increase lower yield. Worked like a charm. I use co2 enrichment by making beer outside room air intake, that also helped a great deal. Humidity is kept low at about 50% and the temp is kept at 75 degrees in light and 50-60 degrees in dark.

Grower Report

December, 2002

It's after several grows on the widows that I felt ready to submit this report.

All the widows seem to be quite sensitive to bad treatments. I killed a first batch of 8 seeds due to heat, over-watering and over-ferting. After I tweaked my cab and habits to what it's now, things went much better. The second batch of seeds grew out nice healthy plants with large and dark leaves. they all had very thick trunks. When cloned, I noticed (along with other fella growers) they rooted slowly. They simply take 5 more days to root properly, as compared to 5 other strains here.

I noticed two phenos:

WW#1 is more leafy when flowering, pistils are fat and white, leaves grow near the bud and twist on themselves at the end of flowering. Pistils turn orange quite suddenly, but then 10 more days are required before harvest (trichomes check). This pheno can turn slightly purple if cold temps are provided during ripening. It's the most tasty pheno, I got two females of this kind, but lost one (WW#2). It's the earliest too (55 days).

WW#3 is quite strange, the leaves are small and soft (very soft to the touch). It's a very short plant. when flowering, it reveals itself with round Sativaish colas. Pistils are creamy and don't turn color much.

Taste is not as strong as #1 or #2. It finishes around day 62. For all those reasons, I won't keep it.

Those plants are not top yielders. We're going to experiment on other systems, but I don't think you can grow it for yield. Nor for ease. So what ? It's potent, and tasty... oh so potent and tasty !

Smoke report:

Both phenos are tasty, but the first one is stronger in taste, as well as in potency I guess. Both are a very heady smoke, extremely tonifying and socializing. I love it. No other of my strains can give me energy like that. Potent, it's potent !!!

It's a soft smoke that won't hurt you too bad, even if smoked early ; a really "chic" smoke.

A male got selected and started a F2 line, along with a hybrid line with superskunks. I can say WW pollen is very fertile and germination consecutive rates were near 100%. The offspring is vigorous.

All have good sugar but only 2 were real keepers(high yielders w\super sugar and the rest of the best).Pretty low percentage but I guess thats how it is when 2 hybrids are crossed,I got about 10 different variations. There is 2 pictures of one at 48 days and done(small one).Other pic of one is 48 days and still exploding,Other pics at 57days.Most leaned towards sativa side. Tolerant of high temps and nutes but some not of overwatering,most cloned easily. Great strain for the money, if you have time to pick the best ones. some are very light and wispy and long to finish. Some of the best sugar I`ve seen.Worthy of centerfold picture, truly beautiful! This was my last grow before I had to move, but I made female seeds for some day when I need them, for now I still enjoy the fruits of my labor. None was sold, if it was I would just be paying for it now!

I picked up these seeds for 80 bucks at...Hidden Jungle (in Toronto) and decided to split them with a friend. Seeds all germed in 3-5 days using paper towel method. Next I set em up under some floros, which was their home for the next 1 1/2 months until I could afford a 430w HPS (son agro) to finish 'em up. 20 days later I transplanted em in 3-gallon pots. Growth under the 80 watts of floros was quite slow...but when I got the HPS in there they jump started full throttle. I veged for about 2 months and flowered em at about 1.5 feet, using a combo of all-purpose Miracle Grow, Epsom salts, fish emulsions, and bat guano tea for the whole thing. After 65 days they were ripe as a fiddle. The tallest finished about 3 feet and the shortest about 2. There were 4 females out of the bunch (nice odds) and they all yielded roughly the same...just over an ounce each. They looked and smelt awesome. For sure the best weed I've seen thus far. I have to say it felt wicked having the best looking best tasting smelliest and most potent weed on my block or you could probably say a radius of 20 blocks. So all in all I would recommend the WW F2 to someone looking fore some high quality easy growing buds that are more for show than dough. Although you could charge an arm and a leg for this stuff if grown to its full potential, which I'm sure in my case, was not.

First---don't overfeed---they almost seemed to hate any nutes at all!

I get two phenos from this strain.

1) A tall with minimal branching, thick stemmed, giving purple buds, that's right purple! In addition, it only comes from this tall pheno. The purple buds from the side branches are as wide as a 50-cent piece, with many many beautiful brown trichome encrusted hairs...The buds are as deep a purple as you can get. These buds produce a very fair amount of trichomes but not like the shorter pheno-----The main cola is a wide as, well a donkeys dick! (A well hung donkey to say the least...) The main cola was 18in long, and weighed 52g dry. With four side branches I accumulated 13g dry, and had to prop side branches to stop from breaking. The smell is that of grape juice, very intense. The smoke is so light and smooth its like eating yogurt!

The high is very cool and refreshing, not couch-lock, but very heady.

2) A short squat plant that gives amazing yields and amazing looks... I can't say enough about this pheno, as my associates fall victim to its wrath. It formed one main cola and many many side branches, which impressed me with their yield...The hairs are dark dark orange with trichomes exploding from the plant and swollen unpollinated calyxes waiting to burst with ooey gooey goodness. The main cola was 14 in long and weighed 66g dry. With eight side branches weighing in at 30g dry, I got 96g dry total!

Overall, this strain has been added to my forever collection, I won't be dropping this one anytime soon, and plan to cross it with many strains!

January,

Out of 10 seeds, all popped and 6 were female. Growth rates from seed were astounding, utterly turbocharged in veg. Fan leaves of enormous size. Purple hues began showing on one female 2-3 weeks into flower. She turned out to be the star of the show, and was the keeper for cloning and lived until now. Especially nute sens during veg, but would take it rather heavy in flower. Coloring under a 60x100 microscope showed purple almost black trichs when ripened a full 10-11 weeks. This strain performed equally well in a variety of mediums, soil*bio-buckets*areo*dwc. Rooting isn't super easy, as this strain needs to be covered immediately after cut, and doesn't like nutes until FULLY rooted. Cloning rates can be high for the experienced grower, but she can be finicky.

This was a clone from a respected OG member (Snapdragon) so I can be sure the seeds used to find this pheno of Pure Light came directly from World Wide Seeds. This is my second plant from WWS and was equally a pleasure to grow as the first. The veg time on this plant is very fast...as put by my good buddy, SD...turbo charged in veg! Not sensitive to nutes from my experiences.

The odor is strong even 2 weeks into flower and out of control during middle-late flower. The colors while budding range from purple to pink w/ many different shades of the two. When dried the buds appear 50% green, 50% purple. For a purple strain she is more potent than expected. There's still a few moms floating around so hopefully she'll be in the line up for years to come....very pretty plant, one of the most beautiful I've seen. Short veg time will still offer up respectable yields. As with any harvest curing her brings out her truly original characteristics sought out by any connoisseur of MJ.

I am now working on my second grow of WWS Skunk Star. These are feminized seeds. Grew 5 plants on my first grow and got 1 hermie, 4 females.

Overall, Skunk Star is a rather easy plant to grow. They will definitely take a lot of abuse and keep on ticking. This was my first grow and I made many, many mistakes. Even with the numerous mistakes, still yielded almost 180 grams from the 4 females. The pictures are from my current grow.

As far as the smoke goes, its very smooth if you give it plenty of time to dry and cure. The high can definitely be coma-like under the right circumstances. If I am the least bit tired, the smoke puts me right to sleep. I also made hash oil out of the leaves. I didn't weigh how much oil I got but I know I didn't get very much. Probably around 3 grams. I used to drip a little over a packed bowl and the high was often devastating.

I recommend Skunk Star, but I don't think I'd ever buy the feminised seeds.

Sept 19, 2003: On my second grow I got another hermie. That's 2/10 or 20%.

Nice strain! First grow for me.

SEEDLING:

All seeds but one successfully germinated using damp paper towel method. Six seeds rooted and began to grow. Started in small Jiffy cups for about a week. Some noticeable stretching that was my fault, won't happen again. I was using my 430W HPS at this stage which would cause severe drying and potential burning if too close and would cause severe stretching if moved further away. I switched to 180W worth of flouros cool tubes for this stage. Different phenotypes already exhibiting respective behaviors in growth.

VEG:

Transferred into 2 gallon buckets leaving the jiffy cups around them, which looking back I think probably stunted some initial root growth in the veg stage. Still using the flouros for all of the veg stage. Used Soil Mix(30%Worm Castings,30%Perlite,40%Fox Farm). Lined walls of room with Mylar. Begin to fertilize with Earth Juice Grow formula once a week and used regular water or a worm casting tea mix for all other waterings. Growth began to pick up after about two weeks and they started to take off. After about 3 nodes were grown, I clipped 4 out of 5 plants using the FIM method. (Keep in mind that they started growing at slightly different rates so not all clippings took place at the same time). Sat back for a while and watered with same schedule and watched them grow. Clipped plants differently on second clip about 4 weeks into veg.

Clipped some more than others. Will discuss results of that later. Transplanted into larger 5 gal buckets at about week 5 of veg. This is where I will introduce the two different flowering cases.

Flower 1:

Plant 1 and 4 started flowering at 6 weeks into veg in separate mylar lined closet under 430W HPS. These two were definitely the prize stars. They flourished in the closet and quickly filled out and nearly doubled in size within 2 weeks. Determined to be fully female at this point.

Flower 2:

Plant 2,3,5 and 6 were vegged for 1.5 more weeks under flouros then Plant 1 and 4 were brought out and all plants are under the 430W HPS and move on into the flowering stage...

FLOWER:

All plants begin to take off under the HPS and in their nice roomy buckets. Plants quickly double and more in size and exhibit flowering characteristics. Bought feminized seeds for extra money, and discovered our one male plant at this point. Plant two is quicly determined as male and removed, the rest are positively female. Began a watering schedule alternating watering between clean water, Earth Juice Bloom, and Guano tea at flowering point. Again a sit back and wait and watch the magic. Small buds start to grow all over and the plants consistently grow taller and fatter. Forced to move entire grow from a big room to a much smaller bathroom, which was lined with mylar as well, and ended up being a satisfactory grow area, but it was really hard to get to the plants in the back for maintenance. Lots of tying up of branches towards later weeks in flower.(Used dental floss for tying, worked great, try it). Here is a plant breakdown:

-P1: Clipped the most times during veg with FIM. Grew very fat, not so tall suggested more indica. Buds ended up very fat and sticky. Tastes berryish and smells and looks magnificent. Very heady high. Flowered for 13 weeks. Lower growth contributed highly to the end result of 3.75 oz from this plant.

-P2: Male...

-P3: Slow grower. Clipped twice. Very short, never exceeded 2 ft. Very sweet heavy taste. Very heady high. Although small and slow, but quality was good. Flowered for 8 weeks. Yielded 1.5oz.

-P4: Tallest, fastest growing plant. 6'5" in height(including bucket). Several large lower branches grew very fat buds, huge plant. Tastes the sweetest. Again, very heady high.(What I planned for). Flowered for 11 weeks. Yielded 3.65oz.

-P5: Not the biggest plant, but definitely the most chronic. The buds on this plant were completely covered at every edge with sweet gooey thc crystals. Very high quality. Stong skunky smell and taste, and a mind-blowing cerebral high. Damn I love this one. Had odd alternating growth up the stalk which ended up being an advantage for the conditions. Flowered for 11 weeks. Yielded 1.92oz.

-P6: Almost seemed to be a different strain. Grew very dense buds, and leaves looked different in shape and color. Just as crystallly as the rest of the dankness. Sweet smell and taste. Heady high. Flowered for 13 weeks. Yielded 3.14oz.

I am thoroughly pleased with every aspect of the finished product from each plant. Each bud looked and smelled somewhat different from each plant, but all possess all the desirable qualities in bud, look great, smells great, and get you blazed for hours. All bud was thoroughly dried and cured for a month before tasting. I hope I didn't miss anything, and I hope this helps someone. I intend to grow again in the future, but not anytime soon. Thanks for checking this out.

'White Gold' from World Wide Seeds

- 'White Gold'

Bred out of the White Widow family, White Gold is an indica/sativa mix that produces buds totally frosted with THC. Its ancestors have a reputation unsurpassed in growing. White Gold is a mainly indoor variety but will work in the greenhouse or even outdoors. Finishing time is around 7 weeks on this one, so you won't have to wait too long to experience the quality, long lasting cerebral high it gives. White Gold is definetly for the connoisseur.

Another great strain from WWS. Although bred from the Widow family, I was able to harvest in 54 days. Very pretty plants, taking on the trich production of the Widow family. Whatever indica this was crossed with, was a very nice one. Helped with yield, mixing a nice indica with their Widow.

Not a bad yield, close to 1 1/2 oz from each plant.

Great expansion, great high. Puts you in the mind set to do anything.

Awesome for a headache I've found, and will drive your appetite to the nearest buffet.

4 of 6 seeds revealed females. All were good enough to take cuttings, for very potent future strains!!!!

Be careful with nute feeding, I found them to be somewhat picky in veg, but in flower, they love all the P-K they could get their little roots on.

You really need to check this one out. Our breeders have surpassed themselves with this high quality, excellent yielding, full on commercial skunk. It's an absolute must for the serious grower. Do you like the Chronic? Dig the Northern Lights?..... Well this one's for you. Expect full thick buds oozing with THC. The XXXtra Skunk is a compact indoor variety that finishes in around 8 weeks, it produces a wonderful skunky odour and as varieties of marijuana seeds go, its a real winner. An extremely stable skunk has been crossed with a super yielding new variety to produce skunk seeds that break new ground.

Censorship Warning: The XXXtra Skunk is seriously hardcore, only for the headstrong.

Grower Report

September, 2004

This was first attempt to grow. I bought a pack of FemenizedXXXtraSkunks from World Wide Seeds. Seeing it was my first time germinating I only sprouted 3. All germinated but I nute burned two and was left with one..yes one. I figured Id learn about veg'n a plant and hope for a female. My one femenized sees was female. I will update or add report when I pop the other seven, but looks good so far. Sexing was eary about 3 weeks in I saw female traits. I veg'd for 49 days but I probably could have shaved some time off...I was very slow about moving the plant near MH. I also didnt run 24 hour lighting because I read it would possibly increase hermaphodite chances...not sure if thats the case. So Im guess at least a week could have been deducted from my veg time.

Yield was just shy of 4oz while tossing over 1/4oz of tiny buds into bronwnie oil. Odor was heavy during flower but easy to contain with good ventilation. This plant was a bush as you can see. I flowered her at ~13-14 inches and she was ~35 when finished. Close to 4ft wide. I harvested with mostly cloudy trichs/about 20% amber. Couch lock type high, not very up. I only 'flushed' for 5 days but eased off on nutes late flower. Wonderful n smooth going down and long skunky aftertaste. As I said, Couchy not heady. Appetite after smoking is out of control! For some, the pics will tell the story maybe a bit better than I. You cant go wrong if you love skunks...your getting what your looking for here. Doesnt quite hit you like the deez..lol...but a solid skunk to say the least.

I apologize for no dried bud shots. Upon starting my 2nd grow and wanting to take pics of it as well as my skunk..the digi shit the bed. I was using my cell for about 2 weeks for pics and never got pics of the buds after cure. Can provide nice shots of her in flower and harvest buds. Ill get some nice dried macros up next round with XXXtraSkunk.
